

Ebey Appointed to County Commission

Sherwood Ebey of Sewanee was appointed to fill the District 5-B seat on the Franklin County Commission until August.

Ebey is taking the seat of Arthur Knoll, who died in November.

The county commission made the appointment at its Jan. 17 meeting. Johnny Hughes, of Sewanee, who holds the District 5-A seat, nominated Ebey for the post. There were no other nominations, and the appointment was approved.

Ebey, a longtime friend and neighbor of Knoll's, said he was interested in continuing Knoll's work on the commission. He is particularly interested in the issues facing the commission as it wrestles with the Franklin County schools budget. Ebey will also replace Knoll on the schools committee of the commission.

Sherwood Ebey

"I am committed to the operation and success of Franklin County schools in general and Sewanee Elementary, in particular," Ebey said recently.

Ebey will be attending the Jan. 24 PTO forum at Sewanee Elementary School (see adjacent story) to "listen and learn more about what is going on."

Organic Prayer Project Growing at St. Mary's

by Sadie Shackelford, Messenger Intern

"Farming is a spiritual practice and symbolic of internal work." These are the words of Michael Trent Thompson, farmer and founder of the Organic Prayer Project (OPP) at the Farm of St. Mary's Sewanee. Thompson moved to Sewanee in March of 2011.

Thompson said, "I first came to Sewanee in the summer of 2010 for the School of Letters. That is when I encountered for the first time this unique place and its wonderful folks. My wife and I decided that this was a place we could live into our way of life."

Thompson spent one year of seminary at the Candler School of Theology at Emory University in Atlanta, Ga., where he focused on Anglican Studies. While attending the school, Thompson discovered the Episcopal Church and became an Oblate of St. Benedict. Thompson's wife, Carmen Toussaint Thompson, is currently the program coordinator at the Candler School of Theology.

Using the garden at St. Mary's and land nearby on Dakotah Lane, a space Thompson leases from the Retreat Center, the Sister's of St. Mary's offers the perfect combination of a strong Benedictine community and accessible land for Thompson to work.

While Thompson enjoys farming, the project is mainly focused on his faith.

"Farming is a metaphor for what we're doing with our own souls," Thompson said. "It is a spiritual practice and symbolic of internal work." He explained that this method of prayer is what Catholic writer Thomas Merton called "active contemplation," and is a unique form of working with one's hands while focusing on internal work.

In describing his project's mission, Thompson said, "In the Benedictine spirit of ora et labora (prayer and work), the Organic Prayer Project seeks to heighten spiritual awareness through a direct connection with the soil. Cultivating both the soil and the soul, OPP is an intentional and spiritual approach to gardening and farming through the ongoing development of and care for biodynamic gardens, vineyards and orchards."

The OPP is a program for the University's Center for Religion and Environment. Thompson said the project is "a practical way for students to discover nature and creation with their hands."

Students from both the college and School of Theology come three to four times a year to help out on the farm. The organic prayer gardens will also be used for the Benedictine Garden Retreats offered by the Sisters of St. Mary's.

"Others who participate in the Benedictine group gatherings with the Sisters on Saturday evenings will help with the gardens and berries, along with the students and other volunteers in the community," Thompson said.

All leftover products will be donated to the Community Action Committee in Sewanee.

The Gathering by Robert Sparrow Jones, 2012. Oil on canvas, 36 x 32 inches.

New Show at Carlos Gallery

The Carlos Gallery in the Nabit Art Building at the University presents "The Gathering," an exhibition of oil paintings by Georgia-based artist Robert Sparrow Jones. The show is on display until Feb. 11. The opening reception and artist's talk will be at 4:30 p.m., Friday, Jan. 27.

In this new series, Jones explores a "Thoreauvian" attempt to coexist with nature. This fascination with the natural world, both delicate and enduring, forlornly strange and intimately known, is Jones' response to, and escape from, the hyper-civilized, technology-saturated, globalized world.

Inspired by his upbringing in a small valley town and a passion for narrative, Jones' paintings depict safe havens, such as tree houses and boat among landscapes and waterscapes, reminding us that even in Mother Nature's peril, meditative places exist and survive.

In these paintings, the new and old world overlap in a mixture of bucolic and cosmopolitan elements. Heightened color merges imagination with reality and engages a perfect tension of psychology and emotional indifference.

Ultimately, Jones wants his viewers to never forget the communal wild that humans share with nature.

Jones' work investigates the relationship between people and the natural world. Working in drawing, painting and print media, his work has been exhibited nationally and internationally.

The Carlos Gallery is located in the Nabit Art Building 105 Kennerly Rd., Sewanee. Gallery hours are 8 a.m.-5 p.m., Monday through Friday; and 1-5 p.m., Saturdays and Sundays. For more information call 598-1256.

PTO-SES Forum on Education & Budget Issues

The Sewanee Elementary Parent Teacher Organization is hosting an open forum on the education and budget issues facing Franklin County and the state of Tennessee.

The forum will be at 6 p.m., Tuesday, Jan. 24, in the cafeteria of Sewanee Elementary School. Topics will include the state's waiver from No Child Left Behind, teacher evaluations, TCAP scores and the Franklin County school board budget.

Among the elected officials scheduled to attend are Rebecca Sharber, director of schools, and Franklin County school board members Chris McDonough and Chris Guess. Also expected are Franklin County commissioner Johnny Hughes, newly appointed county commissioner Sherwood Ebey and Franklin County Mayor Richard Stewart.

School systems in Tennessee depend on local tax revenues and state and federal money in order to fund public education. School systems cannot raise money to fund education. And school systems must use specific state and federal funds to pay for specific services.

The Franklin County School Board is projecting a $3 million dollar shortfall in its 2012-13 budget. To balance the 2011-12 budget, the school board is making up the estimated $2.6 million dollar shortfall by using part of its fund balance.

For more information, or to submit a specific question or topic for the forum, contact the SES-PTO at <sesptoenews@gmail.com>.

The Sewanee Performing Arts Series presents cellist Astrid Schween (above) and pianist Gary Hammond at 7:30 p.m., (today), Friday, Jan. 20, at Guerry Auditorium. For more information or to purchase tickets, call 598-1770 or go to <www.sewanee.edu/performingarts>.

University Locks In Four-Year Tuition Price

The University announced that it will guarantee the cost of tuition, room and board for the next four years for the class entering the University next fall.

The tuition these students will pay will remain level from the Fall 2012 through Spring 2016 semesters. The University's board of regents set annual tuition and fees for incoming students at $44,630, according to the announcement on Jan. 17.

"Sewanee's tuition guarantee represents a considerable savings over what families might have expected to pay across four years, based on the national trend of ever-increasing college costs," said John M. McCardell Jr., vice-chancellor and president.

"Yearly tuition increases make it difficult for families to plan. By locking in the tuition cost for four years, Sewanee is offering an element of certainty to students and their families," he said.

Dog Park Moving Ahead

Plans are moving ahead for the new Dog Park to be located near Lake Cheston. The first general meeting for interested persons will be at 2 p.m., Sunday, Jan. 22, at the Community Center.

A preliminary meeting was held recently with Phil White, Jerry White, Mary Priestley, Mae Wallace and Kay Rhodes in attendance. Rhodes was appointed treasurer and is accepting donations on behalf of the park.

The first stage of construction for the park will consist of providing plumbing for the water, bag stations for droppings and fencing the area, including two entrance areas with gates on either side and a large gate for heavy machinery. A number of people have already agreed to make contributions of time and money to the project.

Anyone interested in the dog park who did not fill out the original questionnaire or who has not signed up to help should send an email to <pwwhite@sewanee.edu> with contact information.

At the Jan. 22 meeting, organizers will ask for volunteers to help with five committees: fund raising; enlisting support from community resources (scouts, fraternities, sororities, contractors, etc.); manual labor for park construction; design; and publicity. Each committee will meet separately and then present its plans to the group.

Donations can be made to the Sewanee Dog Park account at Southern Community Bank and by volunteering to help in any of the areas listed above.

The Smithsonian Is Coming to Cowan in March

Cowan Railroad Museum will explore the professions and the people that sustained American society when it hosts "The Way We Worked," a Smithsonian Institution traveling exhibition, March 10–April 21, at the Cowan Center for the Arts Theater.

"The Way We Worked," created by the National Archives, is part of Museum on Main Street, a collaboration between the Smithsonian Institution and State Humanities Councils nationwide.

The railroad has been an integral part of Cowan since 1849, when construction began on boring a railroad tunnel through the mountain two miles southeast of town. The Cumberland Mountain Tunnel was finished in 1852 before the railroad actually made it to Cowan from Nashville. The town, the railroad and the tunnel still exist today.

In support of that endeavor and the frequent trains coming through this region, a substantial frame depot was built in 1904. The building is where the museum now houses its collection.

Work and the workplace have gone through enormous changes between the mid-19th century, when 60 percent of Americans made their living as farmers, and the late 20th century.

"The Way We Worked" features 86 photographs from the National Archives focusing on the history of work in America and documenting work clothing, locales, conditions and conflicts. The exhibition is on a 14-city national tour.

Volunteers are needed as docents for the exhibition. For more information, go to <smithsonian.cowanrailroadmuseum.org>.

Rocky Morris

Morris Seeks Property Assessor Post

Rocky Morris of Sewanee has announced he is running in the Republican Primary on March 6 for election to the position of Franklin County Property Assessor. This paid position is currently held by C. Philip Hayes, who has been property assessor for more than 20 years.

Morris will face Bruce Spencer of Winchester in the Republican Primary. Hayes will face Stan Amacher in the Democratic Primary. The winners of the primaries will face each other in the Aug. 2 general election.

"I have more than 30 years of experience in the real estate research business," Morris said. He has worked for a Tennessee Department of Equalization contractor providing services to Roane, Meigs and Hamilton counties during their reappraisal process, and afterward worked for two years with the Chattanooga-Hamilton County Assessor of Property.

"Having worked in the real estate research field in Franklin County and surrounding counties, there is some coordination required between that of the assessor, register of deeds and county trustee," he said, "and I would bring that experience to this job. There are some things in Franklin County's assessments that need to be looked at. No one likes to pay more taxes, but if we have to have them, they need to be equal and fair."

The assessor of property is elected for a four-year term.

Morris grew up in Winchester and graduated from Franklin County High school. He is a licensed title insurance agent, as well as a licensed real estate broker and auctioneer.

Active in Sewanee community activities, Morris is the treasurer of the Sewanee Civic Association, a member of the EQB club, area representative on the E-911 board and is a Rotarian. He was in the first class of Leadership Franklin County.

Morris and his wife, Dottie Davison Morris, have one son, Evan, who is a senior at St. Andrew's-Sewanee School.

St. Andrew's-Sewanee Dedicates Middle School Wing

St. Andrew's-Sewanee School invites the community to join in the celebration and dedication of the Reishman-Chamberlain Middle School wing at 1:30 p.m., Saturday, Jan. 28, in Simmonds Hall.

The newly renovated wing will be dedicated in recognition of Claire Reishman's and George Chamberlain's lifelong devotion to guiding and nurturing young people. Reishman and Chamberlain retired from their administrative positions at SAS in 2010 but continue to teach at the school.

Speakers for the dedication service include Merritt Dyke, SAS board of trustees president; the Rev. John Thomas, head of school; Brawley Reishman, board of trustees member; and Doug Burns, director of middle school. The service will be followed by an open house and reception.

The middle school occupies the old science wing in Simmonds, vacated when Wade Hall for the Sciences was built. Renovations were completed during summer 2010 and classes began in the new space in August. The large classrooms offer flexible spaces for active and hands on teaching styles that are well-suited to the school's middle school curriculum.

Repeal of Death Penalty Subject of Talk at McGriff on Wednesday

Jamie Moeller, an organizer for Tennesseans for Alternatives to the Death Penalty (TADP), will speak at 6 p.m., Wednesday, Jan. 25, at McGriff Alumni House. Moeller will talk about TADP's work to educate Tennesseans about the problems with Tennessee's death penalty system and organize citizens to advocate for repeal.

TADP was formed in 1992, but is part of a long line of Tennessee death penalty abolition organizations dating back more than 30 years. TADP's campaign to abolish the death penalty spans the entire state.

Moeller's role as a TADP organizer is to engage citizens at the grass roots level. She received her bachelor of arts degree in sociology and criminal justice from Carthage College in Kenosha, Wis., and earned a master of science degree in criminal justice with a concentration in criminology from St. Joseph's University in Philadelphia, Pa. Throughout her college tenure and since graduation, her focus on social activism has seen her involved in urban revitalization efforts in Racine and Kenosha, Wis.; political campaigns in Virginia and Wisconsin; civil rights advocacy during an internship at People for the American Way in Washington, D.C.; employment counseling for ex-offenders in a welfare program in Milwaukee, Wis.; and criminal justice reform with the Justice Policy Institute in Washington, D.C.

There will be free pizza at the meet-and-greet, courtesy of TADP. The event is being co-sponsored by the Sewanee Student Peace Coalition and the Cumberland Center for Justice and Peace. Map of the newly drawn districts for the U.S. House of Representatives

Redistricting Across Tennessee Affects General Assembly, Congressional Districts

Based on the results of the 2010 census, redistricting of seats in the Tennessee State Legislature and the U.S. House of Representatives is now underway. The Tennessee General Assembly is finalizing a redistricting plan that reconfigures all 132 seats in the Assembly, as well as redraws the borders of Tennessee's nine Congressional districts. Because of technical errors in the legislation, the General Assembly must vote on the measure again next week before sending it to the governor for his signature.

The new maps will have no impact on the March 6 presidential preference and county primaries, but will affect the August congressional and state Senate races, when voters will have to make some unfamiliar choices.

The 4th Congressional District, in which Sewanee sits, once spanned two time zones and three media markets from Alabama to Kentucky. In the new plan, the 4th District will now be composed of mainly Southeast and Middle Tennessee counties. Rep. Scott DesJarlais currently holds this seat. State Senator Bill Ketron of Murfreesboro is considering running against DesJarlais in the Republican primary in August for the redrawn Congressional seat. Eric Stewart of Winchester has announced he will run as a Democrat for this seat. Rutherford County (Murfreesboro) is among the additions to the 4th District, as are Bedford, Marshall and Moore counties. Tennessee has nine seats in the U.S. House of Representatives.

In the State Senate, Franklin County will be in the 16th District, essentially a renumbering of the current 14th District. The new 16th District includes Coffee, Warren, Grundy, Sequatchie, Marion and Van Buren counties. State Sen. Eric Stewart currently occupies this seat, but will not seek re-election to state office.

In the State House of Representatives, about two-thirds of Franklin County will remain in the 39th District, currently represented by David Alexander. The southern portion of the county is being moved into the 92nd District, along with portions of Marion and Lincoln counties and Marshall County. The communities of Sherwood, Huntland and Keith Springs will move into the 92nd District. Grundy County will move into the 43rd District.

Franklin County's redistricting affects county districts and precincts for about 2,500 people. Residents who have been moved into different districts will receive notification by mail.

STMC/EHH Offer Flu and Illness Prevention Guidelines

As winter is upon us, so is flu season—a time of year when 5–20 percent of people in the U.S. suffer from the contagious disease. Now is the time to get a flu vaccine and recommit to good health habits, like frequent and proper hand washing.

"The single best way to prevent seasonal flu is to get vaccinated each and every year," said Dr. Thomas Smith, chief medical officer at Southern Tennessee Medical Center in Winchester.

"This is especially true for people at high risk of serious flu complications, including young children, pregnant women, people with chronic health conditions such as asthma, diabetes or heart and lung disease, and people 65 years and older," he said.

Smith offered the following advice to help ensure you're washing your hands properly:

Remove all jewelry (including your watch) and wet your hands with warm running water. Apply liquid, bar or powder soap and lather well. Rub your hands vigorously for at least 20 seconds, making certain to scrub all surfaces, including the backs of your hands, between your fingers and under your fingernails. Rinse well and dry your hands with a clean or disposable towel, or an air dryer.

"Hand sanitizer and antibacterial soaps should only be used when regular soap and water aren't available," said Smith. "They are no more effective at killing germs, and regular use may lead to the development of bacteria that are resistant to the product's antimicrobial agents, making it harder to kill these germs in the future."

According to Smith, you should always wash your hands before preparing food, eating, administering medicine or medical treatments, touching a baby or sick person, or putting in and taking out contact lenses.

He said people should always wash their hands after: using the rest room, changing a diaper, blowing your nose, coughing or sneezing, preparing food, touching a pet or its litter box, waste or play toys, handling garbage, treating a sick person, or whenever hands look dirty.

In addition to getting a flu vaccine and ensuring thorough hand washing, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention recommends these additional good health guidelines:

Avoid close contact with people who are sick. Stay home when you are sick. If possible, stay home from work, school and errands when you are sick. Cover your mouth and nose with a tissue when coughing or sneezing.

Avoid touching your eyes, nose or mouth. Germs are often spread when a person touches something that is contaminated with germs and then touches his or her eyes, nose or mouth.

Practice other good health habits, including getting plenty of sleep, being physically active, managing your stress, drinking plenty of fluids and eating nutritious food.

To learn more, Smith said to talk to your family physician. If you do not have a family physician, STMC recommends that you contact STMC/EHH Med-Line Physician Referral toll-free at (800) 890-8339.

Myers Takes On New Role at School of Theology

The Rev. Annwn Myers has been named associate dean for recruitment and admissions at the School of Theology at Sewanee. Dean Bill Stafford announced the creation of this new position on Jan. 16.

Myers is currently associate University chaplain at All Saints' Chapel. She will combine her chaplaincy with her new responsibilities from Feb. 1 to May 31. On June 1, she will move to associate dean full-time.

"As the process for receiving seminary students has changed over time," Stafford said, "the school realized the need for a more active role in recruiting students. In this position, Myers will enable the School to be present beyond the Sewanee community, to be in the offices of bishops and others who shape the decisions of potential students about which seminary to attend, and to allow for finding the larger and more diverse classes of fine students that are needed for the school's and the church's future."

Myers said she is excited about the new position and how it draws together her experiences as a Sewanee community member for 23 years and her life in the Episcopal Church.

"I love living in Sewanee and have experienced everything from child care and education, to physicians and services, to daily life on the Mountain," she said. "I know what makes Sewanee special, and I want to share that with people who are going to attend seminary."

As associate chaplain, Myers has had the opportunity to meet many people in leadership positions across the Fourth Province of the Episcopal Church. She will be attending diocesan conventions on behalf of the seminary, meeting with commissions on ministry within various dioceses, and utilizing the network of clergy she has known who attended Sewanee.

Annwn Myers

"Dean Stafford has done an outstanding job at the School of Theology," she said, "and it is an exciting time as we look ahead to a new dean."

Myers is "extraordinarily well qualified to take on this role that is so critically important to the School of Theology's future," Stafford said. "Her skills will help the whole community get involved creatively in the process. I look forward with excitement to this new momentous step ahead."

A graduate of Millsaps College and Virginia Theological Seminary, Myers has been the associate University chaplain since 1989. She has been responsible for the liturgy, helped design and implement chapel programming and provided pastoral care to students, faculty and staff.

Myers previously was the associate rector at St. John's Church (Pascagoula, Miss.), interim chaplain at St. Andrew's Day School (Jackson, Miss.) and priest-in-charge of the Chapel of the Cross in Madison, Miss.

Easter Semester Convocation on Tuesday

Opening convocation for the University's Easter semester will be at 12:30 p.m., Tuesday, Jan. 24, in All Saints' Chapel. Honorary degrees will be presented and new members will be inducted into the Order of Gownsmen. The Right Reverend and Right Honorable Richard Chartres KCVO FSA, Bishop of London, will give the convocation address and will receive an honorary degree. David R. Pitts will also receive an honorary degree during the convocation.

Richard Chartres became the 132nd Bishop of London in 1995. After reading history at Trinity College, Cambridge, he was ordained in 1973 and after a curacy in Bedford, became chaplain to Robert Runcie, Bishop of St. Alban's, in 1975. Chartres followed Runcie to Lambeth Palace when he became Archbishop of Canterbury in 1980.

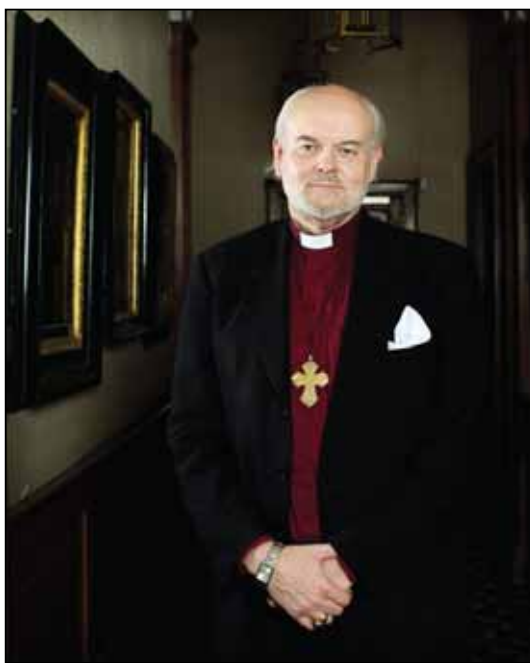

From 1984 Richard Chartres served as vicar of St. Stephen's in central London as well as Gresham Professor of Divinity. He was consecrated Bishop of Stepney in 1992. Three years later he was appointed Bishop of London, Dean of Her Majesty's Chapels Royal, Prelate of the Order of the British Empire and ex officio member of the House of Lords; he became a Privy Counsellor in 1996. Bishop Chartres was made a Knight Commander of the Royal Victorian Order in 2009. He was elected a Fellow of the Society of Antiquaries in 1999.

His passion for the environment is expressed by his chairmanship of Shrinking the Footprint, the church's own program of energy conservation. He is also the chairman and founder of St. Mellitus College, an embryo Christian university serving the London area.

When the IRA bombs of 1993 reduced one of London's churches to rubble, he raised support to rebuild and found the St. Ethelburga's Centre for Reconciliation and Peace. He is a prolific writer, producing many essays and articles on religion and the environment including his books "The History of Gresham College 1597-1997" (with David Vermont), and "Tree of Knowledge, Tree of Life."

David R. Pitts is the chairman and CEO of Pitts Management Associates, a national hospital and health care management and consulting firm, and president of the national health care think tank Health Insights. Prior to founding Pitts Management Associates in 1981, he was the CEO of the Ochsner Foundation Hospital in New Orleans. Pitts served as the executive officer for health affairs in the Office of the Secretary of Defense, and as the founding associate dean for administration of the Hebert School of Medicine at Uniformed Services University in Bethesda, Md.

Pitts is a longtime national lay leader in many Episcopal ministries, including the Episcopal Church Medical Trust and Episcopal Relief and Development. He serves as chair emeritus of the Board of Trustees of the Church Pension Group and is the founding chairman of the Church Investment Group. Pitts is an honorary canon of Christ's Church Cathedral in New Orleans.

and the National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities, published tuition and fees at private non-profit colleges and universities this year showed increases in the mid-4 percent range for the third consecutive year. 2012 graduates across the country are paying 15–20 percent more in tuition in their final year than they paid as freshmen.

Last February, the University announced a 10 percent reduction in tuition and fees for the current academic year (2011–12). In November, Sewanee announced that next year's tuition will remain at this year's level for returning students.

These decisions recognize the economic realities and pressures that families face today. They come in response to the spiraling costs of higher education and represent an effort to make a college education more affordable and accessible. The national trend in higher education has been for both college fees and discounts offered to increase every year.

"Higher education is on the verge of pricing itself beyond the reach of more and more families," said Charles J. Nabit, chair of the University's board of regents. "The board of regents at Sewanee continues to take steps to reverse this trend."

This year, the University expects to receive more than 3,300 applications, and will enroll approximately 450 freshmen in the fall.

Seminary Reduces Tuition for 2012–13

The University's board of regents approved a tuition change for the School of Theology that reduces the tuition from $18,730 to $14,980 per year for new students, beginning in the 2012–13 academic year.

New students paying the reduced tuition will also be eligible for need-based financial aid for tuition and living expenses while at Sewanee after all sources of a student's income and expenses are identified.

It is the school's financial aid practice to meet a very high percentage of demonstrated financial need, and that practice will continue.

This change brings the School of Theology's tuition in line with other Episcopal seminaries. The school previously offered a tuition discount to all entering students.

"Reducing our advertised tuition and eliminating the across-the-board discount allows us to focus financial aid assistance based on our students' demonstrated need," said the Very Rev. William S. Stafford, dean of the School of Theology.

"Combined with our generous scholarships, the cost of attendance here for most students is far lower than in many other schools; very few students need to borrow. The Anglican tradition of serious, formative education for priests is in fact affordable here at Sewanee," Stafford said.

Mid-Year Teacher Evaluation Data Released

State Projections Far From Mid-Year Actual Scores

by K. G. Beavers, Messenger Staff Writer

Teacher observation evaluation mid-year data was released last month, and the results are not as expected. The Tennessee Department of Education released the data after the Tennessean and the Williamson County school board director filed open records requests.

The state had projected that 3–5 percent of teachers statewide would earn a "1" (the lowest ranking); 15–25 percent would earn a "2;" a majority of teachers, 40–50 percent would earn a "3;" 15–25 percent would earn a "4;" and 5–10 percent will earn a "5."

However, in Franklin County, no teacher received a "1" mark, 6.9 percent received a "2," 28.2 percent received a "3," 47.7 percent received a "4," and 16.3 percent received a "5."

According to the state, year-end scores are expected to be in line with the research-projected distribution. At the end of the year, districts with scores that do not align with value-added growth scores could take 10 percent off a principal's evaluation.

Principals are required to observe teachers in the classroom at least four times a year. Currently, some teachers have only had one classroom observation, while some have had two.

The observation evaluation system is designed to measure the quality of the teacher's work and what the students learn in order to rate the teacher's effectiveness. Teachers are evaluated on instruction, planning and environment, and include observations of the classroom and review of prior evaluations. These observations count for 50 percent of a teacher's evaluation.

Teachers are also evaluated on student growth and achievement. These evaluations are not included in the mid-year evaluation data. The 50 percent quantitative evaluation comes from student academic achievement.

Of this 50 percent, 35 percent is from the Tennessee Value-Added Assessment System (TVAAS) student growth measure which compares actual growth to a student's projected growth.

The other 15 percent comes from alternate student achievement data selected by the teacher and principal from a list of state-approved options. The achievement measures could include schoolwide or individual TVAAS data or ACT/SAT assessments if a teacher scores a "3," "4" or "5" on the observation evaluation. Options include state assessments (discipline-specific/TCAP), schoolwide TVAAS, ACT or SAT assessments and graduation rates.

At the end of the year, overall evaluation scores takes the three components (50 percent observation, 35 percent growth, 15 percent student achievement) and combines them into a single rating from "1," significantly below expectations to "5," significantly above expectations.

For complete information, see <www.tn.gov/education>.

New Documentary About Teaching in Chattanooga

The documentary film "American Teacher" will be screened 6 p.m. (EST), Tuesday, Jan. 24, at the Chattanooga School for the Arts and Sciences.

This feature-length documentary was produced and directed by Academy Award-winning filmmaker Vanessa Roth; produced by Ninive Calegari, co-founder of the literacy nonprofit 826 National, and best-selling author Dave Eggers; and narrated by Academy Award-winner Matt Damon.

"American Teacher" chronicles the stories of four teachers (Erik Benner, Jonathan Dearman, Jamie Fidler and Rhena Jasey) who live and work in disparate urban and rural areas of the country. By following these teachers as they reach different milestones in their careers, the film tells the deeper story of the teaching profession in America today. The film shows the experience of these four young teachers as they recognize the importance of what they do and how much they love what they do, but ask themselves, "Can I afford to continue to teach?"

The Teacher Salary Project, a nonprofit organization, is the sponsor of the film. It is based on the book "Teachers Have It Easy: The Big Sacrifices and Small Salaries of America's Teachers" by journalist and teacher Daniel Moulthrop, Calegari and Eggers.

Chattanooga School for the Arts and Sciences is located at 865 E. 3rd St., Chattanooga.

SAS Students Benefit from College Courses

Last fall, Sophie Register, a senior at St. Andrew's-Sewanee School, had her English 101 essays graded by a bestselling author. Senior Michael Rudolph discovered two asteroids, 2011 TO3 and 2011 TS3. Thanks to a special arrangement with the University, SAS students may take college classes for free and for credit.

Fifteen students took advantage of this opportunity last semester, signing up for courses in German, psychology, math, biology, English, physics, economics, music and Latin.

“There are very few schools in the country that can offer this level of instruction and enrichment to its students,” said Jeff Bell, academic dean at SAS. “Our students get a full-fledged college experience at a superior liberal arts college without having to leave high school early. Plus, they have a catalogue of hundreds of courses from which to choose.”

Register's English course was taught by assistant professor Kevin Wilson, author of the best-selling novel “The Family Fang.” Rudolph's physics course, Survey of Astronomy, included many hours in the Cordell-Lorenz Observatory under the direction of professor Doug Durig.

Rotary Names Contest Winner

The Monteagle Rotary Club announced that Madeleine Wiedemann, a fifth-grade student at Sewanee Elementary School, is the winner of its T-shirt design contest. The contest was focused on the Rotary Club's “Don't Meth with Me” program that is intended to create awareness of the dangers of methamphetamines in the community.

This new initiative is led by the local Rotary and funded by area businesses. The club is also seeking guidance from the Franklin County Prevention Coalition, the Grundy County Prevention Coalition and Marion County officials.

The Rotary Club of Monteagle was chartered in December 1984 and has continued to focus on the Rotary “Avenues of Service.” These are: club service—building a strong fellowship and strong membership; vocational service—serving others through member vocations; community service—utilizing service projects to encourage, assist and strengthen educational opportunities across the plateau; and international service—guiding youth and young adults in leadership, world service projects and international exchange programs.

AT THE MOVIES

Sewanee Union Theatre This Week
Friday–Sunday, Jan. 20–22, at 7:30 p.m.
Tower Heist

99 minutes • PG-13 • Admission $3

“Tower Heist” is a silly comedy about ordinary, working folks taking revenge on a Wall Street swindler. Ben Stiller and Eddie Murphy lead the all-star cast. After the staff at a New York City luxury high-rise find that the billionaire who lives in the penthouse (Alan Alda, in a terrific turn as bad guy), has stolen their retirement money, they plot to reclaim what was theirs. Whether “Tower Heist” was made before Occupy Wall Street, I don’t know. But the premise is believable in theory, even if the execution is a bit strained a times. As one reviewer wrote, “You won’t remember Tower Heist an hour later, but the top cast makes the jokes (even the lousy ones) go down easy.” Rated PG-13 for language and sexual content.

Sewanee Union Theatre Next Week
Wednesday and Friday–Sunday, Jan. 25, Jan. 27–29, at 7:30 p.m.
Puss in Boots

118 minutes • PG • Admission $3

In the wonderful “Shrek” movies, the character of Puss in Boots was never central to the stories, but was always entertaining. In this animated prequel, Puss (voiced by Antonio Banderas) joins with his nursery rhyme friends, including Humpty Dumpty (Zach Galifianakis), for adventure. Salma Hayek and Amy Sedaris add to the fun. One critic said, the movie “prances along on three basic truths. One, cats are funny. Two, vain Spanish cats in high-heeled musketeer boots are even funnier. Lastly, booted, vain Spanish cats voiced by a breathy Antonio Banderas are flat-out hilarious.” Rated PG for some adventure action and mild rude humor.

Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater grew from a now-fabled performance in March 1958 at the 92nd Street Y in New York City. Led by Alvin Ailey and a group of young African-American modern dancers, that performance forever changed the perception of American dance.

The Artisan Depot in Cowan, the gallery of the Franklin County Arts Guild, is featuring work by members of the Franklin County Photography Club through February 11.

A reception for the photographers will be 5-7 p.m., today (Friday), Jan. 20.

The photography club was formed to provide an opportunity for members of the community with a wide range of experience and interest to come together regularly to share, learn and develop photographic skills. They are committed to exploring the creative and documentary potential of photography.

According to club member T.M. "Sonny" Elliott, the current exhibit is a sample of what the power of the photographic medium is able to document.

"Perhaps more importantly," Elliott said, "the show represents our perspective on life and art as we grow as a group, learning and sharing images about diversity in cultures and the beauty of our world. As a group we are working with the photographic medium to explore seeing as a way to better understand our environment, to motivate and to educate others by sharing our visions and perspectives."

The Artisan Depot is located at 201 E. Cumberland St., Cowan. For more information call 636-0169.

Artist Bill Nickels Show Opens at SAS Gallery

Bill Nickels starts his days early to manage having both a successful business career and a successful career as an artist.

"I get up early in the morning and work on my art each day, sometimes 10 minutes and sometimes two hours," Nickels said.

"Bill Nickels: Drawing, Painting and Sculpture" opens today (Friday), Jan. 20, at the St. Andrew's-Sewanee Gallery. The artist's reception will be at 5-7 p.m., Friday, Feb. 10.

Nickels, who lives in Manchester, is the father of Will Nickels, a senior day student at St. Andrew's-Sewanee School. He has had a passion for art since he arrived on campus at East Tennessee State University.

"I went to college thinking I would be a teacher," he said. "But I walked past the art building and learned you could get a degree in art. I never knew that was possible." He earned a bachelor of fine arts from ETSU.

As guests will see in the show, Nickels works in a variety of media. Pieces include a series of paintings, "View from West Poplar Street from Gilmer Park," that he has worked on for many years, as well as pieces of mixed-media/found object art, sculpture and painting. Nickels will be offering drawing workshops to SAS students next month.

Though he loves art, Nickels is also the owner of an insurance agency in Manchester and is active in community work, including serving on the board of Motlow College and president of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce.

Creating his artwork on the family kitchen table, Nickels said he is glad he doesn't have a separate studio. "It means that my work is portable and there is active input from my family," he said. Nickels' wife, Amy, is a veterinarian. They have two other children at home.

The SAS Gallery hours are Monday-Friday, 9 a.m.-3 p.m. and by appointment. For more information contact Christi Teasley at 598-5652.

"The kids swam their hearts out and made significant achievements," Boone said. "Our small numbers kept us from winning the meet, but our individual performances were outstanding."

High School Team

Despite ending their regular season with a loss against Franklin County High School, the SAS swim team was in good spirits as they celebrated additional regional (Annie McCawley, 500 free, and Eliza McNair, 100 breast) and state (Will Evans, 100 breast, and Zach Blount, 100 free) qualifying performances. The team finished their season 6-3-1, with the men's team finishing 6-2-1 and the women finishing 7-2.

Significant improvements were clocked by Carol Yang, who dropped 6.91 in her 50 free; Kayley McDowell who dropped 6.31 in her 200 IM; and Annie McCawley, who dropped 16.32 in her 500 free.

OVERTIME

by John Shackelford

For the many of you who attended my press conference three weeks ago announcing my commitment to the Weight Watchers program, I thought I should provide you with a quick update.

My bathroom scales and my baggy jeans are falling faster than my retirement portfolio. In only three weeks, I am down nine pounds and two inches on the waistline and my investments have only lost 15 percent from the $200 bucks I had stashed in that fund for my golden years. In a weekend when both my beloved Tar Heels and Packers took losses and with me dropping weight faster than Newt Gingrich is losing supporters, I am not excited about the prospects for my coaching career this season. I need to put some wins on the board. Perhaps it is time for a piece of chocolate cake so I can see some gains around here. Progress is about making numbers go up, right?

It is not that I am craving a piece of Red Velvet cake with homemade cream cheese icing. Or even a bacon double cheeseburger on a warm buttered bun made of white bread. No, no this apple is just perfect, and I love my veggie-tofu wraps on fat-free, sun-dried tomato and spinach tortillas.

I promise I don't even miss the sweet taste of an ice-cold Coca-Cola fizzing over perfectly crushed ice. I really prefer the tap water that has been sitting in my Nalgene bottle all day. There is something about drinking lukewarm water from a canteen that just makes you feel healthy.

My office is in the Fowler Center, so I am seconds away from elliptical trainers, rowers, bicycles, weight machines and a track, but there is always something else: the letter I have been meaning to write, the recruiting website I need to check before I get sweaty. So go ahead, you guys. Start your workouts without me. I'll be there for the second mile.

Truthfully, I am really enjoying this experience. What I have discovered is that you need to eat a lot of fresh fruit and veggies to make this work. It is not that I didn't know this information up front, but somehow it seemed easier to unwrap the plastic from some non-nutritional calories than to enjoy the natural deliciousness inside a banana. These days I am back to really savoring the juiciness of a California Navel orange instead of peanut butter crackers with a side of carbohydrates.

My running has gotten easier. My back feels better. And I am growing new hair on the top of my head. (Okay, that last part might have been an exaggeration.)

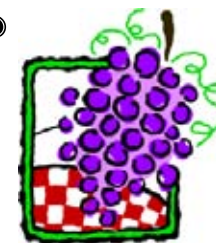

Most of us know we are more judgmental than we should be, but there is something about going on a diet that really gives a person a superiority complex. If you see my faced pressed against the window at Crust, staring intently inside the restaurant watching you polish off a pepperoni and sausage pizza with extra cheese, then yes: I am judging. You find yourself watching people enjoy a Snickers bar in the middle of the day and saying, "Really? You need that?" (Truthfully, it was only three short weeks ago that I was a regular in the Snickers line at the bookstore.)

Diets don't work. Short-term commitments don't work. But I am very happy to have lost a few pounds, and I see the long path ahead. I give credit to the Weight Watchers calculator that is my conscience and new best friend. I still have a ways to go, but there is no reason to stop eating healthy foods when my bathroom scale equals the Dow Jones Industrials.

Life is truly better with the taste of fresh fruit and veggies. I am glad to have been reminded of that simple fact. Now I need to call my broker and get him stop investing in Hershey's and buy some orange futures so that I will be ready to retire by the time Newt gets elected.

Fox Sightings

On Jan. 13, the Rev. Linda Hutton, priest of St. James Episcopal Church in Midway, saw something moving in her yard, and out ran a beautiful Red Fox. She phoned Harry Yeatman to record the event in the Messenger. Harry said that Red Foxes running in Sewanee yards is an event that should be recorded, as it is not often that a Red Fox is seen alive in Sewanee. The Gray Fox is more common and can be confused with the Red Fox, which is red all over. The Gray Fox is an excellent tree-climber and can escape dogs and other enemies by climbing. The Red Fox is not a climber, but uses speed and dirt dens to escape dogs, etc. Linda Matherly, also of Midway, reported that she saw the same fox the next day, Jan. 14. Always report Red Fox sightings in Sewanee. Thanks, Linda and Linda!

Wet Cave Watershed Cleanup Successful

Volunteers from the Sewanee Mountain Grotto and the SERA Karst Task Force (SKTF) spent five-and-a-half hours cleaning the Wet Cave watershed on Jan. 14, removing about five tons of trash, including 150 tires (see photo on page 2). The site is off the Domain on Roark's Cove Road.

"I always find it amazing how much trash can be moved with our haul system in such a short amount of time," said participant Maureen Handler.

Thirty-eight volunteers from three states (Tennessee, Alabama and Georgia) participated in the event.

The groups will be going back to this area on Saturday, March 10, to continue the cleanup efforts.

Violet

Milo

Pets of the Week

Meet Violet and Milo

The Franklin County Humane Society's Animal Harbor offers these two delightful pets for adoption.

Violet is a pretty Tabby mix who is affectionate, calm and a little on the prissy side. She would love a home with lots of people and another kitty. Violet is negative for FeLV and FIV, house-trained, up-to-date on shots and spayed.

Milo is an adorable young adult Pekingese mix who enjoys people. Like many small breeds, he would prefer a home with adults. Milo is up-to-date on shots and neutered.

Every Friday is Black Friday at Animal Harbor! On Fridays, adoption fees will be reduced 50 percent for black or mostly black pets more than four months old who have been at Animal Harbor for more than a month. Pets adopted from Animal Harbor qualify for a free post-adoption wellness exam by local veterinarians. Call Animal Harbor at 962-4472 for information and check out the other pets at <www.animalharbor.com>.

PLANNING ON BURNING BRUSH?

You need to call the Sewanee Fire Tower (598-5535, Mon-Fri, 8-4) to obtain a permit, if you intend to burn brush between October 15 and May 15.

PEDESTRIANS and BIKERS – EXERCISE CAUTION!

When you are out getting your exercise, following a few simple rules will keep you on the go. When biking on Sewanee side-walks, cyclists should slow down when passing pedestrians since some may not hear a warning bike bell and know to step to the right. Walkers should walk on the left-hand side of the road, traveling against the traffic; bicyclers should travel in the right-hand lane, going with the flow of traffic. During the day, both walkers and bikers should wear clothing of bright, easily seen colors, and, from dusk on, wear light, reflective clothing. In any case, don't just assume drivers can see you. Be on the lookout ... for your own safety.

BARDTOVERSE

by Scott and Phoebe Bates

"The proper way for a man to pray,"
Said Deacon Lemuel Keyes.
"And the only proper attitude
Is down upon his knees."

"No, I should say the way to pray,"
Said Rev. Doctor Wise,
"Is standing straight with outstretched arms
And rapt and upturned eyes."

"Oh no; no, no," said Elder Slow,
"Such posture is too proud:
A man should pray with eyes fast closed
And head contritely bowed,"

"It seems to me his hands should be
Austerely clasped in front,
With both thumbs pointing toward the ground,"
Said Rev. Doctor Blunt.

"Las' year I fell in Hodgkin's well
Head first," said Cyrus Brown,
"With both my heels a-stickin' up,
My head a-pinting down;

"An' I made a prayer right then and there—
Best prayer I ever said,
The prayingest prayer I ever prayed,
A-standing on my head."

— "The Prayer of Cyrus Brown"
