To celebrate Sewanee's 23rd year as a part of Tree City USA, children from the Sewanee Children's Center joined with forestry and geology seniors (from left) Andrew Carey, John Mulloy and Jase Brooks in a cheer to encourage a newly planted tree to "Grow, Tree, Grow." The Franklin County Convenience Center, 132 Missouri Ave., accepts all recycling except for glass. This is a new location for the center. To recycle glass, take it to Sewanee's PPS warehouse on Kennerly Avenue.

The Community Action Committee in Sewanee accepts nonperishable food items, cleaning supplies (laundry detergent, cleansers) and paper products such as paper towels and toilet paper. It is located at 258 Lake O'Donnell Rd.;

For prescriptions that are either expired or no longer needed, take them to the Sewanee Police Department for safe disposal.

Blue Monarch, a residential program to help women and children in abusive situations, is in need of different sized sheets, ranging from crib sheets to king size, cleaning supplies and towels. To make a donation call (931) 924-8900.

The Appalachian Women's Guild accepts children's and adult clothing, small household items and non-perishable food items. It is located at 492 Main St., Tracy City.

Bicycles in working condition can be donated to Woody's Bike Shop, 90 Reed's Lane, Sewanee.

The Franklin County Library accepts donations of books, audio books, CDs, DVDs and videos. It is located at 105 S. Porter St., Winchester; 967-3706. Jackson St. #120, Tullahoma; and 2161 Hillsboro Blvd. #5, Manchester. other Internet music sites.

Finally, remember that no one wants things that are broken, dirty or incomplete. If you wouldn't give an item to a friend, think twice before donating it to one of these organizations.

"He was also able to give us feedback and advice on the songs themselves," he said. "Working with him, we were able to get a polished yet somewhat gritty sound comprised of much guitar and harmony layering that we are very proud of. He was inspiring to get to know and to work with throughout the process of recording and mixing."

GODSPEED, FRIENDS To the Editor:

Four years ago I started working part-time helping the Sewanee football team by filming practices and games. My first year, if I recall correctly, there were about 30 freshmen. On Sunday, nine of those gentlemen, now seniors, will be leaving us. [See photo above.]

These outstanding young men persevered, and through their dedication and hard work, they each made a difference in making Sewanee's football program much better.

Šo to Johnny D., Murphy, J.D., J.P. aka "Bootie," Trey, Jase, "Serge," Adian aka"A.D.", Dorsey and Garrett, I wish you Godspeed and good luck. We will miss you, but know that you will go out and make the world a better place. Come back and see us often. YSR!

Moving Ahead—Sewanee's New Sustainability Fellowship Program

It's that time of the year again—collegiate seniors and their parents hosting final graduation parties in the futile hopes of clinging to the fading frivolity of their college days, while professors plow through huge stacks of papers and final exams. In the Office of Environmental Stewardship and Sustainability, we have also been doing our best to get through mounds of work before the end of the school year. And now, we have something to celebrate.

Our office is pleased to announce the official creation of a new Sustainability Fellowship Program. Following on the overwhelming success of the Office of Sustainability's first ever Post-Baccalaureate fellows-Keri Bryan (C'12), Nathan Bourne (C'11) and myself (C'11)—in the coming academic year, this office will expand the fellows program to the undergraduate level.

The new program will have three tiers of fellows: Post-Baccalaureate, Senior Undergraduate and Junior Undergraduate. The Fellows $will be \ expected \ to \ engage \ the \ University \ as \ student \ ambass adors for$ sustainability on campus and in the surrounding communities. They will also be expected to help the University meet its campus sustainability goals as called for in the 2013 Sustainability Master Plan.

The undergraduate fellows will serve critical leadership and service roles, leading admissions tours of the Domain, presenting to local schools, serving on the Domain Stewardship Committee and the Sustainability Steering Committee and organizing and leading sustainability-related service projects. They will also help the office communicate our work by writing blog pieces and articles throughout outlets such as the Messenger, creating newsletters and videos, leading lectures on campus and developing educational pamphlets and materials. Their last role will be to engage in research that makes a meaningful contribution to our understanding of sustainability while also helping us monitor and track our sustainability efforts

As part of the new fellowship program, our office is also happy to announce the three Post-Baccalaureate Fellows for the 2013–14 academic year. Clesi Bennett (C'13) will work full-time for the Office of Environmental Stewardship and Sustainability, tackling energy conservation and retrofit projects. She will be joined by Charlotte Henderson (C'13), who will split her time working on sustainability projects while also being funded by professor Deb McGrath to work on Sewanee's newly established Haiti carbon offsets program. Vincent Leray (C'13) will also join the force, splitting time between our office and being funded by professor Kirk Zigler to study the biodiversity of Sewanee's caves.

I have no doubt that the creation of this fellowship program will continue to help Sewanee produce students who are environmental and sustainability leaders, not only on campus, but around this entire nation. It will also ensure Sewanee's goal of becoming a national leader of environmental studies and sustainability excellence.

Dash of Color Helps Kids

All it takes is a student with a vision—who can rally a troop of volunteers, sustain months of organization and remain enthusiastic throughout the process. St. Andrew's-Sewanee School senior Britni Nunley managed all that to successfully pull off the school's Dash of Color, a 5K run to raise money for art supplies for Vanderbilt Children's Hospital on May 4.

With the help of many classmates, who Britni affectionately named "her staff," the students welcomed 100 runners and raised about $2,000. [See photo on page 17.

Britni's enthusiasm has not worn off even though the event is finished. "We still have shirts for sale if anyone wants to buy them or make donations. All the extra shirts and supplies are going up to the hospital the last week of May." You can contact Britni at <bnunley@sasweb.org>.

The first-place winner of the race was Pratt Paterson, director of advancement at St. Mary's Sewanee.

Sewanee Student, Alumna Earn NSF Fellowships

A 2012 Sewanee graduate and a member of the class of 2013 are the most recent Sewanee graduates to receive National Science Foundation Graduate Research Fellowships, and the university's fifth and sixth graduates to do so in Élizabeth Henry, C'12, and Erin Brahm, C'13, have been awarded the fellowships, which provide opportunities for international research and professional development as well as the freedom to conduct their own research. Henry was a double major in chemistry and classics who is conducting research at Georgia Tech, where she was also awarded a Georgia Tech Presidential Fellowship. She will use this fellowship to support her research in organic and polymer chemistry.

fall. She will pursue inorganic and materials chemistry related to the development of new materials for solar hydrogen generation.

"I think these two awards are a fine testament to the outstanding quality of Sewanee chemistry majors and to the efforts of the faculty in the department to build the best program possible for our majors," said Robert Bachman, chair of the chemistry department.

The NSF Graduate Research Fellowship Program began in 1952; former recipients include 30 Nobel laureates and 440 members of the National Academy of Sciences.

Pre-K and Kindergarten Age Changes for 2013–14

The Tennessee Department of Education would like to make residents aware of a new law signed by Gov. Bill Haslam in April, and its impact on pre-K and kindergarten enrollment birth date requirements for the next two school years. Changes will take effect in the 2013–14 school year. The new law states:

Children must be 4 years of age on or before Aug. 31, 2013, as well as meet other currently defined criteria to enroll in voluntary pre-K in 2013–14.

Children must be 4 years of age on or before Aug. 15, 2014, as well as meet other currently defined criteria to enroll in voluntary pre-K in 2014–15.

The impact of this law on kindergarten enrollment eligibility for the next two years is as follows:

Children enrolled in a Local Education Agency (LEA)-operated pre-K program, a Head Start program, or a state-accredited non-public school pre-K program in the 2012–13 school year who turn 5 between Sept. 1 and Sept. 30, 2013, are grandfathered into kindergarten for the 2013–14 school year.

Children enrolled in an LEA-operated pre-K, a Head Start program, or a stateaccredited non-public school pre-K program in the 2013-14 school year who turn 5 between Aug. 16 and Aug. 31, 2014, are grandfathered into kindergarten for the 2014–15 school year.

Folks at Home Receives 501(c)(3) Status

Folks at Home (F@H) received notice from the IRS on April 29 that it is now classified as a public charity and a tax-exempt organization under section 501(c)(3) of the federal tax code. Contributions to F@H are tax-deductible, as are bequests, transfers of stock or cash gifts.

Folks at Home is a local organization developed for and dedicated to assisting its members in continuing a dignified and comfortable lifestyle in the community through coordination of services they need during elder years. Anyone of any age is invited to participate.

Since 2008, F@H has been a sponsored project of Otey Memorial Parish. The organization continues to grow and flourish, thanks to the support of Otey Parish, the Sewanee Community Chest, the Dodd Endowment, the Dandridge Trust and individuals in the greater Sewanee community.

In 2012, F@H had 52 members ranging in age from 60 to over 90. It provided pro bono services to an additional 25 individuals for monthly or acute services, and this need continues to expand.

More than 80 individuals received hundreds of services from 74 volunteers, F@H director Kathleen O'Donohue, or Frieda Gipson, the F@H assistant. Folks at Home has the equivalent of one full-time employee.

F@H offers an equipment exchange: someone calls or comes by to get a walker, cane or shower chair, or they donate these to F@H as they no longer

It also offers care coordination, including information, referrals and access to services. Here are a few recent needs:

A daughter needed a ramp for her mother, who had just moved in with her. She was referred to vetted vendors and offered use of a portable ramp from F@H.

A member who needs daily in-home care asked F@H to make a daily work schedule for the caregivers who were vetted and interviewed by F@H. After consultation with the client and the workers, a schedule of work shifts for the month was completed.

A son called in need of increased in-home services for his parents; options were discussed and referrals to vetted caregivers were given. A volunteer driver for her next medical appointment was scheduled.

A community volunteer reported that her bimonthly friendly home visits with two F@H households were going well and that she planned to continue this volunteer service.

University students in courses with a Community Engaged Learning component were matched with community members. Ten students were individually matched with a F@H member for more than five friendly home visits over the semester. In addition, eight students completed energy audits and implemented conservation repairs at three homes of F@H members.

With a grant from the Community Fund of the South Cumberland Plateau, Folks at Home hired Susan B. Holmes to work 15 hours a week as the Timebank Coordinator.

'The vision of the South Cumberland Plateau Timebank is to promote cohesive communities across the Plateau, where people of different ages, backgrounds and abilities interact with each other on an equal footing with mutual respect and understanding," Holmes said.

Timebanks also stand out for their revolutionary mathematical equation: One = One. One hour = One time dollar. (Timebanks USA). This holds true whether a member is offering professional legal advice, repairing a kitchen sink or making home visits for companionship. Every member's time is valued equally.

Everyone across the Plateau is invited to become a member of the Timebank. Membership fees are $20 year for individuals, $30 for families and $50 for organizations. So that all community members may become Timebank members, fees may be worked in time dollar hours. For more information contact the Timebank office at 598-0303 or mobile, (423) 280-1480; or email

Quinn Evans, who is a cousin of Will

Now that all the band members are attending different colleges (Blount and Nick Evans are at Davidson, and ginia), they work together via Skype and email to share material and offer feedback to one another. Nick has been in Germany this past semester, but the group has managed to keep working across the continents.

"We even recorded some of the tracks on the album by sending each other the project files for the songs and adding our specific parts in our dorm rooms via our personal recording equipment," Blount said.

With the Internet we find it easy to keep The Culprits going, and we enjoy the challenge of promoting and recording while across the ocean from each other," he said.

The group is gathering in Germany later this month to play a couple of shows in Berlin. It will be the first time they have played at a live venue together since July 2012.

The Culprits' musical escapades began when they were students at St. Andrew's-Sewanee School. Nick and Will, coming from a musical family, began to dabble with a borrowed drum set and a used electric guitar. Zach was invited over and after starting out on guitar, he eventually stole his dad's bass, and The Culprits began.

"We are very grateful for Sewanee," Blount said. "We owe much of our classes at ReConnect Tullahoma inspiration to the town and all of our 'Sewaneesian' supporters."

Blount. Nick and Will are sons of Amy and Jon Evans.

OUTSIDE

by Patrick Dean

University Avenue is already quieter this week. There's no sound from the three fraternity houses within hearing distance of my back porch, and fewer students are strolling down the hill to Julia's or the Blue Chair.

Soon Jack and I won't see as many runners out on the fire lanes and trails. There will be a notable lessening of energy, even when the summer programs are in full swing.

mer programs are in full swing.

Overlaid on the rhythms of the seasons are the rhythms of a college town. This spring I'm feeling appreciative of all that Sewanee students bring to this little place we share between August and May every year.

I've had the good fortune to join John Benson, director of the Sewanee Outing Program, and a group of student cyclists riding in the MS 150, an event outside of Nashville that raises money for multiple sclerosis research. Four times I've spent a weekend riding in vans, sharing meals, camping out and cycling for two days in all sorts of weather with a couple of dozen Sewanee undergraduates.

It's always a highlight of my year. Their energy is contagious, their sense of fun infectious. They accept me into the group and share stories and snacks as if they've known me for years.

Every year there are students who show up having done almost no training. They suffer mightily but typically make it all 150 miles to the finish. It's a great lesson for me: you don't always have to train, prepare and plan in order to achieve something; sometimes you just have to go in blind and wallow in the experience.

To hear their plans for the future is to be inspired in a different way. Whether they're considering graduate school or working for a non-profit, traveling or a fellowship, their sense of possibility is so beneficial it should be bottled and dispensed.

Are college students sometimes a bit annoying? Of course. They can be heedless and self-absorbed. They leave bikes strewn all over campus in the rain. They drive too fast in front of my house. But every time I feel judgmental I think of myself and my own undergraduate experience—all five years and three summers of it—and I quickly lose my indignation.

One of my heroes, Patagonia founder Yvon Chouinard, said in an interview that he always tries to be the oldest one in the room. I understand what he means.

Whether they're climbers or cyclists, scientists or choir members, the students I've met have been a source of motivation for me to learn more, achieve more, shoot for more in my own pursuits. They're a cure for pessimism, cynicism and complacency. Plus, they're fun to be around

So this is my tribute to the students of Sewanee, particularly the departing seniors. It's been fun sharing the Mountain with you. Thanks, and best of luck.

Fulbright Awards For Sewanee Students

Three Sewanee seniors have been announced as Fulbright award recipients this year, and a fourth Sewanee student has been named an alternate.

Matt Hagler (Greer, S.C.) has received an English Teaching Assistantship for Turkey.

Anthropology major Watson Hartsoe (Maryville, Tenn.) received a research Fulbright this year. Building on relationships Hartsoe established during an earlier visit to Honduras, his project will be to work with urban youth groups. His field-oriented research will take place in San Pedro Sula.

Hanna Miller's (Collins, Miss.) English Teaching Assistantship to Russia was announced last week.

Charlotte Henderson (Bedminster, N.J.) was named an alternate for an English Teaching Assistantship for Mongolia.

The Fulbright Program is the flagship international educational exchange program sponsored by the U.S. government and is designed to increase mutual understanding between the people of the United States and the people of other countries. Recipients of Fulbright grants are selected on the basis of academic or professional achievement, as well as demonstrated leadership potential in their fields.

Last year Sewanee placed 18th in the list of top-producing liberal arts colleges for Fulbright recipients.

by Dickie McCarthy

I'm a firm believer that the athletic playing field is one of the best classrooms for learning life lessons... some good, some bad. It's my job as a coach to teach my players more than just how to shoot a jump shot or box-out for a rebound. In the end, if that's all I have accomplished, then I feel I have failed miserably.

Not all valuable lessons, however, are learned by hitting the gamewinning shot in the final seconds or driving in the winning run with two outs in the bottom of the ninth inning. Some of the best lessons are learned through failure and disappointment, or in the case of one fifteen-year-old on a single football play.

High school football is king in most every small town in the state of Georgia. In West Point, Ga., in the 1960s, that was no exception. Friday nights were amazing at the River Bowl, aptly named because the Chattahoochee River flooded the field when it overflowed its banks. At West Point High School, a legendary coach named Carlton Lewis roamed the sidelines. Coach Lewis, with a roster that seldom exceeded 20 players, often took his teams deep into the state football playoffs, making it to the state championship game on several occasions in the early 1960s.

Coach Lewis, a master of the single-wing offense, was an icon at West Point. A former star athlete at Georgia Tech, he was also the high school principal. Every young boy in West Point grew up dreaming of playing football for the Red Devils and Coach Carlton Lewis.

During Coach Lewis' time at West Point, spring training was a grueling four-week-long practice period in April and May that culminated in the playing of the annual Senior-Varsity Game. Played on the last Friday night of spring training, the game pitted the graduating seniors against the upcoming varsity team. The game was always somewhat of a mismatch since the senior team was composed of several players who had never played football, but because of the intensity of the annual rivalry, wanted to put the pads on to take part in the event.

And what an event it was. The lights and scoreboard were on, and the bleachers at the River Bowl were packed. The smells of the freshly mown grass and the wafting smoke from hamburgers cooking on a charcoal

On the varsity team in the spring of 1969, there was a skinny freshman tight end completing his first varsity spring training. With enormous pride he was donning the West Point Red Devil football uniform for the very first time. He was finally going to be one of Coach Lewis' "boys."

Midway through the third quarter with the varsity leading by two touchdowns, Coach Lewis sent the freshman into the game to play left end. With the line of scrimmage near midfield, the call came from Coach Lewis to run a pass play called "left end trick." A feeling of nervous excitement filled the freshman as he broke the huddle. Since the play always worked in practice, he was confident he was about to score his first of many touchdowns as a Red Devil.

The freshman ran his pass route perfectly, dragging down the line just behind the linebackers and then breaking deep between the splitting pass routes of the right end and wing back.

He ran down the field wide open toward the goal line, looking over his right shoulder as the quarterback's flawless pass got closer and closer to him. Just as it neared his hands, the boy took his eyes off the football for an instant. The ball fell to the ground. He had dropped a sure touch-

As the freshman ran back to the huddle amid the jeers from the senior players, he looked to the sideline and the starting left end was coming back in to replace him. With head down he jogged to the bench. As he passed by Coach Lewis on the sideline, all he heard the coach say to him was, "Some people are winners, and some people are losers." It was like someone had stuck a dagger in his heart. He was devastated. There was no doubt in his mind which term Coach Lewis meant for him.

The freshman never returned to the game that night. His team won handily. After the game there was a big party planned. In his disappointment and embarrassment, the freshman instead went straight home and cried himself to sleep.

Knee surgery in August would cause the young man to miss his entire phomore football season. Coach Lewis would leave West Point High School for another job at the end of the school year. As fate would have it, the Senior-Varsity Game in the spring of 1969 would be the only game the young man would ever play for Coach Lewis.

I'm sure by now most of you have figured out, as the late Paul Harvey would say, "the rest of the story." That skinny freshman football player who dropped that sure touchdown pass was me.

As years passed and I became a football coach myself, Coach Lewis and I rekindled our relationship. In the later years of his life, he resided in a nursing home in the West Point area. He would listen to our games broadcast on Friday nights by a local radio station. Although confined to his bed, he would call me almost every Saturday afternoon in the fall, and we would discuss the game from the night before. During our conversations I could even feel a sense of pride in my accomplishments coming from him. I'm convinced that in the end he did consider me one of his "boys."

I know Coach Lewis never realized the impact his harsh words that Friday night in the spring of 1969 had on me and my coaching career. We never discussed the events of that night. Though extremely painful to me at the time, it was the best lesson a coach ever taught me.

As a coach, at any age level, one should never underestimate the power of one's words and actions. Measure your words carefully, because someone is always listening.

Dickie McCarthy is the head women's basketball coach at Sewanee.

Purple Martins in Midway

Jean Yeatman reports that a huge flock of purple martins are back in Midway at "Chief" Wayne McBee's farm. They are nesting in more than 200 gourds hung from tall poles. He said the early scouts arrived in March, and when they passed the farm on April 28, there were hundreds flying about. Go take a look!

The purple martin is the largest of the North American swallows at 7.5–8.5 inches in length. The male is a rich, glossy black with bluish and purple reflections, and is completely dark above and below; the wings are longer than the tail, which is slightly forked. The females and immatures have dusky throats and white bellies. They have broad wings and a soaring flight. The martins feed mostly on day-flying insects, showing a distinct preference for beetles, dragonflies, wasps and other fairly large prey, and on occasion, take a good number of mosquitoes. The song is a distinctive, low-pitched, liquid, rolling twitter.

Both sexes participate in building the nest of grass, leaves and other materials. Four or five slightly glossy white eggs are laid. Incubation lasts from 12 to 20 days. The young stay in the nest up to 28 days, at which time the adults cease feeding them. One or both parents remain nearby, waiting to join the offspring once they have flown from the nest. The family stays together until the young are fully independent, a period of about three weeks. Then the group may join other martins to form huge flocks for the southward migration, which begins in late July and continues into October, when all leave to winter in Brazil.

Purple martins used to nest in hollow trees, but now they much prefer to nest in colonies where people have put up martin houses.

AASC Reaches More than 2,000 Pets

Animal Alliance South Cumberland (AASC) celebrated a milestone during its April 16 transport. A 45-pound Pit Bull Terrier named Felony was the 2,000th pet "fixed" as a result of this all-volunteer organization's ongoing effort to reduce the number of unwanted and abandoned dogs and cats on the South Cumberland Plateau.

AASC provides affordable and accessible spays and neuters for companion pets and stray animals. Felony's family took her in because her original owner was going to dispose of this beautiful sweet dog.

AASC focuses much of its efforts on large dogs, weighing 40 pounds or more. AASC received a second special grant to help pay to neuter/spay large dogs. Dogs over 40 pounds are more likely to be kept outdoors, allowing greater opportunities for them to breed, resulting in unwanted pregnancies. Large dogs have more puppies per litter, making it even more difficult to find homes for them all.

Spring Storm Safety Tips

During this time of spring storms and lightning, Sequachee Valley Electric Cooperative urges everyone to be aware of the dangers associated with lightning and how to protect themselves. Often underrated, lightning kills more people per year than either tornadoes or hurricanes and causes billions of dollars in damage.

If caught outdoors during a thunderstorm and unable to take shelter in a building, take the following precau-

Try to take shelter in a vehicle with a solid metal roof. Close the windows and avoid contact with electrical conducting paths, such as the steering wheel, ignition, gear shifter or radio.

Avoid water, high ground, or open

Do not seek shelter under tall, solitary trees, canopies, small picnic or rain shelters, or in any open vehicles such as jeeps, convertibles or golf carts.

Do not stand near power, light or flag poles, machinery, fences, gates, metal bleachers, or even other people. If you are in a group, spread out so that you are at least 20 feet apart.

If your skin tingles or your hair stands on end, lightning may be about to strike. Squat down low to the ground with your head between your knees making yourself the smallest target possible.

If a person is struck by lightning, call 911 and care for the victim immediately.
