

Mountain Goat Trail Could Have $1 Million Annual Impact on Local Economy

Babson Center Issues Economic Analysis Report

The completed Mountain Goat Trail could bring more than $1.2 million in annual economic benefits to the area, according to a report issued Nov. 20. The economic impact analysis was written by students who are part of the Babson Center for Global Commerce at Sewanee. The trail, when completed, will connect Cowan to Palmer.

"All the stakeholders connected with the Mountain Goat Trail—elected officials, business owners and private citizens—have always believed that the trail would bring economic as well as health benefits to the Mountain. Now, thanks to the Babson Center and the University of the South, we have research to support that belief," said Janice Thomas, board president of the Mountain Goat Trail Alliance.

The report was prepared by the Babson Center's class of 2015 Carey Fellows. Data used in the report included studies of other rail-to-trail projects, local demographic statistics and statistically relevant formulas for calculating effects of tourism on a local economy.

"The Mountain Goat Trail offers unique opportunities to connect communities, as well as attract tourists from across the Southeast. The construction of the trail also benefits the local communities in many ways, ranging from offering a habitat for better outdoor education for local schools to offering community members a place to exercise," the report stated.

The Mountain Goat Trail is a rail-to-trail community outdoor recreation project to convert the abandoned Mountain Goat railroad right-of-way into a multi-use recreational corridor connecting Grundy, Marion, and Franklin counties. Donations to the Mountain Goat Trail Alliance are tax-deductible. For more information, go to <www.mountaingoattrail.org>.

Organist Filsell Performs at All Saints' Chapel Tonight

Jeremy Filsell, acknowledged as one of only a few virtuoso performers on both piano and organ, will perform at 7:30 p.m. (tonight) Friday, Nov. 22, in All Saints' Chapel as part of the University of the South's Performing Arts Series.

Filsell was an organ scholar at Keble College Oxford and as a graduate, he studied piano at the Royal College of Music, later completing a Ph.D. at Birmingham Conservatoire. He has taught at the Royal Academy of Music in London and at universities, summer schools and conventions in both the U.K. and U.S., and has performed around the world. He now combines international performing and teaching activities with being artistin-residence at the National Cathedral in Washington, D.C.

Gramophone magazine has called Filsell's recordings of Marcel Dupré's complete organ works "one of the greatest achievements in organ recording."

Tickets are $25 for adults, $20 for seniors and $10 for students. (Admission is free with University of the South ID.) For more information go to <perform ingarts.sewanee.edu/>.

Community Fund Launches New "Light Up Lives" Project

by Leslie Lytle Messenger Staff Writer

At the Nov. 19 meeting of the Board of Commissioners of the Sewanee Utility District of Franklin and Marion Counties, the board reviewed the 2014 budget. The utility hopes to complete the automated meter reading (AMR) installation without taking out a loan.

AMR will enable SUD to retrieve customer meter data via a radio transmitter system. By replacing aging meters which are typically inaccurate, SUD projects a revenue increase. SUD Manager Ben Beavers budgeted a 2 percent increase in water and sewer sales and said the added revenue could be as high as 8 percent.

The cost of implementing the AMR technology will be spread over two years, $250,000 in 2013 and $100,000 projected for 2014. Beavers said SUD has sufficient cash reserves to implement AMR without taking out a loan, although cash reserves will drop to $850,000. Beavers projects it will take four to five years to build the cash reserve back to its present level of $1.4 million. The revenue increase will come from more accurate metering data and a 3 percent rate increase is budgeted for 2014.

Beavers said SUD's consulting firm, Raftelis Financial Inc., recommends the cash reserve should not drop below 25 percent of the operating budget, projected at $1.03 million for 2014. The commissioners questioned whether cash reserves should equal 100 percent of the operating budget. Beavers will seek the advice of the state comptroller and report at the Dec. 17 commissioners' meeting.

Jeremy Filsell

The AMR system will be the first capital improvement accomplished without a loan. SUD is also undertaking repair to the sewer system and, likewise, plans to accomplish this project without borrowing money. Taking out a loan to implement AMR would cost the utility $25,000-$30,000.

SAS Wreath Sale Continues

The eighth annual St. Andrew's-Sewanee School sixth-grade holiday balsam wreath sale is continuing. Proceeds from the sales will benefit several different outreach projects, including ongoing support of students at Amazing Grace Orphanage in Uganda and a project in Haiti. In addition to these predetermined causes, each sixth-grader will be given the opportunity to research three charities and select one for his or her own donation.

The balsam wreaths are shipped fresh from Maine. They measure at least 22 inches and come with a big red bow, six pinecones and several sprigs of red berries. The wreaths cost $24 and will arrive during the week of Dec. 11–15.

To order wreaths, contact any St. Andrew's -Sewanee sixth-grade student or contact Cindy Potter by email <cpotter@sasweb.org> or call 598-5651, ext. 1019. The final date for ordering a wreath is Wednesday, Dec. 4.

The Community Fund of the South Cumberland Plateau is offering holiday donation cards for purchase at many area businesses as a creative alternative to empty holiday gift giving. For a $10 donation, folks will receive a "Light Up Lives" card that reads: "A gift to the Community Fund of the South Cumberland Plateau has been made in your honor." The person who purchased the card then fills in the name of the family member or friend they want to remember and mails the card in the envelope provided.

"This is truly a way to give the gift of community," said Bonnie McCardell, the Light Up Lives project chair. "A donation to the Community Fund is a simple way to remember people during this season while investing in those who live on the Cumberland Plateau." During the last two years, the Community Fund's grants to schools and nonprofit organizations have changed lives, McCardell said. "The grant recipients have begun new grass-roots initiatives in health, jobs and education.

Grants have helped well-established nonprofits—the Mountain Goat Trail, Blue Monarch, Mountain T.O.P., Folks at Home operation, ending its contract with the management firm Severn Trent, it had no cash reserve. SUD has built the cash reserve over the past seven years with careful management practices.

Beavers reviewed other budget highlights. He anticipates revenue will remain relatively flat, increasing from $1.3 million in 2013 to $1.37 million in 2014. Operating expenses will increase from $1.02 million in 2013 to $1.03 million in 2014. Beavers

NUTCRACKER JOY To the Editor:

As the performance of "The Nutcracker: A Yuletide Ballet" ended this year, one child stopped David Herriott with an excited question. "What part will I dance next year?"

This was the third year for Alabama Youth Ballet and Sewanee Dance Conservatory to offer "The Nutcracker." The children, students and adults who dance in it do not come just from Sewanee and Huntsville. They are from communities all around us. And "The Nutcracker" is not just a weekend involvement. It takes rehearsals, but it also takes a vibrant classical ballet

FIRE DEPT. SAVES HOME To the Editor:

A huge thank you to the men of the Sewanee Fire Department for their work on Friday, Nov. 15. My wife and I were awakened at 5 a.m. to the loud banging on our door by our friend and assistant chief Wayne Caldwell, informing us of a ground fire surrounding most of our home and about to engulf my small barn. Quick work by these wonderful young men saved the barn and got control of the fire around the house. Boy, were we glad to see those guys!

A big thanks also to the state crews that had to come in and get control of the fire down the bluff and in the forest near our place. Thanks also to the neighbor who took the time to call in the fire early that morning.

I had just paid my property taxes and now realize very dramatically what those funds are used for. You won't hear any moaning from me for a long time.

I felt so proud to be part of this community and this great country as I watched these young men go about their job serving our community and its citizens.

Sewanee Names New PPS Director

Mike Gardner has been appointed director of physical plant services at the University following a national search, according to Frank X. Gladu, Sewanee's vice president for administrative services. Gardner will begin his duties the first week of December.

Gardner has an extensive background in facility management and 25 years of experience in higher education administration, including service until 2011 as Butler University's vice president for operations. At Butler, Gardner was involved in the conversion of a vehicle-centric core campus into a green, pedestrian-centered setting, as well as the support of Butler's Center for Urban Ecology.

"I am honored to be appointed as Sewanee's new director of physical plant services. Sewanee holds a special place in private higher education, and I am excited to support Dr. McCardell and the administration in implementing the new Master Plan. I will work hard to secure the resources, human and capital, required to provide prompt and professional services to students, faculty, staff, the Sewanee community and the Domain," said Gardner.

"Mike Gardner brings a significant set of skills to the University of the South. I am excited about his collegiate facilities management experience, along with his business and administrative background," Gladu said. "I also would like to thank the entire PPS management team and staff for their diligent efforts and a job well done throughout the four-month search process for a new director."

and many more; and they have also encouraged those with ideas and energy to step forward and launch new projects," she said. "The Light Up Lives holiday cards are a perfect way for people to support the Community Fund during this season of giving."

Light Up Lives cards will be available for purchase at businesses across the Plateau. Look for cards at the Blue Chair, Citizens State Bank, Citizens Tri-County Bank, Dutch Maid Bakery, the Grundy County Courthouse, the Grundy Heritage Center, Julia's Fine Foods, the Monteagle Mountain Chamber of Commerce, the Monteagle Inn and Southern Community Bank.

"We are pleased with the many donors who give to the Community Fund," said Chair Scott Parrish. "And we hope that offering these holiday cards will be a way to include many more in our ranks of supporters. "Though $10 is a small amount, when you use it to purchase a card, it makes a big statement about our community and how we care for each other."

attributed 17 percent of the increase to rising health care costs. For SUD's employee health insurance plan to qualify, it was necessary to add visual and dental care for children to the plan.

SUD budgeted $261,000 for debt expense in 2014 (the new water plant loan) and $420,000 for capital improvements, nearly half for AMR and sewer repair.

The board will vote on the budget at its December meeting after reviewing the comptroller's recommendation on cash reserves.

In other business, Beavers reported that the $2,200 repair to the water tank was $1,200 less than expected.

Two SUD commissioners will be elected in January to fill the at-large seats for District B and District C. The SUD commissioners currently holding these seats, Randall Henley and Karen Singer, will seek re-election.

All SUD customers are eligible to seek election to the board. Potential candidates must present a nominating petition with the signature of ten SUD customers by Dec. 12. Nominating petitions are available 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. weekdays, at the SUD business office.

MEETYOURNEIGHBOR

by Kevin Cummings Messenger Staff Writer

After surviving a terrorist attack and wading deep into catastrophe, Courtney Cowart's life is much quieter here on the Mountain.

The new director of the School of Theology's Programs Center moved to Sewanee four months ago following a path with sharper curves than Roark's Cove Road.

Sitting in her office at the School of Theology, she wears a plush red sweater, black slacks and brown boots. Cowart is soft-spoken as she talks about growing up in the 1960s in Atlanta, the daughter of parents active in the civil rights movement. Her mother was an assistant for Coretta Scott King.

She speaks about a documentary on Martin Luther King Jr., which opened in movie theaters shortly after his assassination. People flocked to see the film and theaters were sold out, so she and her mother ended up at a theater on Auburn Avenue, not far from Ebenezer Baptist Church. There she learned one of her first social justice lessons.

Kristin M. Williams, CRNF

Courtney Cowart

"The theatre was totally rat-infested," Cowart says. "I remember a woman saying, 'Honey, don't sit in that chair, that's a rat nest in that chair.' And people were catching the rats and carrying them out with newspaper all through the movie. That was a shocking experience for me, a real eye-opener."

That early education in social justice foreshadowed future ministries. She says she loved the church even as a child because she already had the "sense of God's presence."

Cowart thought she was to be a normal scholar, teaching at a seminary, but soon after defending her dissertation at General Seminary, those plans changed. She worked for the grants department for historic Trinity Church in New York. On the morning of Sept. 11, 2001, she was overseeing the taping of a television special at Trinity Church featuring Rowan Williams, Archbishop of Wales and future Archbishop of Canterbury. Williams was to deliver four meditations in the TV studio on the fourth floor of a building less than a block from the south tower of the World Trade Center.

At 8:46 a.m., the world changed as the first plane hit the north tower. Cowart chronicles the surreal evacuation and chaos that followed in her book, "An American Awakening."

The second tower collapsed, and she ran from the massive black cloud of dust and debris. She stopped and turned.

"With every drop of being I inhale and summon all the life within me. Then, I release it, screaming in my head, 'Take me!'" Cowart wrote. The debris storm swallowed her.

"I literally feel the life force inside me starting at my toes and rising through my spine go out of my head and rocket for somewhere and Somedo," Cowart says. "We wanted to bring about systemic change and healing of deep, deep social wounds, and very early on we decided it wasn't going to be about the quick fix."

The two catastrophes carved a stronger passion in Cowart.

"If I hadn't had those experiences, I'm not sure I'd have quite the depth of conviction that I have about how important that work can be," she says.

"I've seen what kind of impact the church can have in communities and so the kind of training we are bringing to the Programs Center and offering lay people is going to be the kind of training that can set the laity on fire and really rebuild the church's credibility as a positive force in society, a response to that longing that so many people in the church have to exercise their faith in a way that's meaningful and really matters," she says.

The Programs Center is already home to Education for Ministry (EFM), a world-renowned training program. Cowart says she wants to build on that "gold standard" flagship program. A number of new initiatives for leadership and education are underway, including incorporating VocationCare, a vocational discernment and ministry design system created by Cowart and associate director James Goodmann.

Recently, about 20 leaders of agricultural ministries gathered in Sewanee for "Faith, Farm and Food." A national network for people in agrarian ministries could be headquartered at the Programs Center, Cowart notes.

Outside of her work, Cowart is a great cook, with a special interest in New Orleans and French food. She has New Orleans roots; both her mom and stepmom are from the Crescent City.

<sup>4</sup>T'm trying to develop my grilling skills now that I'm up here in the mountains," she says. "For Christmas I'm going to ask for a really great Weber grill so I can start practicing."

Community Chest Spotlight Community Action Committee

The 2013-14 Sewanee Community Chest Fund Drive is underway. The power of people helping people makes a difference in the life of the community. ponsored by the Sewanee Civic Association, the Community Chest raises money yearly for local charitable organizations serving the area. This year's goal is $108,000. To date, 51 percent of the goal has been reached.

This week's recipient spotlight is on the Community Action Committee.

The CAC is Otey Parish's primary outreach ministry, and has been in existence for more than 39 years. The mission of the CAC is to provide assistance to persons in crisis; to provide services related to basic human needs; and to identify ways to break the cycle of poverty and need. The CAC director and volunteers serve more than 75 families. Some families regularly receive food and financial assistance, while others receive only occasional support.

The CAC is requesting $15,000 to help support its mission and continue its work among the poorest of the poor in the community. The needs are great, and there is no other organization or agency that provides the services and safety net for the poor, hungry and oppressed. CAC provides food, and also assistance for utilities, medical, dental, housing and educational needs.

The CAC receives other income from the community, including businesses, Otey Parish, grants and individuals. Its expenses totaled more than $36,000 from January to July 2013.

The goal of the Sewanee Community Chest is to help citizens by funding the community. The Community Chest is a 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization, and donations are tax-deductible. ## SAS Supports Outreach Projects Near and Far

Students at St. Andrew's-Sewanee School are supporting outreach projects near and far this fall.

Grace Liu, '16, and Vanessa Luo, '16, collected more than 60 coats for distribution through Mountain T.O.P. in Altamont earlier this fall.

Allison Bruce, '15, is taking classmates to help distribute food at the monthly food pantry at Morton Memorial Methodist Church.

Taylor Ballard, '14, led a fund-raising effort for breast cancer awareness.

Sixth-graders Aidan Smith and Thomas Stapleton are raising funds and awareness for victims of the recent disaster in the Philippines. Mrs. Potter's sixth-grade class is in the midst of their annual wreath sale to raise money for a variety of outreach projects, including ongoing support of the Amazing Grace Orphanage in Uganda.

And, on December 13, SAS chaplain Bude Van Dyke and teacher Rachel Malde will be performing a benefit concert at Crossroads Café to help raise funds for building materials and supplies for the annual SAS Jamaica Outreach trip. The latest project, with a holiday theme, will be another opportunity for area residents to easily and enjoyably help students who are helping out around the world. Ornament purchases will benefit both the gift recipient and povertystricken communities in Haiti.

Vanessa Moss, '16, and Savannah Lockwood,'14, are currently spearheading an ornament-making project to benefit the Haiti-Sewanee Institute.

Students are meetingduringtheir work periods to create and decorate ornaments that will be offered for sale at the community Christmas Tree Lighting in Angel Park on Friday, Dec. 6.

The ornament project was inspired by SAS's all-school reading of "Mountains Beyond Mountains," the account of Paul Farmer's activities to build public health facilities on the central plateau of Haiti, and a subsequent presentation by Sewanee professor Deb Mc-Grath and her students. McGrath and her interns described the need and work that is underway in Haiti. They were joined by Sam Smith, '17, school nurse Janice Thomas and local resident Peggy Farmer, who worked alongside McGrath's spring break crew. Inspired by the talk, several SAS students initiated projects to help support McGrath's work.

The talk inspired St. Andrew's-Sewanee's Global Outreach club to donate $2,000 to the Sewanee Haiti Institute to help fund shade coffee projects in rural villages. The money was raised last year through bake sales and sales of "Grub Day" bracelets that give SAS students permission to be out of dress code once a month. The ornament project will provide additional funds. Lockwood has also launched a project to collect gently used (and climate appropriate) footwear to be delivered to Haiti by Sewanee students this spring.

To learn more about these and other Global Outreach efforts at SAS, contact faculty sponsor Burki Gladstone at

This season, specifically the last two weeks, a very particular stripe of plant has my attention—the long-lasting fall color shrubs. This palette of plants does not even take into account the vast choices among evergreens. As we creep toward winter, and the bulk of the autumn show is over, what is there to hold interest? I have realized there are some standouts that flourish on the Mountain. These plants can stretch garden interest as far as possible into the bleak months ahead.

The oakleaf hydrangea is a fabulous plant with a full repertoire of seasonal benefits and durability. Currently, on my exposed bank of hydrangeas, the leaves are still largely intact and are of the most beautiful color. I am reminded of a cabernet sauvignon, a deep, very alive purple. Driving near Benedict and the SAE house today, I noticed some arms of this reaching out from the privet, the victorious invader. Be warned, it can be deer salad.

In addition to foliage now, the oakleaf show goes on all year long. In the early summer, large panicles, cone-shaped flower heads, emerge. Different varieties offer niche benefits such as extremely white flowers or a pinker than normal flower as it dies and dries.

As I have said, fall is foliage, but then some. The spent and dried flower heads, some 8 inches long or more, grace the tip of the stems with a seasonally appropriate crepe paper appearance. Once the leaves are entirely gone, when the garden is most desperate for any benefit, the trunks and stems have an intricate exfoliating pattern.

Other attributes are ease of propagation and ultimate size. Propagation is as easy as finding root suckers to pot up or put in a nursery area. Size-wise, I have seen one Mountain specimen that although facing due west on a bluff, sited in an alcove of stone walls three stories tall, is more than 15 feet tall. Most would realistically top out at 7 to 10 feet, and as wide.

Culturally, the only real challenge is keeping an eye on the water while the shrub gets established and isn't that much of a challenge.

Many, many other plants fill some or all of these qualifications. The burning bush (euonymus alatus), is another popular choice. The fiery red leaves did not last until this writing but they put on quite a show. The main downside is their invasive tendency.

One I especially like, for its chartreuse leaves lasting very late, is sweetshrub, aka bubby bush (calycanthus floridus). Though not extremely showy in flower, the intricate flowers are pleasantly fragrant. Calycanthus is a native, but this does not mean it is without sin. These plants spread vigorously from the base so they need room and a strict pruning regimen.

As always, I invite your questions and comments. Please contact me at <buckgorrell@gmail.com> with any advice or inquiries regarding gardening on the Mountain.

HEARING HEALTH NEWS

by Debbie Gamache,

AND EVEN MORE...

Expect a period of adjustment. Remember, once you get your new hearing aids you will need a period of several weeks to get used to the daily care and maintenance of them. More importantly, the biggest adjustment you will go through is listening with your new hearing aids. You will hear sounds you have not heard for a long, long time, and some of these will be enjoyable sounds such as birds or the voices of your children or grandchildren. Other sounds are the more annoying sounds that we need to hear for our safety or general knowledge of what is happening around us, and these include the refrigerator, the sound of our own footsteps or turning the page of a newspaper. Be patient. It takes time for the brain to relearn all of these sounds.

Hearing aid technology has advanced enormously in the past five years. As a result, Audiologists are able to help persons with the "difficult-to-fit" hearing loss. If you have questions about hearing loss and/or hearing aids, please feel free to contact us at The Hearing Center, LLC. We are located at 705B Northwest Atlantic St. in Tullahoma. You can call us at (931) 393-2051 or toll-free at (888) 303-2051.

SEWANEE UNION THEATRE Friday-Sunday, Nov. 22–24, 7:30 p.m. The Bling Ring

Rated R • 90 minutes

We all know that the celebrity-worship culture has gotten out of hand, but "The Bling Ring" tells the true story of some teenage girls in LA who take their obsession to a new level. Sofia Coppola's tart and clever film is adapted from the Vanity Fair article, "The Suspect Wore Louboutins." A group of girls use the Internet to track the whereabouts of stars such as Paris Hilton and Kirsten Dunst. When the celebrities are out of town, the girls break into their homes and steal their possessions, which they sometimes parade to friends and sometimes sell. Emma Watson and Taissa Farmiga star. One reviewer wrote, "It could have been one of those ripped-from-the-headlines quickies you see on subpar cable. Instead, "The Bling Ring" plugs into the zeitgeist of trash culture and sparks like a live wire." Rated R for teen drug and alcohol use, and for language including some brief sexual references.

Monsters University

(No show on Thanksgiving)

Rated G • 95 minutes

Mike Wazowski and James P. Sullivan are an inseparable pair, but that wasn't always the case. From the moment these two mismatched monsters met, they couldn't stand each other. "Monsters University" unlocks the door to how Mike and Sulley overcame their differences and became the best of friends. Billy Crystal and John Goodman reprise their roles as Mike and Sully; this time they are joined by Steve Buscemi, Helen Mirren and Sean Hayes.

Reviewers were a bit tepid about this sequel; but this is Pixar, so the standards may be unreasonably high. One reviewer wrote, "An amusing and amiable addition to Pixar's roster of animated coming-of-age -LWstories." Rated G.

Hughes Publishes Book on Art & Healing

Barbara Hughes of Sewanee has just published "Enfolded in Silence: A Story in Art of Healing from Sexual Trauma in Childhood" (Border Press, 2013). This book of paintings, poetry and narrative tells the story of healing from hild sexual abuse. It also contains a manual of things that help in healing. "Many adults walk around with horrendous pain inside," Hughes said. "For some, this is because of sexual abuse they experienced in their childhood. At least one in four (some studies say one in three) girls and one in six boys are raped, molested, fondled and otherwise sexually abused in the United States."

Hughes said, "People who heal from this kind of childhood come healers for others.'

Early praise for "Enfolded in Silence" includes: Barbara the viewer down into the raw depths of trauma and upwards by grace to experience with her a journey of incarnational redemption ... Highly recommended for anyone who has experienced abuse on the level of personal desecration."—Isabel Anders, author of "Miss Marple: Christian Sleuth."

"This is a profoundly hopeful book ... The book ... will be helpful for those of us who have experienced trauma of any kind."-The Rev. John deBeer, Rector, St. Mark's Episcopal Church, Burlington, Mass.

"'Enfolded in Silence" is a memoir that professes with bold colors and words that healing is possible for all. Barbara Hughes, through personal story, art and poetry, traces the courageous intentional journey of healing which took place over many years of suffering and searching. Now as a truth-teller and healer of souls, Barbara stands firmly on the ground of all being. We are blessed because of her story."—The Rev. Canon Hannah Anderson, Diocese of New Hampshire.

Hughes is an artist, teacher, and workshop leader whose work is centered in the connections between art, spirituality and healing. She has exhibited her figurative sculptures and paintings in a variety of venues throughout the country, and her Cathedral Nativity is the official crèche of the Washington National Cathedral.

Hughes has taught art and spirituality for many years. She leads workshops, retreats and support groups, using art for women survivors of child sexual abuse from her studio, Rahamim Retreat and Clay House, and for churches and other healing centers.

"I hope this book will help survivors heal and educate the rest of us," Hughes said.

Concert to Benefit Area Food Banks

The Cowan Center for the Arts will host Memphis musician Andy Cohen at 7 p.m. today (Friday), Nov. 22. The full amount of the ticket price ($5) will be donated to Second Harvest of Middle Tennessee and the Grundy County Food Bank.

Cohen sings the songs that presentday traditions are built upon. His concerts are funny and fast-paced, bringing the roots of folk and blues into the present with humor and skill. His special focus is on Piedmont-style country blues.

A versatile favorite performer at festivals including Old Songs, Fox Valley, King Biscuit, Chicago Blues Festival and Winnipeg, he is also a musicologist of sorts, teaching workshops on topics such as how music theory applies to the picking of Rev. Gary Davis. For many years, he made his living doing performances and touring with the Old Guys.

Recently Cohen was honored with two Lifetime Achievement awards: one from the Autoharp Hall of Fame for his work with the Dolceola; the other, the Eisteddfod Award, is given to people who have made a substantive contribution to the continuance of traditional music.

Second Harvest of Middle Tennessee and Grundy County Food Bank are both nonprofit food banks vital to caring for the hungry across the Plateau.

Burris Signs with MTSU

On Nov. 13, St. Andrew's-Sewanee School senior Jenna Burris of Manchester, Tenn., signed an NCAA Letter of Intent to golf for Division-I Middle Tennessee State University (MTSU) in the fall.

Burris has received Tennessee Golf Association and All-American Junior Golf Tour honors. She won Player of the Year honors on the 2012 TGA Taylor-Made Adidas Jr. Tour and MVP for the 2013 Tennessee Junior Cup. The 6-foot-1-inch student is a long-ball hitter. She played in her first state tournament in 2009 as an eighth-grader, tying for eighth place that year. As a junior, she placed fourth in the state tournament and finished third this year. During her SAS career, Burris also played volleyball and basketball, excelling at both.

"Jenna is an amazing young lady and a very determined golfer," said SAS golf coach Dan Hatfield, who noted that the SAS honors student is so long and consistent off the tee that most of the time she hits last on second shots. "She works so hard at her game that I have to run her off the practice tee. Jenna is the best golfer SAS has had in more than a decade, boy or girl."

Tigers Open Season 2-0

After a sluggish start, the Sewanee men's basketball team cruised to an 80-45 season-opening win against Crown College on Nov. 15.

After Crown (0-1) opened the game on a 7-1 run, the Tigers came alive. Sewanee used a 23-7 spurt over the next 10 minutes to take command.

The Tigers continued to roll after a 3-pointer by Seth Brown and layup by Byron Turner pushed the lead to 11, 29-18, late in the first half.

The Tigers quickly extended their lead to 24, 50-26, with a free throw by Alex Arnold in the second half. Later in the half. Sewanee closed the game on a 30-19 run.

The Tigers finished with a 53.8 field goal percentage. That total included a 15-of-26 effort in the second half.

Sewanee played outstanding defense. They forced 23 turnovers which led to 27 points.

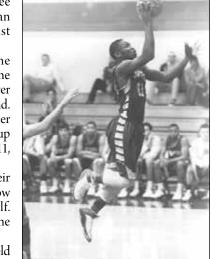

Forward Keshonn Carter led Sewanee with 15 points. Turner and erly and Anvil Nelson all made field Marcellus Caldwell each finished with seven points.

Led by the Sewanee women's cross country team's great performance, the Tigers wrapped up the NCAA South/Southeast Regionals on Nov. 16

In the women's race, Sewanee, the conference runner-up, finished sixth behind rival Rhodes. That finish was the program's best finish since the 1998

Leading the way for the Tigers were Willow Smith (23:23.18), who finished 25th and Ansley McDurmon (23:47.14), who finished 36th. Amy Lee (43rd), Zoe Dubin (48th) and Caroline Roberts (52nd) round out the top-five runners for Sewanee.

With her top-35 finish, Smith received all-region honors while McDurmon fell just one spot short of that honor.

In the men's race, the Tigers finished 16th, which topped conference rival Birmingham-Southern.

Led by Mark McAlister's (26:33.96) 47th-place finish, many of the men had personal bests in their final race. Jason Grimes (76th) and Logan Stockton (84th) ran great times for the Tigers. Alec Hill (106th) and Terrence Cronin III (129th) closed out the top finishers.

Grandmothers have a tendency to remind us all to "count your blessings." That's a pretty good habit to develop and one that really isn't very difficult if you consider the proposition for just a moment. Although it may even be easier to find fault in those things that we are dissatisfied with, the negative process seems to me to be a road that leads to nowhere.

I had the pleasure of catching up with our old friend, David Lesesne, on his campus at Randolph Macon College in Ashland, Va., recently. David told us the story of how, in an attempt to create an identity for Ashland, the residents of this quaint town had discovered that no one had claimed the title of "Center of the Universe." Ashland quickly declared itself as such. Who doesn't want the pleasure of living in the center of everything?

I was considering this positive way of looking at something on a morning walk with my new dog early one morning in Sewanee last week. We were rounding the bluff out at the cross, and the sun had not yet crept over the edge of the horizon, but it was pushing the day's first light up into the morning clouds. I would need to borrow a poet's words to describe the pinks, yellows and blues in front of us. For Boo and me, however, the scene was a reminder that if Ashland was the center, then surely we lived on the edge.

Edges and borders are comforting for me. I love standing on a bluff and considering what lies in the valley below or standing on a beach and watching waves roll in from untold distances. I like the edge of a season when leaves turn red or the border of spring as they begin to sprout green once again. I like the edge of morning as the light is forming a new day or the evening when the sun begins to descend rapidly over the cliff of tomorrow. Perhaps we live on the edge of the universe.

Boo stood there with me examining this postcard of daybreak when I noticed a bright and full moon still visible in the pastel sky. I was moved. Boo was moved to poop in the fallen leaves while I breathed in the brittle November air. For both of us it was a time to count the blessings of simple pleasures. This week I will be thankful for families coming together and thankful for food prepared with slightly more than the recommended daily allowance of butter, flour and sugar. I will be thankful for the obvious blessings on our table and in our home but also equally appreciative of the less visible connections of friendships that are as palpable as a moon in broad daylight. Perhaps it is for the things that are less obvious to the naked eye that we should truly give thanks during this season.

I have written in this space about my on-again, off-again skirmishes with field mice that want to live rent-free under our roof. They are not welcome guests in a house full of five women, and I am often called upon to take up arms in the battle. As I was sitting at our breakfast table after our early morning stroll, I saw a repeated and rapid movement through the porch window. My first impression was that a brown leaf was blowing against the windowpane. It turned out to be a tiny mouse trying to escape from a clear recycling bin that he had inadvertently fallen into. I became fascinated with the athleticism of a mouse about the size of my thumb. This little guy was jumping like a Kangaroo on a pogo stick. It was clear that Super Mouse wasn't going to give up anytime soon and that he would not concede to the plastic cliffs more than 20 times his height. If I made my college athletes jump this high as many consecutive times as my furry friend, they would quickly pass out from exhaustion. Technically this little vermin was my sworn enemy and I really had him trapped in what was a no-win situation for him but I could not get over my respect for the size of his heart in refusing to give in to the inevitable.

> Do not go gentle into that good night. Rage, rage against the dying of the light.

I carried the bin deep enough into the woods to a spot where I hoped that he could not find his way back into my basement and far enough away from the jaws of my puppy to keep him safe. I am thankful to learn what it means to fight with all of your might against great odds and thankful for the compassion given to me allowing his freedom. He will surely be thankful sitting under my Thanksgiving table counting

By the Light of the Moon

"I have always heard," Jean Yeatman reports, "that rabbits dance by the light of the full moon, and now I believe that this may be true, because when I was driving into my yard the other night, a small cottontail rabbit seemed mesmerized by my headlights, and kept hopping toward the car.

So I stopped and the bunny leaped three feet into the air, gave a kick and a twist, then disappeared into the underbrush.

"We had three winter visitors appear this week: the first, a Winter Wren, appeared on the walkway. It is smaller than the Carolina Wren, and a much darker brown, with a short jaunty tail. It is shy and usually lives in the deep woods.

"Second, two male Sapsuckers were having a fight on our Ginkgo tree. We like having these birds around, as they drill holes in the maple trees, and other birds go up and sip the sap also.

"Finally, the Slate-colored Juncos were back, eating corn I had scattered in the grass."

Pets of the Week Meet Lucy and Chloe Bell

Chloe Bell

The Franklin County Humane Society's Animal Harbor offers these two delightful pets for adoption.

Lucy is a sweet middle-aged kitty who was upset to find herself suddenly homeless. She needs a new place to call home as soon as possible since shelter life has been very hard on her. Lucy is accustomed to living indoors and she will get along with other cats. She is negative for FeLV and FIV, house-trained, up-to-date on shots and spayed.

Chloe Bell is a tiny blondé Chihuahua who loves to be the center of attention. Not one for being left alone, she would prefer a family with someone who stays at home a lot, or who will take her with them when they leave. Chloe Bell gets along well with her other small dog friends, children, and the cats she's been around. She is house-broken, up-to-date on shots and spayed.

For a limited time, two kittens may be adopted together for one adoption fee of $75. Having two kittens is better than one because they play together and keep each other company. Adult cats may be adopted for a $40 fee during this special.

Every Friday is Black Friday at Animal Harbor. On Fridays, adoption fees will be reduced 50 percent for black or mostly black pets more than 4 months old who have been at Animal Harbor for more than a month. Pets adopted from Animal Harbor qualify for a free post-adoption wellness exam by local veterinarians.

Call Animal Harbor at 962-4472 for information and check out the other pets at <www.animalharbor. com>. Enter their drawing on this site for a free spay or neuter for one of your pets. Please help the Humane Society continue to save abandoned pets by sending your donations to the Franklin County Humane Society, P. O. Box 187, Winchester, TN 37398.

Forest Service Offers Maps for Mobile Devices

The U.S. Forest Service now offers access to a variety of visitor maps for people using Android and iOS devices.

"This mobile app makes it easier than ever to plan your visit to a national forest or grassland," said U.S. Forest Service Chief Tom Tidwell. "By puttingimportant forest information right at your fingertips, it will encourage more Americans to get outside and explore their forests."

The digital maps are part of US-DA's work toward reaching President Obama's initiative to create a paperless government that also provides the American public with better, more accessible information.

Online customer surveys also indicated a desire for more online products and information, such as maps.

The Forest Service is currently working on the first phase of a website redesign, expected to debut early in 2014, which centers on a map-based tool for planning trips onto our nation's forests, grasslands and other special places.

The PDF Maps mobile app is available as a free download. Through the app, users can purchase and download professionally created maps that are stored on their devices. They can use the maps based on their location when GPS is available. The maps will also allow users to measure distance and area, find coordinates, open a current view in Google maps, plot place marks, add notes, enter their own data and add photos as attributes. Almost 700 Forest Service maps are available through the app.

In areas of national forests and grasslands where Internet connections are unavailable, the app and static maps work well if users download the maps prior to their visit. The apps and maps also will be useful for wildland firefighters.

In geographic areas with Internet availability, users will be able to use the products with live data. The interactive map is expected to be available on a limited basis starting in March 2014. The Forest Service's seven regions are tasked with uploading maps. Users should contact the regional office where a forest or grassland is located if maps are not available on the app.

Paper maps are still available for purchase online at the National Forest Store. The Forest Service differs from other federal government agencies in how the Forest Visitor map is funded. The Agriculture Adjustment Act of 1938 calls for the sale of maps as the funding mechanism to revise and produce maps for the public. In 1999 the Act was amended to include products available through the web as "geo-referenced data." The mission of the U.S. Forest Service, an agency of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, is to sustain the health, diversity and productivity of the nation's forests and grasslands to meet the needs of present and future generations. The agency manages 193 million acres of public land, provides assistance to state and private landowners, and maintains the largest forestry research organization in the world. Public lands the Forest Service manages contribute more than $13 billion to the economy each year through visitor spending alone. Those same lands provide 20 percent of the nation's clean water supply, a value estimated at $7.2 billion per year. The agency has either a direct or indirect role in stewardship of about 80 percent of the 850 million forested acres within the U.S., of which 100 million acres are urban forests where most Americans live.

We'll be rockin' around the Christmas trees, and Santa is coming to town (on a fire truck)! Come light the Sewanee Christmas trees with Dr. McCardell—starting in the Quad and then processing to the Angel Park, where we'll get to sing carols with the Sewanee Chorale, take photos with Santa and gather food, presents and financial gifts for CAC and Operation Noel.

those days before the brain blew back mottled and rusting against the pink coat them days when the word had meaning as well as definition those days when honor was honorable and good and right were good and right them days when the spirit of hope reached toward us waving a wide hand and smiling toward as yes those days them days the day before the bubble closed over the top of the world this is not better than that
