Hastings Mobile Seeks New Home

Artist Jack Hastings is remembered for his extraordinary sculptures, paintings and drawings, much of it in public spaces. But now, his partner, Arlyn Ende, must find a new home for one of Hastings' largest creations: a 40-foot by 25-foot mobile, "Homage to Calder," which presently hangs in the TVA southeast headquarters in Chattanooga.

"This is a unique opportunity to have a major work of art by a local artist with a national reputation," Ende said. The piece is available because TVA is renovating the building; as part of this process, TVA is returning major artworks to the artists it commissioned 30 years ago.

The mobile was constructed at Hastings' and Ende's studio in Bradyville, Tenn., where they lived until they moved to Sewanee in 1994. The piece is made of airframe aluminum and painted with permanent acrylic colors. He named this monumental artwork "Homage to Calder" in honor of the sculptor-engineer who in 1932 created hanging sculptures of discrete movable parts powered by the wind, which Marcel Duchamps christened mobiles.

Ende recalled the creative process: "If you had gone looking for Jack 30 years ago at his studio and farm in Bradyville, you'd have crossed a creek, climbed a hill and found him back behind his studio intensely absorbed in an aerodynamic exercise that was somewhere between physics and aesthetics. He would have been at the controls of his antique Oliver tractor, hoisting with slow, deliberate precision a 30-foot-long rod, higher and higher, as he calculated and calibrated its swing and balance with a bright orange spiral icon dangling from its end. He'd pause, break concentration, and invite you into his large workroom to show you a scale model of the work-in-progress and explain what was up."

Sewanee Community Chest Spotlight

Community Center, SES & Animal Alliance

The 2014-15 Sewanee Community Chest fund drive is underway. Since 1908, the Sewanee Community Chest has helped to serve its fellow community members and keep this community strong and vital. Sponsored by the Sewanee Civic Association, the Community Chest raises money for local charitable organizations that work to educate and nurture children, aid the community, and improve the quality of life. In setting the goal for the Community Chest, the Sewanee Civic Association board and membership approved funding for 27 organizations and initiatives in Sewanee and surrounding communities, assuming the goal is met.

This year's goal is $101,000; about $36,000 has been raised to date. This year's fund drive organizers, Marilyn and Tom Phelps, hope to complete the campaign by February 2015.

For the next few weeks, the Sewanee Mountain Messenger will focus on some of the organizations supported by the Community Chest. This week we look at three of the organizations selected by the Community Chest: the Sewanee Community Center, the Sewanee Elementary School and the Animal Alliance-South Cumberland.

Sewanee Community Center. The purpose of the Sewanee Community Center is to improve the quality of life in the community by providing space for community-initiated programs and projects. These programs include the online farmer's market and the food buyers' co-op, yoga, tai chi, gymnastics, Cub Scouts and community meetings. The Community Center board also sponsors an annual community-wide yard sale. Each month approximately 600-800 people use the Center.

The Community Center is requesting $4,500 to be used for the general operating costs of keeping the Center open, including utilities, insurance, maintenance, a mower and the manager's salary. The Sewanee Community Chest provides for 44 percent of the Center's operating expenses. The rest of the Center's funding comes from rent and other donations.

Sewanee Elementary School. The community has always helped to maintain the public school in Sewanee, from building the school in 1927, to providing financial support for enrichment programs and supplies.

Sewanee Elementary School (SES) relies on yearly funding from the Community Chest to meet the school's needs. The Sewanee Parent Organization (SPO, formerly known as the Parent-Teacher Organization), a 501(c)(3) non-profit organization, requests and disburses the Community Chest funds each year for SES. The SPO works with the SES teachers and staff to find solutions to specific educational needs of the school that are not met by the Franklin County

This year's Community Chest goal is $101,000.

University Welcomes Alumni for Homecoming

More than 2,000 Registered for Weekend

Homecoming at the University of the South is today through Sunday, Nov. 7-9. More than 2,000 Sewanee alumni and guests are registered for the weekend. This is a reunion year for alumni with class years ending in 4 and 9, and those classes will have special events in addition to the all-alumni offerings. Other reunion events will celebrate alumni choir members and 10 years of the equestrian program at the Howell Riding Facility.

The registration desk at the McGriff Alumni House will be open today (Friday) from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m., and Saturday, Nov. 8, from 8 a.m. to noon. The weekend will be filled with social, educational and recreational opportunities planned to appeal to all alumni.

Academic offerings include the opportunity to sit in on classes and to hear presentations on the growing scientific activity on the Domain by Kevin Hiers, C'96, the University's director of environmental stewardship; "An Innocent Man's Life in Prison: the Anatomy of a Wrongful Conviction," by Bill Allison, C'67, professor at the University of Texas School of Law; on the economic costs of over-indebtedness by internationally known economist Lacy Hunt, C'64; and on Finding Your Place, Sewanee's new first-year program, by associate professor of classical languages Chris McDonough. Returning alumni will also have the chance to hear from the new dean of the College, Terry Papillon and provost John Swallow.

Arts events include a Friday afternoon art exhibition and poetry reading at IONA; exhibitions in University Archives and Special Collections of etchings created by Joe Winkelman, C'64, and "Coming Home: The Johnson Collection," selected works from the collection of George Dean Johnson, C'64; and

Veterans Day Events

Veterans Day, Nov. 11, is a celebration to honor America's veterans for their patriotism, love of country and willingness to serve and sacrifice for the common good. Federal, state and local government agency offices are closed, as are banks and the post office. Public schools, St. Andrew's-Sewanee and the University of the South will hold classes, and their offices are open. The Sewanee Senior Center will be open.

A Veterans Day observance will begin at 6 p.m., Tuesday, Nov. 11, at the American Legion Hall, 36 University Ave., in Sewanee, with a covered-dish meal, followed by a program by the Rev. Charley Watkins.

St. Andrew's-Sewanee School celebrates Armistice Day with an 11-minute ringing of the St. Andrew's Chapel "Chocolate Bells" at 11:11 a.m. The ritual commemorates the sacrifices of veterans, is a celebration of peace, and serves as a token of thanks to those who provided the bells for the school.

The SAS student vestry, under the direction of chaplain Drew Bunting, will hold a service of remembrance to honor those who served in World War I. The service will be at 8 p.m., Tuesday, Nov. 11, in the St. Andrew's Chapel and will be open to the public.

The vestry seeks names of area friends and family who served in World War I, which will be read during the service. Please send names to Lachlan Hassman at <lhassman@sasweb.org> for inclusion on the list.

Election Results

Tennessee voters approved all four amendments to the state constitution on Nov. 4 in the general election. In Franklin County, all four amendments were overwhelmingly supported. In the Sewanee precinct, voters rejected Amendment 1 about abortion and Amendment 3 about a state income tax. The local results, however, had no impact on the statewide outcomes.

Bill Haslam (R) was re-elected as governor. Lamar Alexander (R) will return to the U.S. Senate for his third term representing the state.

Scott DesJarlais (R) defeated Lenda Sherrell (D) of Monteagle in the race for the 4th Congressional District seat of the U.S. House of Representatives; DesJarlais will return to the House for his third term. David Alexander (R) will return to the Tennessee House of Representatives for the 39th District.

Turnout at the Sewanee precinct was 44.6 percent, with 841 voters. In the county, turnout was 36.6 percent; there were 9,980 voters.

In local elections, the only contested race for Sewanee Community Council was in District 3. The new representatives for this area will be Annie Armour and Pixie Dozier. Armour received 62 votes; and Dozier, 55 votes. Paul Evans received 41 votes.

In Monteagle, voters approved the sale of wine in grocery stores. Voters in Tullahoma voted in support of a similar measure.

BOX TOPS SUCCESS

To the Editor:
 Once again, I want to say thank you to the entire Sewanee community for supporting Sewanee Elementary School with your box tops.

On Nov. 1, we shipped more than 6,500, which equates to more than $650 for SES. This was our largest submission ever, and every dollar goes directly to our school.

Thank you to everyone who clipped and dropped off box tops. And, a special thank-you to those who helped sort, count and package them, so they could be submitted on time.

Our goal for this school year is $1,000, so we are well on our way. Please keep clipping and dropping them off at SES or the lobby of the Sewanee post office.

You can also SPO them to Erin or Ryan Cassell at any time. We will do our second submission in the spring.

Thank you very much!

Erin Cassell
 SES Box Top Coordinator ■

THANK YOU TO JOHNSTON

To the Editor:
 I am writing to thank Patrick Johnston and the University of the South's Women's soccer team for allowing us to participate in their home soccer game on Oct. 24.

I coach a select under-10 girl's team for Camp Forest Football Club, and Coach Johnston generously invited us, along with our under-9 and under-11 teams, to walk out before the game with the college girls and had us scrimmage in front of the crowd during the halftime break. The University of the South team also purchased T-shirts for our girls.

All of my players and their parents have expressed to me that this was a wonderful experience, and I am certain the University has earned some new fans.

Thank you, Coach Johnston, and the Lady Tigers!

CAC Hosts Community Luncheon

The Community Action Committee invites members of the Sewanee community to join them at noon, Tuesday, Nov. 11, for the first community meal in the new Claiborne Parish House at Otey Parish.

This is made possible in collaboration with McClurg chef Rick Wright, University student volunteers and CAC. We welcome all to St. Mark's Hall for a free, fun meal and a great way to meet friends in the community.

The CAC is an outreach ministry of Otey Parish, with generous support from the Sewanee Community Chest and individuals across the Mountain. For almost 40 years, the CAC has provided food, financial assistance and educational support for persons in the greater Sewanee community. For more information contact the CAC at 598-5927.

New Team Leading Blue Chair & Tavern

In 1969, Jimmy Wilson played football at Sewanee with his friend and classmate Ellis Mayfield, C'73. Both men went on to have successful careers: Wilson as a businessman, Mayfield as an Episcopal priest and school chaplain. Now, together with a diverse group of friends, they are teaming up again as part of the new management team at the Blue Chair Café and Village Tavern in Sewanee.

"You've got to be in Sewanee because you love it," Wilson said recently. "No one goes into business here because we make money. We do it because we love this place."

Wilson and his wife, Sarah, C'89, have owned the Blue Chair and Tavern since 2010, buying it from Susan Binkley when her responsibilities at Blue Monarch took all of her time. Wilson was on the Blue Monarch board and saw this as an opportunity to get more involved in Sewanee. But the demands of running the restaurants became too much for Wilson, too. That's when he started thinking of a new structure.

"I wanted a leadership team that loves Sewanee and cares for this place as much as I do," Wilson said. "And I've got that now."

Mayfield is one of the five new owner-managers of the business. He is joined by Dave Hill, a longtime employee of the Tavern; Amy Hanna, a longtime employee of the Café; Ed Hawkins and Gary Sturgis, both of whom have been part of the restaurant. Mayfield and Hill are primarily responsible for the Tavern; Hanna is primarily responsible for the Café (along with sous chef Nick Brooks); and Sturgis is responsible for catering; leaving Hawkins and Wilson to oversee marketing, community relations and management. Also joining as a key staff member is accountant Bridgett Griffith.

"I'm delighted with the way it is already working out," Wilson said. The team started working together in early October. Wilson said he can already tell a difference. When the University Trustees met in October, Wilson (a new trustee) said he was able to participate in the events. "I actually got to relax and do my orientation with the rest of the new trustees," he said, "knowing that everything was well under control."

Each of the new team members brings their own unique background and experience to the enterprise. Hanna was a restaurant owner in Florida; Hill has been a key part of the Tavern since it opened; Mayfield has a great knowledge of the Sewanee community; Hawkins has significant marketing experience; and Sturgis is a master chef.

In addition to the new team, both sides of the business are rolling out new menus.

"We like to think of ourself as the place where the community gathers," Wilson said. "Trivia night on Tuesdays has become a big deal for the college students and community members; seminarian study groups gather here; Coffee with the Coach meets here on Mondays."

Another of Wilson's 1973 classmates, Sewanee Elementary School principal Mike Maxon, gives each SES student a coupon for a free ice cream cone, redeemable at the Café, for their birthday.

"There's always something going on here, whether it is schoolchildren or college students and faculty, or community folks," Wilson said. "We like to be here for everyone."

Obituary

Patsy Louise Morgan

Patsy Louise Morgan, age 67 of Tracy City, died on Oct. 29, 2014, in Southern Tennessee Skilled Care in Sewanee.

She was born April 24, 1947, in Sewanee, a daughter of the late Andrew Bass Payne and Minnie Anderson Payne. She was preceded in death by brother Chester Payne.

She was a member of Christ Church Episcopal and served on its Mission Council; she was a volunteer and board member of the Grundy County Food Bank.

Survivors include her son and daughter-in-law, Roger and Audrey Morgan; grandson, Colton Morgan of Monteagle; brothers Jerry (Jan) Payne and John Payne, both of Tracy City; and many other family members.

Funeral services were Nov. 2 at Christ Church Episcopal with the Rev. Linda Hutton officiating. Burial followed in Plainview Cemetery. For complete obituary go to <www.fosrelayfuneralhome.net>.

Gordon Peerman

Peerman Joins St. Mary's Board

The Rev. Gordon Peerman has been elected to the St. Mary's Sewanee (SMS) board of trustees to serve a term through 2016, according to SMS board president Dale Grimes.

"We are delighted to have Gordon Peerman join our board. His love of St. Mary's Sewanee and dedication to its success have been demonstrated by his immense and creative contributions to our program offerings over the years," said Grimes. "We welcome his wealth of experience and accomplishments."

Peerman is an Episcopal priest, psychotherapist and mindfulness teacher. He is the author of "Blessed Relief: What Christians Can Learn from Buddhists about Suffering." Peerman founded the Mindfulness-Based Stress Reduction Programs at St. Thomas Health Services and Vanderbilt's Center for Integrative Health. He has taught seminars in Buddhist-Christian dialogue, as well as courses in pastoral theology at Vanderbilt Divinity School. Since 1975, he has been engaged in contemplative practices, including centering prayer and mindfulness meditation, as well as yoga, Tai Chi and Qigong since 1995. He also leads Insight Nashville, a mindfulness meditation group that meets at Second Presbyterian Church in Nashville. Peerman started leading retreats at St. Mary's Sewanee in 2008, along with his late wife, Kathy Woods.

Faith, Food and Farming Workshop

Norman Wirzba, professor of theology and ethics at Duke Divinity School, will present "Salvation With the Stomach in Mind: Why Food and Farming Matter for the Church," at 7 p.m., Monday, Nov. 10, in Hargrove Auditorium in Hamilton Hall. There will be a reception and book signing following the lecture.

Wirzba will consider how practices of food production and consumption contribute to the healing of people and the world. He will show how a robust understanding of salvation necessarily extends to considerations of land use, animal husbandry and food systems.

On Nov. 11, Wirzba will join the Beecken Center in hosting a workshop on "Thinking Theologically About Good Farming and Good Food." In this full-day workshop, participants will develop biblical and theological insights that can help faith communities implement a more God-honoring, life-affirming food system.

Wirzba's lecture is made possible by the Arrington Lecture Fund. For more information about the workshop and to register, go to <<http://beeckencenter.sewanee.edu>>.

Church News

All Saints' Chapel

At 9:30 a.m., Sunday, Nov. 9, the names of those connected to Sewanee (alum, faculty, staff, community members and friends) who have died since Homecoming 2013 will be read outside of All Saints' Chapel. Tam Carlson will read these names.

During the 11 a.m. service, All Saints' will dedicate a statue of St. Augustine of Canterbury in memory of Charles Caldwell Marks. Marks, a long-time Birmingham businessman and civic leader, graduated from Sewanee in 1942. He was a member of Phi Beta Kappa and received the Algernon S. Sullivan Medallion, the highest honor bestowed on a graduating senior. After Sewanee, Caldwell served in the U.S. Navy during World War II; he had a long and successful business career.

A member of the Never-Failing Succession of Benefactors, Marks established several scholarships in honor of his parents, provided endowment funds for the physics department and donated funds for many capital projects at the University. The Marks family has a distinguished legacy at Sewanee. Caldwell's great-grandfather Charles Pollard attended the founding meeting of the University in 1857. His son Randy, C'69, and four grandchildren have also attended Sewanee.

Growing in Grace, All Saints' Chapel's contemporary worship service, will meet at 6:30 p.m., Sunday, Nov. 9. The speaker will be Matt Engleby, C'84, who is executive director at El Hogar, a home and school for at-risk children in Honduras. Catechumenate will meet at 7 p.m., Wednesday, Nov. 12, in the Bairnwick Women's Center. Coffee and dessert will be served. For more information contact University lay chaplain Rob McAlister by email, <rob.mcalister@sewanee.edu>.

Bible Baptist Church

Bible Baptist Church in Monteagle will have a Sunday Night Gospel Singing at 6 p.m., Sunday, Nov. 9. Jim Ricketts and Crystal Elam will be singing. Supper will be served. The church is located at 360 Wells St., Monteagle. For more information contact James Taylor at (423) 322-4922 or Greg Finch at (423) 451-0133.

Christ Church, Monteagle

Christ Church Monteagle is open for visitors and will have the coffee on all this weekend, beginning today (Friday), Nov. 7 at 10:30 a.m. While no services are planned for Saturday, Nov. 8, the church will be open most of the day.

On Sunday, Nov. 9, the service will be at 10:30 a.m.; lunch will be served afterward. While the International Day of Prayer was kept by most churches on Nov. 2, Christ Church will keep this special day on Nov. 9. "We have been involved with persecuted people of faith for well over 40 years, and we must not give up now," said Bp. William Millsaps.

Otey Memorial Parish

At 10 a.m., Sunday, Nov. 9, Otey Parish offers the "Speaking Christian" book study, the Lectionary Class and Godly Play classes for Christian formation. Nursery care is available for children 6 weeks old to 4 years old from 8:30 a.m. until after coffee hour, which follows the 11 a.m. service.

Otey Parish will celebrate the completion of Claiborne Parish House with a dedication and brunch at 11 a.m., Saturday, Nov. 15. [See story on p. 5.]

On Nov. 16, the Rev. Bart Segu will be the preacher at both services.

Otey Parish Celebrates Completion of Claiborne Parish House on Nov. 15

To celebrate the renovated Claiborne Parish House at Otey Parish, the Rt. Rev. John Bauerschmidt, Bishop of Tennessee, will conduct a dedication and consecration service at 11 a.m., Saturday, Nov. 15. After the prayer service, there will be a light brunch in the new St. Mark's Hall of the parish house.

The remaking of Claiborne has been a multi-year project that began with razing the old building to its foundations and then reincorporating as much of the old as possible, with added expansions. The Claiborne House is now more than 7,500 square feet; the project cost approximately $2 million. The contractor for the project was Robertson-Vaughn Construction of Winchester.

"I want to thank the years of dedicated leadership and work by so many people in the parish," said the Rev. Jess L. Reeves, interim rector. "We are grateful to all those who participated in getting us to this point by working on long-range planning, donating money and time, supervising the construction, administering the budget and offering vestry guidance during this time. It is truly a creation of our entire parish."

The large gathering room, known as St. Mark's Hall, is an entirely new addition. Its name honors the 1968 merger of the St. Mark's and Otey congregations into Tennessee's first fully integrated Episcopal Church.

The reborn Claiborne will house many community services and ministries. Otey's Community Action Committee has a suite of offices at the rear of the first floor of the building, from which food and services are distributed to those in need. Classrooms for adults and children, meeting rooms and a small chapel are also on the main floor.

Bauerschmidt will consecrate this chapel as St. Paul's-on-the-Mountain. In choosing this name, Otey seeks to honor and remember its precursor church.

The ground floor, home to the Sewanee Children's Center, includes much of the old footprint. The SCC has been an independent guest of Otey Parish for more than 50 years.

Many other community groups use space in Claiborne House for meetings and gatherings; others are invited to use the building. Contact the parish office for details.

From its origins the parish house was intended to serve the community in Jesus' name as an attractive community resource, as a gift of the parish to all God's children on the Mountain. The Rev. William S. Claiborne, rector in the early 20th century, initiated or promoted many local institutions: the parish, St. Andrew's and St. Mary's schools to educate the local population, and the first infirmary/hospital. Claiborne's ministry and vision continue. Soon the Thurmond Library will be refurbished and reopened in Claiborne House to further the educational needs of the greater Sewanee community.

University Regents, Chair Selected

New regents were elected by the University's board of trustees on Oct. 16. Those selected by the trustees to serve six-year terms on the Board of Regents are Montague "Cosmo" Boyd III, C'74, and Katherine "Kate" Nielsen.

Lee Thomas, C'67, was elected to serve a two-year term as chair of the University's board of regents. This election came during the regents' fall 2014 meeting held in September.

In addition, Charles J. Nabit, C'77, and Mary Babson completed their terms as regents and were recognized for their service by the board of regents during their meeting last month.

Lee Thomas, of Jacksonville, Fla., is the former head of the Environmental Protection Agency and the retired CEO of Rayonier, Inc. Thomas began his career in South Carolina, was brought to Washington to serve as an official in the Federal Emergency Management Agency, and was selected to lead the federal response to dioxin contamination in Times Beach, Missouri. In 1985, he was appointed by President Reagan as administrator of the EPA, where he played a leading role in three major environmental success stories.

Following the Reagan Administration, Thomas began a business career that included senior management positions at Georgia-Pacific and the position of chairman of the board and CEO at Rayonier, one of the biggest owners of forest land in the United States and a leader in the development of high-value products made from cellulose.

Cosmo Boyd of Atlanta served on the board of trustees from 2007 to 2010, is president of the Sewanee Club of Atlanta and received the Distinguished Alumni Service Award from the Associated Alumni in 2012. He is senior vice president at Stephens Inc., and was previously senior vice president at UBS Financial Services and Robinson-Humphrey Co., Inc. His community involvement includes service as a trustee for Atlanta Opera, the Center for the Visually Impaired, and Parent to Parent Georgia.

Kate Nielsen, of Birmingham, Ala., is the former president of the Community Foundation of Greater Birmingham. She previously worked at AmSouth Bancorp, and the YWCA of Central Alabama. She is past president of the Rotary Club of Birmingham and a director of Cultural Alliance of Greater Birmingham. She has also served on the boards of Leadership Birmingham; the Alys Stephens Performing Arts Center at UAB, the Birmingham Museum of Art and the Birmingham Regional Chamber of Commerce.

MEET YOUR NEIGHBOR

William Yelverton

by Kevin Cummings
Messenger Staff Writer

The view from the cliff into Champion Cove is majestic and sprawling. William Yelverton points to the camera peering down into the wilderness, part of a weather monitor station he installed. Today the crisp autumn sky is washed in sun, offering a perfect afternoon to sit on the back deck and unravel a life's journey. A hawk circles slowly above, and one of the world's fastest 54-year-olds begins his story.

The Susquehanna River Valley is where Yelverton learned to play the guitar, cutting his teeth on the likes of Leo Kottke and Steve Howe.

He joined John David's Mood, a rock band that was finding success in the regional club scene, but his fascination with progressive rock, groups such as Yes and Emerson, Lake and Palmer, opened the polyphonic world of baroque and Renaissance music. The Berklee School of Music in Boston gilded his zeal for the guitar.

"I always thought I'd have a career in the sciences, because my brain is scientifically wired," he says. "I went with my heart instead of my brain and changed my major to music. Then, I transferred to the conservatory."

He offers me a glass of tea, and I ask if it's okay to set it on the table without a coaster. "Sure, it's only scrap lumber furniture," he says.

His carpentry skills are evident, and many of his creations populate the home, including the massive woodshed out front, which is stocked and ready for winter.

We return to the conversation, and he expounds on why he loves the guitar, an instrument that has opened up the world. He has played concerts around the globe, including accompanying Luciano Pavarotti in Nashville.

Yelverton has taught guitar at Middle Tennessee State University for more than two decades and says he'd much rather talk about his students.

During the past year, one of his former students won an $8,000 guitar contest, another is touring 50,000-seat arenas with a country music artist, and one former pupil performed a solo concert at Carnegie Hall.

"A teacher can't expect anything greater than that from a student," he says. "It's a great thing to have students who have been successful in very diverse areas."

Luke Finney, another of his graduates from MTSU, is in his second year as the first-ever guitar professor at the University of the South.

Yelverton's mom was a dance teacher for 51 years, so that's likely where he got his creative side. His dad was the athlete, a pole vaulter and football player, and his brother was a high school champion pole vaulter.

And that leads to the part of Yelverton's rich story that might be the most inspiring. As an unaffiliated runner, he ran in 13 college track meets this year and is the third fastest man his age in the world in the 400-meter dash. Although he was a sprinter in high school, he really didn't get serious about running until his late 40s.

In 2011, he competed in his first college track meet.

"The feeling was just unbelievable," he says. "The butterflies, the feeling when the starter says, 'Gentleman stand ready by your blocks; take your marks,' and I'm putting my hands down on the starting line with guys who are 20 years old."

On occasion he has outrun college athletes. Yelverton has retained 95 percent of the speed he had in high school, largely through a consistent training regimen and strict dietary restrictions—he hasn't eaten a fast food hamburger in 24 years.

"I didn't work anywhere near as hard in high school as I do now as an athlete," he says. "It's a matter of being willing to leave your comfort zone and achieve something. It is so easy to stay home with that hot cup of coffee when it's 30 degrees out instead of getting up and running 400-meter intervals."

"Sprinting in college track meets at my age requires intelligent preparation; I have to be ridiculously fit, especially for the 400 meter," he adds. "It's a lifestyle."

His best times since turning 51 were 55.14 in the 400 meter and 24.88 in the 200 meter. He won the USA Track & Field Masters Indoor National Championship in the 400 meter and took the Silver Medal at the Outdoor Nationals in 2012. When he turns 55 in July next year, he plans to compete at the World Masters Athletics Championship in August in Lyon, France.

"I feel good. I don't feel like I'm 54 years old," he says. "A lot of guys this age will take on something new; they'll get a boat or sports car. This is maybe my midlife preoccupation, but I'd like to be able to do it for life."

"It gives me something to wake up to every day," he adds. "I'm really happy."

Turkey Trot: A Ten-Year Tradition

The 10th annual Turkey Trot in Sewanee's Angel Park will be at 9 a.m., Saturday, Nov. 22.

In the last 10 years Theta Pi, along with partnering fraternities and sororities, has raised more than $70,000 for Blue Monarch. In keeping with this long-standing tradition, Theta Pi celebrates the 10th anniversary of the Turkey Trot and upholds its commitment to give back to the community.

Taylor Baird, Theta Pi's philanthropy chair, said, "We are so excited to make this year the most successful event in Turkey Trot history!"

Since 2003, Blue Monarch has provided an opportunity to mothers searching for the means to rebuild their lives, most of which have been consumed by drug addiction, poverty and incarceration. Over the years, Blue Monarch has seen lives restored, families renewed and children transformed. Blue Monarch's mission is to restore hope not only in the spirits of the residents of Blue Monarch, but also in the community at large.

"We are especially excited to celebrate this huge milestone and are so grateful for organizations like Theta Pi who join Blue Monarch in breaking the cycle of addiction and rebuilding the family," said Alicia Alexander, executive assistant and fund-raising specialist at Blue Monarch.

To register or make a donation, go online to <<https://sewanee.turkeytrot2014.eventbrite.com>> or <blue-monarch.org>. For more information contact Baird by email to <bairdtr0@sewanee.edu> or Alexander at (931) 924-8900 or <alicia@bluemonarch.org>.

Drive Safely in the Fog

The Sewanee Police Department reminds folks of the following safety tips for driving in the fog:

Tennessee state law requires that car headlights be turned on for rain, fog or any other precipitation.

When visibility is limited, turn off any music, roll down your car window and listen for traffic you cannot see.

Stay on the roadway by following the white stripe adjacent to the right shoulder of the road. This is easier to see than the middle stripes in dense fog, and oncoming headlights are not in your eyes. Use your turn signals, and when you use your brakes, don't stomp on them.

If an accident occurs, pull as far off the road as possible and turn on your flashing emergency lights. If there is no safe place to stand, stay inside your car.

College students, community members, faculty and staff all gather for a run to support the Blue Monarch.

ANGEL WITH AN ATTITUDE

by Virginia Craighill

Dear Angel,

I was running on the Perimeter Trail recently and noticed signs indicating that the deer cull was ongoing and warning us to stay off the trail at certain times. Do you think I should stop running on the trail or just take my chances?

Frightened Risk-Runner

Dear Risky Runner,

There are advantages and disadvantages to running on the Perimeter Trail during Deer Season, the main disadvantage being death. While the advantages might not outweigh an arrow to the heart, they are worth noting.

First, fearing for your life will increase your adrenalin and make you run faster. Think of yourself as the main character in "The Most Dangerous Game" (Baby Boomers or Gen X) or "The Hunger Games" (Gen Y or Millennials), and it will add to the excitement; if you imagine these hunters are after you instead of a buck with a big rack, you will improve your speed and your sense of self-importance.

Second (and this may not be so much an advantage as a fatalistic shrug), you have a better chance of being killed by slipping on the abundance of acorns, walnuts, chestnuts, hickory nuts and what-nuts that litter the trail and falling off the bluff than you do of being shot by a hunter with a bow-and-arrow. After all, could the hunters really be that good if we still have so many deer? Then again, their inaccuracy might not work in your favor.

The times when it is safe to run or hike, 5:00 a.m. to 5:07 a.m. and whenever the hunters feel like taking a break and popping open a cold one, do not seem to favor runners and hikers. Nevertheless, be brave, run free and try not to look too much like a deer while doing so. Best of luck!

Dear Angel,

I'm confused. The University website says Homecoming is this weekend, but I saw a bunch of preppy-looking alumni crowding Sewanee streets, fence-hugging at the football game, and roaming the Assembly looking for a good time a few weeks ago. Wasn't that Homecoming?

Patient Observer

Dear Patience:

Though you are mistaken, your confusion is understandable. What you witnessed on Oct. 17th and Oct. 18th was Family Weekend. This weekend is Homecoming. But really, aren't Family and Home intimately connected? Certainly they are at Sewanee, almost incestuously so. So many students here are legacies—the spawn of alumni—that Family Weekend tends to take on the tone and tenor of Homecoming, with alumni parents experiencing the conflation of time, as if they were not just the parents of students, but students themselves, and their children wondering what happened to their parents.

In order to mitigate the confusion and alleviate embarrassment for children of alumni, here are a few ground rules:

- 1) Alumni are allowed to do keg stands at Homecoming, but never on Family Weekend.
- 2) No alumni parents may enter a fraternity or sorority house after the hour of 9 p.m. on Family Weekend or Homecoming. IDs will be checked at the door.
- 3) Alumni returning for Family Weekend must have their outfits approved by their children; during Homecoming, alumni may wear whatever they want—madras plaid jackets or pants (but not at the same time), pink and green Lily Pulitzer outfits, whale corduroys and other assorted vintage costumes—without their children's permission.
- 4) On Family Weekend, alumni parents must attend their children's friends' parties. During Homecoming, it is best if alumni parents and their children attend separate events and pretend they don't know each other if they end up in the same place.
- 5) On Family Weekend, alumni parents are required to take their student children out for a nice meal (friends optional), but on Homecoming, legacy children must pay for their own damn meals or eat at McClurg.
- 6) Alumni, whether Sewanee parents or not, should recognize that "You're as young as you feel" is just a sad cliché, while "Act your age, not your bra size" has more gravitas and inherent truth.

And finally, may everyone have a happy Homecoming with your Sewanee family, be they blood relatives or not.

Update on Plans for Rebel's Rest

The University reported that it has engaged Antique Log Cabins of Chatsworth, Ga, to conduct the disassembly of Rebel's Rest, which was announced in August. The project of dismantling, evaluating, cataloging and storing building elements will be led by Kerry Hix, owner of the firm. Hix has done similar work on more than 300 historic log buildings. Work will begin in the next several weeks and is expected to take several months. Following the disassembly, the site will undergo archaeological investigation for evidence of earlier structures. On July 23, fire destroyed the second floor of the 148-year-old historic house. The building was in the midst of renovations; the state fire marshal investigator's preliminary findings were that the fire was not arson.

An aerial photo of Rebel's Rest, taken in August, from the University Avenue side of the building. Photo courtesy of the University of the South

The renovation project included updating plumbing and the HVAC system, putting on a new roof and making upgrades to the kitchen. Most of those renovations were on the second floor, but when the scope of the project extended downstairs about a week before the fire, workers removed three valuable paintings on the first floor. One of those paintings was a portrait of the home's original owner, Maj. George Fairbanks, which George P.A. Healy painted. Healy was famous for his paintings of many distinguished figures, including Presidents Andrew Jackson, Abraham Lincoln and Ulysses S. Grant.

Before beginning the process of disassembling Rebel's Rest, the University engaged two structural engineers, each with experience in historic structures, to evaluate the building. The University also contacted the state codes office, which has code enforcement authority in Sewanee. State authorities have confirmed that the extensive damage sustained by the building cannot be repaired without following current building codes. A duplication of the structure as it existed before the fire, or of any earlier version of the house, is not possible if the building is to be used and occupied.

Reports by the two structural engineers, one of whom is regularly recommended by the Tennessee Historical Commission, indicate that some of the original logs and timbers may be salvageable for reuse. These will be identified and stored during disassembly.

No further determination has been made regarding the future use of the salvageable materials or the site itself.

Questions regarding Rebel's Rest should be directed to Laurie Saxton, director of media relations, or to John Swallow, provost.

School Garden at Swiss Teaches Healthy Habits

Community Fund Project a Collaboration Between Sewanee Students, VISTA & Grundy County

by Harriet Runkle, Special to the Messenger

The "Seeds of Change" garden at Swiss Memorial School is settling in for a long winter's nap. What began in January as a kernel of an idea from a brainstorming session by the Healthy Schools Team at the pre-K through 8th-grade school in Gruetli-Laager, has blossomed into a thriving garden.

Swiss Memorial received a $10,000 grant from the Center for Disease Control that was used to create five raised beds, install two rain barrels and plant an apple and peach orchard. They received $2,500 from the Appalachian Roadmap for a Healthier Tennessee for construction of a greenhouse and $3,670 from the South Cumberland Community Fund (SCCF) to start a Student Garden Club. Cammie and Matthew Monroe of TransPlants, Inc., a landscape and nursery company based in McMinnville, volunteered their time and expertise for design and construction. The school dedicated the garden in May, just five short months after the initial brainstorming session.

"We were looking for a catalyst for teaching nutrition to our students, and we got it through lots of hard work and collaboration," said Belinda Morgan, school nurse for Swiss Memorial and Palmer Elementary schools in Grundy County.

Grundy County ranked last—95th out of 95 counties—in Tennessee health outcomes, according to a 2012 report by Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, University of Wisconsin Population Health Institute. The child poverty rate in Grundy County is 42.8 percent; 66 percent of children in public schools are eligible for free or reduced-price lunches. Grundy County has a population of 14,130; 11 percent of adults and 8 percent of children are diabetic.

Her nursing training "prepared me to hold the hand of a dying person, but it did not prepare me to address the needs of hungry children," Morgan said. "I had to learn how, and I'm positive that having a school garden is helping our students and their families."

The SCCF grant is funding a Student Garden Club, an after-school program of 20 students in fourth through eighth grades. During this 12-week program, which started in September, students are tending their gardens and learning about nutrition through fun, hands-on activities provided by Morgan and Tonya Gardner, health educator for Grundy and Franklin County and Grundy County Health Council. Additionally, they are assisted by community volunteers, two VISTA workers and Sewanee students from the Bonner Leaders Program and the Canale Leadership and Service Internship program.

"None of this would be possible without the support of our principal, Kasey Woodlee," Morgan said. "She is committed to giving our children and families, staff and teachers the opportunities to improve our overall health."

Now halfway through the first year of the program Morgan said, "These students are learning so much more than what we are teaching them just by observing things in the garden."

Morgan described how "they have met other 'important members' of their school garden," including a toad that was living in a watering can, a baby fence lizard that accompanied a student on her shoulder as she did her garden chores, and two baby bunnies nestled deep down beneath the soil in a garden bed. Caleb, a seventh-grade member of the Student Garden Club summed up the profound benefits of taking care of a school garden. "If I just hear about the way something works in science but don't actually get to do it or see it, I can't learn it. It's boring," Caleb said. "But I have actually seen a bee with pollen stuck to its legs pollinating flowers in our garden! That's so much more fun and I'll never forget it."

Ende recalls the process of getting the enormous piece installed in the new building.

"One night just prior to the official opening of the new TVA building, Jack and I drove to Chattanooga to deliver and install the mobile," she said. "Our truck was filled to capacity with the carefully identified parts Jack had tested so precisely, and with tools and backup parts 'just in case.'

"His well-thought-out plan was in place to finally assemble the sculpture in its entirety for the first time. A crew had already attached the master cable to the solar glass ceiling high in the five-story atrium and were there waiting for the main event to begin.

"Jack laid out the rods, fittings, and colorfully painted aluminum icons systematically on the floor. The cable was lowered. From a balcony four stories up," Ende said, "Jack called out instructions to the crew below to attach, and very slowly, very gently hoist the rods and icons from the floor in the proper order."

As the piece was installed, she said, "I remember the magical, jaw-dropping suspense as we saw the air itself take shape around each moving arm and attenuated icon as it glided upward and outward to the ephemeral airspace.

"There was a breathtaking silence when the last fitting was tightened and the crew drew back. I sensed and shared the pride, gratitude and relief that filled Jack as his 'Homage to Calder' was released, finally on its own."

Hastings, who died in 2013, has two mobiles installed at the Nashville International Airport, as well as public art across the U.S., including pieces in Tennessee, as well as in Germany.

For information about being considered to receive this large and precious piece of art, contact Hastings' art trustee, Susan Tinney, at <susan@tinneycontemporary.com>

Park Service Program Aids Area Trails

The Grundy County Recreation Trail Development project has just learned that it has been chosen by the National Park Service's Rivers, Trails and Conservation Assistance (RTCA) Program for assistance. RTCA selected 11 communities to receive technical and planning assistance for development of new outdoor recreation opportunities and conservation of local natural resources.

The primary goal of the Grundy County Recreation Trail Development project is to increase trail opportunities within the county that will promote more active lifestyles and recreation outlets. Through the development of mountain bike trails, and possibly equestrian trails, the Grundy County Conservation Commission and its partners expect that the new trails will increase tourism and other economic opportunities in the South Cumberland area.

Types of RTCA projects include: outdoor preservation, rivers conservation, and the development of recreational trails and greenways. A network of planning professionals delivers the RTCA program nationwide, helping communities achieve successes. The RTCA staff help local partners to make their rivers, trails, greenways and open spaces vital, life-enhancing parts of their communities.

RTCA is not a grant program. It works with community groups, nonprofit organizations, and local, state and federal government agencies to achieve locally-defined goals for natural resource conservation and outdoor recreation.

School system's funding or services. This includes professional development, technology purchases, library books and supplies for classrooms. The SPO supports 250 children and 30 faculty and staff members.

This year the SPO is requesting $20,000 on behalf of Sewanee Elementary. The Community Chest currently funds almost 90 percent of the SPO operating expenses for the school. The SPO also receives money through annual dues and small fund-raisers such as T-shirt sales. SES receives additional money from school pictures, two book fairs and the BoxTops program.

Animal Alliance-South Cumberland. The mission of the Animal Alliance-South Cumberland (AASC) is to reduce the number of unwanted and abandoned dogs and cats in Grundy County and the areas of Marion and Franklin counties located on the South Cumberland Plateau by providing affordable and accessible spays and neuters. The group is committed to reducing the number of unintended litters, which can lead to neglect, cruelty and euthanasia. AASC also educates the public about the importance of animal sterilizations.

Since the program began in 2008, AASC has helped to spay and neuter more than 2,800 dogs and cats. The organization also funds the sterilization of strays before foster families rehome them. Last year, three of the volunteer foster homes took in 266 puppies and adult dogs. The organization helps to transport the animals to Wally's Friends, Paul's Clinic and Animal Care Center. They also work with Fido Fixers, which is a mobile clinic that periodically comes to the Plateau.

AASC is requesting $1,250, which will help to sterilize 25 dogs and/or cats. The pet owners are asked for a copayment of $14, which covers $12 for a rabies vaccination and a $2 fuel fee for the transport van. AASC pays for these charges if an owner cannot afford it.

For low-income pet owners, AASC also pays for any other services deemed necessary by the veterinarian at the time of the surgery such as antibiotics, ear mite treatment, and pain and worm medications. The AASC is entirely volunteer-led. Its largest expense is paying for the spay and neuter program.

The goal of the Sewanee Community Chest is to help our community by funding our community programs. The Community Chest is a 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization, and donations are tax-deductible.

Send your donation to Sewanee Community Chest, P.O. Box 99, Sewanee, TN 37375. For more information, or to make a donation through PayPal, contact <sewaneecommunitychest@gmail.com> or go to <www.sewaneeccivic.wordpress.com>.

New Speed Limit on Ball Park Road

The Franklin County Highway Department, and county road commissioner Joe David McBee announce that new speed limit signs are up in some areas of Sewanee.

Signs that state, "Please Drive Slow," are now posted on parts of Lake O'Donnell and all of Ball Park Road. The speed limit has been set at 20 mph (previously, it was 25 mph) for these two roads. The Franklin County Highway Department and the Sewanee Police Department request that drivers slow down and observe the new speed limit.

Animal Harbor Party for Paws

Animal Harbor is having its annual Party for Paws event on Saturday, Nov. 22, at the Cliff Tops Lake Clubhouse in Monteagle.

The party will begin at 6 p.m., and will feature catering by IvyWild, music by Cricket & Snail, a full bar and a silent auction.

"This will be a fantastic party, and we hope to see many of our friends there," said Gail Castle, Animal Harbor's executive director. "All of the proceeds will be used to rescue, care for, and find homes for companion animals abandoned in Franklin County. We depend on the Party for Paws proceeds each fall and spring to help run the shelter and keep the lights on!"

Tickets are $40 each and can be purchased online at <www.animalharbor.com>. They can also be purchased and at the following locations: Animal Harbor, Blue Chair Café, Animal Care Center, Town and Country Veterinary Hospital, Midtown Veterinary Services & Hospital and Bubbles and Bows in Winchester. No tickets will be available at the door; all tickets must be purchased in advance. For more information contact Castle at (931) 636-0388.

Animal Harbor is a limited-admission animal shelter facility serving Franklin County. It is operated by members of The Franklin County Humane Society, a private nonprofit 501(c)(3) organization.

Annual 4-H Poinsettia Sale

The Grundy County 4-H Club is selling poinsettia plants for the holiday season. Colors available will be red and marble. Six-and-a-half-inch pots are $10 each; 10-inch pots are $20 each. If you buy five plants, you will get one free.

Orders are due Friday, Nov. 7. The plants will arrive Dec. 2-3. All proceeds benefit Grundy County 4-H. Call (931) 592-3971 to order or for more information.

Lectures & Talks

Law Professor on Wrongful Conviction

Law professor William P. Allison, C'67, will give a lecture at 11 a.m., today (Friday), Nov. 7, in Gailor Auditorium. He will discuss "An Innocent Man's Life in Prison, the Anatomy of a Wrongful Conviction." Allison will chronicle his 27-year fight to free his client. The talk will include viewing portions of the CNN documentary produced on this case, "An Unreal Dream: The Michael Morton Story."

Allison has been a trial lawyer for 43 years and is currently a clinical professor of law and the director of the Criminal Defense Clinic at the University of Texas School of Law in Austin, Texas.

Why Food & Farming Matter for the Church

Norman Wirzba will present "Salvation With the Stomach in Mind: Why Food and Farming Matter for the Church," at 7 p.m., Monday, Nov. 10, in Hargrove Auditorium in Hamilton Hall. [More details are on page 4.]

Fall of the Berlin Wall Celebration

The German House will celebrate the 25th anniversary of the Fall of the Berlin Wall at 7 p.m., Tuesday, Nov. 11. There will be remarks by German professor Reinhard Zachau, and professor emeritus James Davidheiser will show pictures of his recent trip to Germany. All are welcome. The German House is at 29 Louisiana Circle, Sewanee.

Eliza Masters of Monteagle was unanimously selected by the coaches to the District 8AAA All-District Team as Freshman of the Year. She is a student at Grundy County High School, but plays soccer for Coffee County since Grundy does not field a soccer team. Eliza started as a varsity player for the entire season and scored five goals and notched four assists while playing over half the time on defense. Eliza is the daughter of Elizabeth and Brian Masters.

Cammack at Pratt Institute

Sewanee resident Julia Cammack has started studies at New York City's Pratt Institute, joining an incoming class of students who come from 48 states and 80 countries for the fall 2014 semester.

Julia is the daughter of Shelley and Ward Cammack. She is one of 835 new students selected from more than 7,300 applicants.

Founded in 1887, Pratt Institute is a global leader in higher education dedicated to preparing its 4,700 undergraduate and graduate students for successful careers in art, design, architecture, information and library science, and liberal arts and sciences.

the University Art Gallery exhibition "Flat Earth Unfolded" by artists Greg Pond, C'95, School of Letters alumnus Jesse Thompson and Archie Stapleton.

In addition, Americana singer, songwriter and fiddler Amanda Shires, a poetry student in the School of Letters, will perform at McCrory Hall for Performing Arts on the campus of St. Andrew's-Sewanee School on Saturday, Nov. 8. And the Ralston Listening Library, a world-class listening facility built in memory of beloved Sewanee professor Father William Ralston, C'51, will be open on Friday for guests to enjoy music.

Active and outdoor offerings include a guided hike of the Caldwell Rim Trail overlooking Lost Cove, the annual morning fun run for alumni and friends, and Saturday's football game against Berry College.

Vice-Chancellor John McCardell and his wife, Bonnie, will welcome alumni at events throughout the weekend, including a Welcome Home Reception on Friday afternoon at the new Sewanee Inn, and the Alumni Awards Brunch on Saturday.

A memorial service Sunday morning will remember alumni, faculty, staff and community members at St. Augustine's Stone (outside All Saints' Chapel).

This weekend is an opportunity for alumni to learn from faculty on a variety of topics, explore the campus and reunite with friends. The full schedule of events can be found at the Sewanee alumni gateway page: www.sewaneegateway.com/.

Homecoming Events

There are a number of events this Homecoming weekend at the Bell Towers and Breslin Tower.

On Friday, Nov. 7, there will be tours of Shapard Tower and the Leonidas Polk Carillon from 3 p.m. to 4 p.m. At 4 p.m., carillonneers Charlene Williamson and I will stop hosting tours and start playing a program of carillon duets, including some interesting, fun-to-play and fun-to-listen-to duets by Geert D'hollander. The video monitor will be set up at the southwest corner of the chapel so that you may watch the carillonneers play as you listen.

The carillon tower will also be open for tours 1:30-2:30 p.m., Saturday; Parks Greene and I will be the hosts. On Sunday morning, Ray Gotko will play at the end of the 9:30 a.m. outdoor memorial service at All Saints' Chapel, and then again after the 11 a.m. service. Thus, all four of the current group of Sewanee carillonneers will be participating in the Homecoming events.

Switching to Breslin Tower and the Bentley Change Ringing Bells, Gail Watson provides this information:

"For three years the Number 7 and Number 8 bells of the Mildred and George Bentley Memorial Change Ringing Bells have been silent. A loose finial on top of Breslin Tower has meant that the Sewanee Ringers have been unable to ring the whole range of eight bells. This year the University generously allocated funds to repair the roof; the work on that has been completed.

The Sewanee Ringers also contributed to this effort, as well as funding some needed renovations to the Paul Engsborg Room inside the tower, which houses the Charlotte F. Douglas Memorial Clock and provides a ringing room for the change ringing bells. Walls and ceiling are being repaired and painted, a white board for teaching will be installed, and other cosmetic work will be done. The Ringers hope to have everything completed before a visiting group from the United Kingdom arrives to ring a special Peal on November 16. The full set of bells will then once again be able to ring out the Call to Chapel."

The Hermitage Makes Shift in Focus

In another step toward a new focus on Andrew Jackson's life and legacy, the Hermitage has a new logo and tagline. The home of America's seventh president will now carry the banner "Andrew Jackson's Hermitage: Home of the People's President."

The changes reflect a shift in focus from the house to the man, following the path of peer institutions like

George Washington's Mount Vernon and Thomas Jefferson's Monticello. The Hermitage's new logo now carries Andrew Jackson's name.

Anderson Design Group created the new logo, which features an image of the former president based on a famous 1824 Thomas Sully portrait, the same image on the United States $20 bill. The tagline is the result of months of discussions with consultants, Hermitage staff, members of the Andrew Jackson Foundation and the general public, in which it was decided that the name on the site should reflect Jackson's focus on being a voice of the people he served.

"Harry Truman once said, he 'looked after the little fellow who had no pull,'" said Howard Kittell, president and CEO of the Hermitage. "Andrew Jackson strengthened the office of the president, and he felt he spoke for and answered to the people."

Earlier this month, the Hermitage announced a national board of trustees, including Pulitzer Prize-winning historian Jon Meacham.

Originally constructed from 1819 to 1821 by Nashville-area carpenters and masons, the Hermitage is widely recognized by historians as the best-preserved early presidential home in the United States.

The site is one of the largest and most visited presidential homes in the country. Today, the Hermitage is a 1,120-acre National Historic Landmark with more than 30 historic buildings, including restored slave cabins.

THE INSATIABLE CRITIC

by Elizabeth Ellis

The Sewanee Union Theatre has a great, but very adult mix for Homecoming weekend and beyond—we get taken on an adrenaline-filled sci-fi ride that explores the outer limits of the human mind with “Lucy”; a visually arresting tale with darker undertones with “The Fall”; a love letter to the people and relationships in New York City in “Manhattan”; and a young comedienne with tough life choices to confront in “Obvious Child.”

Sir Toby, the Critic's valiant sidekick

Every good critic needs a good rating system, and stars are so overused. There's nothing on the planet more critical than cats, so one or more movies each week is rated from one to five Tobys. The more Tobys it has, the better it is.

Lucy

7:30 p.m. • Thursday–Sunday, Nov. 6–9
2014 • Rated R • 89 minutes

Scarlett Johansson is a one-woman powerhouse in this feature about the capacity of the human mind. The movie suffers from an identity crisis—on one hand, it is a thriller involving an Asian crime ring, on the other, it is a sci-fi psychological tale, questioning how far we could unlock our potential as humans. Unfortunately, the movie is too short for either side to win out. Running at a brisk pace, “Lucy” wastes no time at getting right to the despicable plot. I would've preferred fewer gangland thug fights and much more thoughtful commentary with Professor Norman (Morgan Freeman). But I admire director Luc Besson's penchant for strong female characters, and with a less talented lead actress, Lucy would descend into the depths of pure sci-fi schlock. Rated R for strong violence, disturbing images and some sexuality.

The Fall

7:30 p.m. • Tuesday, Nov. 11
2006 • Rated R • 117 minutes

Indian director Tarsem Singh is well-known for his lavish, colorful, and fantastical films, and “The Fall” is no exception. The story starts in the 1920s, with an injured stunt man named Roy Walker in the hospital who weaves a rich tapestry of a tale for a fellow patient—a little girl named Alexandria—about five heroes who are bent on destroying a villain. As the story develops day by day (much like Scheherazade in the “1001 Nights”), Walker weaves real people in Alexandria's life into the story to make it more engaging. The story takes a darker turn when we discover Walker's ulterior motive—he will only tell more of the tale to Alexandria if she gets him morphine from the hospital pharmacy. Critics have given “The Fall” mixed reviews; some say it is more style than substance, while others applaud its unexpected twists and turns. One thing is for sure: if Tarsem is involved, you will be visually, if not mentally, dazzled. It is rated R for violent imagery.

Manhattan

7:30 p.m. • Wednesday, Nov. 12
1979 • Rated R • 96 minutes

Woody Allen, Diane Keaton and Meryl Streep—their lives and loves all set against the skyline of New York City to the tunes of the unduplicated George Gershwin. What's not to love? Nominated for two Oscars and a Golden Globe, this tongue-in-cheek dramedy follows the life of a divorced television writer (Woody Allen, of course) who is currently dating a 17-year-old student and finds himself falling in love with his best friend's mistress, played pitch perfectly by Diane Keaton. Shot in stark black-and-white, “Manhattan” explores the twists and turns love can take, but it mostly ends up being Woody's love letter to the Big Apple. It is rated R for some heavy relationship themes and discussion of adult topics.

Obvious Child

7:30 p.m. • Thursday–Sunday, Nov. 13–16
1979 • Rated R • 84 minutes

Life is hard for struggling comedienne Donna Stern, and it's just about to get worse—her one-night stand with an upstanding Christian boy results in an unwanted pregnancy. Starring breakout actress Jenny Slate, the character she portrays is as awkward and raw as the situation she finds herself in. Obvious Child doesn't sugar-coat the realities of life, which, if the preview is any indication, might make for some uncomfortable viewing. However, it is refreshing to have an honest film about the curveballs that life throws our way when we are/were in our 20s, and navigating those waters from college naiveté to true independent adulthood. Rated R for language and sexual content.

IONA Hosts C'89 Artists

IONA: Art Sanctuary will host a number of events in conjunction with University homecoming festivities today (Friday), Nov. 7–Sunday, Nov. 9.

A poetry reading and art exhibit by Cathy Carlisi of Atlanta, Ga., will be at 3 p.m., today, Nov. 7. The gallery will also be displaying photography by Dee Davis of Nashville, and prints and drawings by Adam Carlos of Telluride, Colo. All three artists are Sewanee graduates from the class of 1989, which is celebrating its 25th reunion this year.

Cathy Carlisi's poetry has appeared in Prairie Schooner, the Mid-American Review, Southern Review, the Atlanta Review and many others. Her paintings have been exhibited throughout the Southeast. Carlisi is president and chief creative officer of BrightHouse, a global consultancy firm.

Dee Davis is a realtor and swim coach in Nashville. She was a commercial photographer until everything went digital in about 2001. After 13 years of taking photos almost exclusively with her iPhone that were only published on Facebook, she realized resistance was futile.

She attended a wet plate photography workshop with Dale Burnstein in Indianapolis in September 2014. Davis' works that will be shown at the IONA show were taken at that workshop.

Adam Carlos is a second-generation artist who grew up in Sewanee. He is proficient in photography, painting and sculpture, but drawing lifelike and detailed graphite portraiture is his specialty. His painstaking dedication to accuracy makes Adam's portraits, landscape and equestrian drawings stand out.

The IONA gallery will also be open 3–5 p.m., Saturday, Nov. 8.

Holiday Market in Winchester

The Southern Tennessee Ladies Society is hosting its second annual Holiday Market, 9 a.m.–5 p.m., today Nov. 7, and 9 a.m.–3 p.m., Saturday, Nov. 8, at the Franklin County Annex, 839 Dinah Shore Blvd., in Winchester.

More than 45 local artists and crafters will have items for sale. There will be hourly door prizes and musical entertainment by Kelly Prince, the Tennessee Fiddle Orchestra and DeAnn Weller.

There will be handmade holiday decor, handcrafted items, jewelry, delicious homemade baked goods, concessions and much more. All funds support the group's scholarship for students in Coffee, Franklin, Grundy, Lincoln and Moore counties. For more information go to <southernladies.com>.

Tickets Available for Nutcracker on Nov. 15

The Nutcracker will return to Sewanee to help prepare everyone for the holiday season with a combined cast from the Sewanee Dance Conservatory and the Alabama Youth Ballet Theatre under the direction of David Herriott. Performances will be at 2:30 p.m. and 7 p.m., Saturday, Nov. 15, in Guerry Auditorium. Tickets are $10 for adults; $5 for children, students and seniors.

To preorder tickets, please email <wigginscreek@yahoo.com> or ask one of the cast members. Tickets will be available at the Fowler Center Dance Studio 2–4 p.m., Friday, Nov. 7; at Guerry Auditorium 3–7 p.m., Friday Nov. 14; and will be sold at the door one hour before each performance.

Organ Concert in All Saints'

Renowned organist Gail Archer will perform in All Saints' Chapel at 7:30 p.m., Thursday, Nov. 13. Her performance will feature selections from the Baroque and Romantic periods. Archer stands out in a male-dominated field, and hopes that her performances and recordings will draw attention to women organists and composers. “I'm on a mission to celebrate women organists and composers in liturgical music,” says Archer.

She serves as a chair in Barnard Women's College music department, as well as a concert organist at Vassar and musical director at Central Synagogue in New York City.

Archer is a Grammy-nominated, international organist, recording artist, choral conductor and lecturer. In spring 2010, she celebrated the 325th anniversary of the birth of Johann Sebastian Bach with six concerts around New York City, concluding with the “Art of Fugue at Central Synagogue.” Lucid Culture proclaimed, “Like the composers she chooses, Archer's playing spans the range of human emotions—with Bach, there's always plenty to communicate, but this time out it was mostly an irresistibly celebratory vibe.”

In 2009, her spring series, “Mendelssohn in the Romantic Century,” was inspired by Mendelssohn's extraordinary versatility as composer, conductor, performer and scholar, and included the organ music of his sister, Fanny Mendelssohn, and Clara Schumann. The series was recorded live and is available online at Meyer-Media. Archer was the first American woman to play the complete works of Olivier Messiaen for the centennial of the composer's birth in 2008.

Archer's music has been celebrated by the New York Times, which writes, “she played with an agility that met the music's coloristic and rhythmic demands.”

This is part of the University's Performing Arts Series. Tickets are $25 for adults, $20 for seniors and $10 for students. Sewanee students, faculty and staff are free with a University ID card.

Sewanee Review Open House on Tuesday

The Sewanee Review will have its fall open house at 8 p.m., Tuesday, Nov. 11, in the McGriff Alumni House. It will be an evening of flash readings, door prizes, food and drink.

Throughout its long and storied history, the Sewanee Review has fostered a thriving literary tradition in America and in our community on the mountain. Having remained in print since 1892—the longest sustained publication of a literary quarterly—the Sewanee Review attracts some of the most passionate writers in the world, new and old alike. Cormac McCarthy published the opening chapters to his first novel “The Orchard Keeper” here, in the same pages where many of Flannery O’Connor’s short stories appeared, as well as work by Wallace Stevens, T. S. Eliot, Walker Percy, Eudora Welty, Robert Penn Warren, William Faulkner, Ezra Pound, Sylvia Plath, Saul Bellow, Seamus Heaney, W. H. Auden, Anne Sexton, Wendell Berry and many others.

Occurring on Armistice Day and the 100th anniversary of the end of World War I, this year’s event will commemorate the 122nd year of publication of the Review. It will also celebrate the release of the fall issue with non-fiction by many Mountain familiars: Gerald Smith in the religion department, George Poe in the French department, Bill Engel in the English department, and George Core, the Review’s editor.

At the open house there will be flash readings by faculty, staff, community members and students of selected work from the Review. The reception will be catered by Julia’s. Be sure to drop your name in the basket for a number of door prizes, including a subscription to the Sewanee Review, a writers’ survival kit, a Barnes & Noble gift certificate, a bundle of books on the Great War, and a selection of books by the next recipient of the Aiken Taylor Award.

Also at the open house will be an announcement of the 29th recipient of the Aiken Taylor Award in Modern American Poetry.

Amanda Shires

Amanda Shires in Concert at SAS on Saturday

The Sewanee School of Letters presents Amanda Shires in concert at 7 p.m., Saturday, Nov. 8. She will be performing in McCrory Hall for Performing Arts on the campus of St. Andrew’s-Sewanee School. The concert is in conjunction with the School of Letters’ homecoming and reunion.

Shires, a poetry student in the School of Letters, released her album “Carrying Lightning” in 2011. It was followed by “Down Fell The Doves” in 2013.

Born in Texas, she lives in Nashville with her husband, Jason Isbell. “Down Fell the Doves” was praised in American Songwriter, the Wall Street Journal, the Washington Post and Rolling Stone.

David Menconi of the magazine Spin said that Shires “sings [...] like an earthbound Emmylou Harris.”

There is no charge for the show. For more information go to <www.facebook.com/events/873748052635976/>.

An Evening with Tony Earley in Chattanooga

The Southern Lit Alliance will present “An Evening with Tony Earley” as part of its So Lit Book Club at 5:30 p.m., Thursday, Nov. 13, at green|spaces in Chattanooga.

Earley is the author of two novels and three short story collections, among them “Jim the Boy” and “Here We Are in Paradise.” His fiction has earned a National Magazine Award, and has appeared in the New Yorker, Harper’s and Best American Short Stories. Earley’s latest book, “Mr. Tall,” published in August 2014, is a novella and a collection of short stories.

Named one of the 20 best writers of his generation by both Granta and the New Yorker, Earley’s work has appeared in the Oxford American, the New York Times book review, the Best American Short Stories and New Stories from the South. Earley is the Samuel Milton Fleming Chair of English at Vanderbilt University and lives in Nashville. He is a member of the Fellowship of Southern Writers.

The Southern Lit Alliance (formerly the Arts & Education Council) celebrates Southern writers and readers through community education and innovative literary arts experiences. It does this through programs, the Celebration of Southern Literature, education enrichment for children and special events. The So Lit Book Club is one of its outreach programs.

“An Evening with Tony Earley” is free and open to the public. “Mr. Tall” will be available for purchase at the reading. green|spaces is located at 63 East Main St., Chattanooga. For more information go to <SouthernLitAlliance.org/Happenings>.

Sewanee Cross Country Finishes Third and Fifth in Conference Championships

Competing on a chilly morning on Nov. 1 in Huntsville, Ala., the Sewanee men's and women's cross country teams managed respectable finishes at the Southern Athletic Association (SAA) conference championships.

In the women's 6k race, the Tigers finished third behind rivals Rhodes and Centre.

Senior Cate Hargrove finished eighth with a time of 23:18.20, while Ansley McDurmon was in ninth with a mark of 23:24.90.

Additionally, Amy Lee added a 13th-place finish, as she crossed the finish line in 23:41.60. All three student-athletes earned All-SAA honors with their top-20 finishes.

Rounding out the Tigers' top-five finishers were Katie Lafferrandre (27th/24:49.60) and Alexandra Bingham (32nd/25:07.00).

In the men's competition, Sewanee finished fifth with 104 points. The Tigers' average time of 27:47.70 was just seconds behind fourth-place Birmingham-Southern and third-place Rhodes.

Leading the way with All-SAA honors were Logan Stockton, who finished fourth with a time of 26:42.80, and Mark McAlister, who crossed the finish line in 12th with a time of 27:13.80.

Hudson Robb also ran well for a 23rd-place finish in 27:56.00. Finally, Jourdan Redden (32nd/28:32.00) and Alec Hill (33rd/28:34.10) closed out Sewanee's top-five runners.

St. Andrew's-Sewanee School Athletic Awards Cap Fall Season

Athletes at St. Andrew's-Sewanee School were honored on Oct. 29 with Fall Upper School Athletic Awards. After individual teams met with coaches prior to the event, all athletes and families met in McCrory Hall for presentation of the Most Improved Player, the Most Valuable Player and the Coaches' Award winners. Most Improved Player and Most Valuable Player are selected by the players on the team.

SAS celebrated the achievements of the varsity fall teams, including cross country, football, golf, mountain biking, soccer and volleyball.

SAS volleyball player Lexie Laurendine was named to the Division II-A East/Middle All District Team. The team finished in fifth place in the district.

The SAS golf team placed second in the Division II-A Regional Meet and qualified for the TSSAA Division II-A state golf championship. The team finished fifth overall. Individually, Tommy Oliver was in sixth place, Andrew Heitzenrater was 18th, Sam Thomas was 27th, and Aubrey Black and Jake Wiley were ranked 32nd.

Eighth-graders Sophia Patterson and Ty Klekotta represented the varsity cross country team in the Division II-A regionals. Patterson ran a 25:59 and placed 42nd. Klekotta came in 47th with a time of 26:23.

The football team finished the season 5-5. The varsity girls' soccer team struggled through a rebuilding year. The mountain biking team had not yet completed their season on awards night, but has since finished the season second in their league and first in the state.

SAS Hosts Cycling League State Championship Race, Milford Wins

The St. Andrew's-Sewanee varsity mountain biking team concluded its fall season in the state championship race for the Tennessee High School Cycling League. SAS hosted the race on its campus trails, with 68 riders from 10 schools, including independent riders, competing on Nov. 2 in cold but sunny conditions.

Twelve SAS riders raced in graded categories, with the junior varsity group riding 15 miles and freshman and sophomore groups completing 10 miles. The course was the most physically demanding of the race season, and included technical rocky sections, a large grass section and several challenging climbs.

SAS rider Ashton Milford retained her season leader's jersey by finishing first in the sophomore girls' race, and earned the state championship title in her division. Abby Mainzer stood on the podium for the third time this season after riding to a third-place finish in the junior varsity girls' division.

Senior Namkha Norbu raced ahead of two other riders to earn fourth place behind Mainzer. In overall season standings for the Tennessee League, Mainzer finished in third place, and Norbu finished in fifth place in the junior varsity group.

Twenty-two riders competed in the junior varsity boys' division. SAS senior Fields Ford rode his fastest race of the season to earn a spot on the podium in third place, while also finishing fourth in overall season standings for the league in the junior varsity group. Senior Matthew Baranco recovered from a crash late in Sunday's race to finish in 11th place. Baranco also earned fifth place in the overall season standings.

Colburn Hassman and Joshua Alvarez battled neck-and-neck in an exciting finish-line sprint to earn 14th and 15th places, respectively, in the junior varsity group, while Filip Martyni-Orwenowicz finished in 18th place.

SAS team members Fritz Stine, Crawford Emory and Andrew Bachman raced with eleven other riders in the very competitive sophomore boys' division. Stine earned a sixth-place finish, with Emory and Bachman racing to eighth- and tenth-place finishes, respectively. As the youngest SAS rider, Matthew Mollica raced in the freshman boys' division to earn sixth place, his highest finish of the season.

In the final rankings for the Tennessee League's second race season, St. Andrew's-Sewanee garnered second place behind Marshall County (Ky.) High School. The SAS varsity mountain biking team is coached by Speed Baranco, Beth Pride Ford and Rob Bachman. The coaches are grateful for support from team parents, the SAS community, Crossroads restaurant and Woody's Bicycles.

High school mountain biking is becoming a popular sport in the Southeast. Georgia and Alabama are new league members in the National Interscholastic Cycling Association (NICA). After two seasons the Tennessee League has grown with the number of riders increasing by 20 percent from 2013. Future growth for high school mountain biking will require community awareness and participation, trail accessibility and financial support from individuals and businesses.

More information about how to support high school mountain biking can be found on the national website <www.nationalmtb.org>.

Community members and local businesses interested in sponsoring the Tennessee League may also find information at <www.tennesseemt.org>.

OVERTIME

by John Shackelford

Who knew that damsel fishes could be so territorial around their reefs in Australia? Or who could understand the balance of the ecosystem where the fish need the reef and the reef needs the fish? These were things I scarcely considered until Jordan Casey '09, a Ph.D. candidate from James Cook University in Australia, came back to her alma mater to present her work at a talk in Gailor Auditorium earlier this week. I had a late breakfast this past Monday with Jordan, along with her colleague and close friend Simon Brandl, who were both presenting their research later that day as guests of Sewanee's Biology Seminar Series. Jordan was a member of the 2007 women's tennis team that finished third in the nation and played number one singles and doubles as a senior in 2009. She graduated from Sewanee with a 4.0 plus several hundreds of decimal points that now seem so unimportant. Many alums are in town this week to rekindle old friendships and head straight for their favorite frat house in search of a cold glass. Jordan headed straight for the lab to catch up with her professors and see what is brewing in a warm petri dish.

Later that evening I made a U-turn and headed downtown for dinner with David Dye, '90, who came back to Sewanee to show his university to two young men who are high school seniors and friends of the second of his four daughters. David is a Hall of Fame tennis player who was on four conference championship teams, two of which finished top 10 in the nation during his time in Sewanee. One of his guests was a basketball prospect, and the other plays high school football. David's love for Sewanee overflowed as he described his experiences on this Mountain almost 25 years ago. Both these prospective student-athletes knew that there must be something special about this place if someone who has become as successful as David gives all the credit to Sewanee for developing his communication and business skills.

Neither Jordan nor David will be around this weekend for our Homecoming festivities, but like many alums, they found their own reasons to return home. Whether giving a talk to our current students or touring prospective ones, both Jordan and David share a common bond with a large family of people who often feel the need for the comfort and familiarity of a worn stool in Shenanigans.

When I first met Jordan, she was an extremely shy high school girl who struggled to say much in public. I worried that college might overwhelm her. Instead she overwhelmed us with her intellect and inner drive. We took a trip to Jackson, Miss., one weekend to play Millsaps College shortly after Jordan had returned from studying birds on the Galapagos Islands. She sat in the front seat of the van with her laptop open and I asked her to tell me about what she was working on. Six hours later I was close to a Ph.D. of my own in the study of South American birds. What impressed me the most during that trip was witnessing how certain students truly love learning. Jordan was one who wasn't in it for the grade on the test. She loved to see, feel and explore life outside of the lab. We often had to stop tennis practice when an interesting bug, bird or butterfly ventured past the courts.

David learned to play the piano at an early age and could do math problems in his head that would have confused a person like me, even if I was armed with three calculators and a Pentagon-grade computer. Although he was an economics major, his specialty was investing in friendships. He still travels annually to Ireland with many of his Sewanee contemporaries for a golf weekend and keeps up with guys from the basketball and tennis teams. He is now business partners with Boyd Douglas; they played doubles as freshmen. He and Boyd worked hard, pulled more than their share of the load, and did the math equations necessary to take their company public.

There is now an impressive list of schools ranked by student outcomes called the Alumni Factor. Sewanee does extremely well overall and ranks highest in "Intellectual and Social Development." They list factors such as how many students would choose this same college again. As you glance through the study, it is not hard to quantify what Sewanee means to our alumni, but the report fails to measure how this ecosystem is codependent. As I listened to old stories from good friends, I realized what they missed in that report was how much an old coach loves and needs them.

SAS's Patterson & Klekotta at Regionals

As eighth-graders, Sophia Patterson and Ty Klekotta ran on the St. Andrew's-Sewanee varsity cross country team and after outstanding seasons, they earned the privilege to represent SAS on Oct. 23 in the Division II Class A Region Meet.

"These girls have worked so hard all season," said coach Molly Schaefer. "I'm proud of them for the work they have done to get here."

They both ran well despite the chilly weather in Nashville. Patterson ran a 25:59 and placed 42nd, and Klekotta came in right behind her with a time of 26:23 and crossed the finish line in 47th.

This meet concluded the cross country season for the SAS team. This seven-person team cumulatively dropped more than 22 minutes from their race times this year, which is a major accomplishment.

"I've enjoyed getting to know these athletes this season," Schaefer said, "and I so look forward to seeing what they do in the future."

NATURENOTES

Nuts (the Edible Kind) on Campus

This special Homecoming edition of Nature Notes features nuts on campus—walnuts, that is, and hickory nuts and acorns.

Between the Chapel and McClurg, there are two black walnut trees that have covered the ground with an amazing number of green balls—their fruit, containing the ridged black nut visible when the outer covering is smashed. I watched a squirrel take a good fifteen to twenty minutes to gnaw its way through that nut—it must have been worth it! Sometimes the globe-shaped fruit is still hanging in the leafless trees.

Next to the Chapel is a post oak. Some say they are planted near churches because of their somewhat cruciform leaves. The acorns on the ground below are not numerous and are quite small, perhaps smaller than normal. In any case, they are usually somewhat smaller than those of the white oak, of which there are many in that same area between McClurg and the Chapel. White oaks and post oaks are closely related to chestnut oaks. A trip out to one of the views (Green's View, the Memorial Cross) will lead you to their acorns, much larger still and often colorful with red, yellow, green and brown when fresh, almost like little Easter eggs. All of these usually separate from their caps when they fall.

Further along University Avenue, in Elliott Park, are some good specimens of hickories. On the far side of the area, next to a retaining wall below the Phi Gamma Delta house, is a good-sized sand or pale hickory. Its fruits are easily recognized by the yellowish scales on the husk, which split to the base, revealing the thin-shelled, pale nut. Nearer the Japanese garden is hickory with similar fruits, but they are smooth and green. This is the mockernut, so-called because of the small nut within the thick husk.

Are Lady Beetles Invading Your Home?

by Creig C. Kimbro, UT Extension Agent
Special to the Messenger

If you don't have lady beetles yet, you probably will. It is the Multicolored Asian Lady Beetle that somehow, some way, manages to work its way into your living quarters.

The trigger for the lady beetle migration seems to occur the second sunny day above 65 degrees Fahrenheit after the first cold snap in October (depending on the weather). The lady beetles follow their instinctive behavior and fly to sunny, exposed areas while preparing to hibernate. Most beetle flights occur between 1 p.m. and 4 p.m. after strong afternoon sun. The beetles are most attracted to light-colored buildings and walls located in full sun.

To manage the lady beetles you should first seal all exterior entryways, such as cracks or gaps around windows, eaves, siding, doors, roofs and other points of access.

Multicolored Asian lady beetles at a windowsill.

Insecticides such as Demand, Demon WP, Suspend or Talstar applied to potential entry sites such as the exterior edges of windows and doors or along the foundation and roofline can be somewhat effective. Be sure to read the label.

Once the lady beetles have invaded the inside of the home, there is not a recommended insecticide. The best way to get them out is to vacuum them up. Be sure to empty the vacuum.

While indoors, the beetles tend to move upwards towards the light. Try opening the top two inches of the window on warm winter days and letting the beetles out.

Remember to be gentle with the Multicolored Asian Lady Beetle because they can inject a yellow stain or fluid that can show up on walls and fabric that could have an odor. The lady beetle is also a very beneficial insect that may help you this spring to eliminate all those bad insects that always manage to create havoc in the garden.

Smokey

Theo

Pets of the Week

Meet Smokey & Theo

The Franklin County Humane Society's Animal Harbor offers these two delightful pets for adoption.

Smokey is an adorable Basset/Beagle mix (sometimes referred to as "Bagels") with a very demure personality. She is slow to trust new people and really needs an adopter who will take some time to get to know her. Smokey is heartworm-negative, up-to-date on shots and spayed.

Theo is a gentle, affectionate, cream-colored Tabby juvenile "Kitten." He likes to talk to the shelter staff when he wants attention or kibble. Theo is negative for FeLV and FIV, house-trained, up-to-date on shots and neutered.

Every Friday is Black Friday at Animal Harbor. On Fridays, adoption fees will be reduced 50 percent for black or mostly black pets more than 4 months old who have been at Animal Harbor for more than a month. Pets adopted from Animal Harbor qualify for a free post-adoption wellness exam by local veterinarians.

Call Animal Harbor at 962-4472 for information and check out the other pets at <www.animalharbor.com>. Enter their drawing on this site for a free spay or neuter for one of your pets.

Please help Animal Harbor continue to save abandoned pets. Donations can be sent to the Franklin County Humane Society, P. O. Box 187, Winchester, TN 37398.

 Music on Saturdays starting in May

by Phoebe Bates

Homecoming

"Morituri te salutamus," cries
Malikovitch. The grandstands rise,
Deafening November with their answering roar.

Apollo soars, the drums go out
Leaving a heavy silence. Then, with a shout
The referees let the lions out.

—"Homecoming Game" by Scott Bates

Sound the trumpets, beat the drums!
Welcome, conquering alums!
On high your foaming beakers raise
And summon back the Good Old Days!

—with apologies to George Friedrich Handel
