South Cumberland Chamber of Commerce Welcomes New Director

by Leslie Lytle, Messenger Staff Writer

"My ultimate goal is to raise the community's standard of living," said John Payne, the new executive director of the South Cumberland Chamber of Commerce.

Payne, who took office on Jan. 9, will look to the strategic plan drafted in 2016 for guidance. Top on initiatives called for by the plan was changing the name of the organization from the Monteagle Mountain Chamber of Commerce to the South Cumberland Chamber of Commerce. The name change reflects the chamber's intention to broaden its service area and adopt an all-encompassing strategy for economic development.

"Located in three counties, Monteagle is the gateway to a number of other communities on the plateau," Payne said. The new website lists the chamber's service area as Monteagle, Sewanee, Tracy City, Coalmont, Altamont, Beersheba Springs, Gruetli-Laager, Pelham and Palmer.

Payne sees the challenges facing the chamber as the same challenges the community faces. "As is typical in small communities confronted with limited resources and lack of funding, our most talented young people grow up and move away. Our task is to provide opportunities to keep them here."

Payne brings a wealth of experience to the role of chamber executive director. During the course of the past 45 years, his career

Potluck Yields Message of Protection, Unity

by Kevin Cummings
Messenger Staff Writer

Warm and drizzly winter weather cloaked the community potluck dinner on Jan. 15 at the American Legion Hall in Sewanee, which welcomed two Lakota Sioux families entrenched in the Stand at Standing Rock.

All tables were full with between 75 and 100 people taking part in the event that boasted plenty of drink and food, such as rabbit and smoked sausage with rice, pizza, venison chili and kale salad. And like the food, the gathering had a feel of merging cultures.

Isaac Weston is one of the heads of camp at Oceti Sakowin near where Energy Transfer Partners plans to construct the Dakota Access Pipeline under the Missouri River. Weston sat by himself before the program began, quiet, withdrawn, getting ready to be the main speaker of the evening.

Oceti Sakowin has been Weston's home since August and being in a warm bed while in Sewanee was a nice change from sleeping on a cot in a teepee amongst at least four feet of snow and brutally cold temperatures. Protestors prefer the term "water protectors" and Weston said the resistance effort has changed him.

"That's when the beginning of my new life started," he said. "I was going to help revitalize the Lakota language but instead I stepped into this fight. It's something that is calling me and something I'm going to keep doing."

Weston planned to teach the Lakota language to children on the Pine Ridge Reservation before joining the effort to halt the pipeline from crossing the river the Lakota call "The Big Muddy."

Opponents say the potential for an oil leak threatens the water supply for not only the Standing Rock Indian Reservation, but for millions of people, including other tribes and reservations further downstream. Energy Transfer Partners and supporters say the pipeline is safe, legal and critical for the nation's energy needs.

As legal challenges loom and a change in the presidential administration raises questions about the future, the disputed section of the 1,171-mile crude oil pipeline remains in limbo after the Army Corps of Engineers ordered construction to halt in favor of more study.

Approximately 800 people remain at the camp, Weston noted, and they are currently relocating the campsite about a mile south onto the Standing Rock Reservation itself, in part because the current site is in a floodplain threatened by mounds of snow. The new camp will be self-sustaining with features such as solar energy and compost toilets, he added.

Frank Bullhead, Isaac's father-in-law, said that a renewed drive for green energy is a major result of the stand against the pipeline. Bullhead lives in Standing Rock about 25 miles south of Oceti Sakowin. He said after leaving Sewanee, he and family members plan to visit Seattle and Arizona, continuing

School Board Revises Internet Use Policy

by Leslie Lytle
Messenger Staff Writer

At the Jan. 9 meeting at Clark Memorial Elementary School, the Franklin County School Board approved a revised internet use policy. At the December meeting, Sewanee school board representative Adam Tucker expressed concern the Internet Use Policy recommended by the Tennessee School Board Association was "overly broad." Tucker drafted a revised policy more specific in terms of permitted and proper social networking by school district employees both during school hours and non-school hours.

In keeping with school system-wide policies already in place, the revised policy prohibits internet activity which constitutes discrimination or harassment of students or other employees, as well as prohibiting internet activity which violates confidentiality as defined by the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act. The policy also prohibits employees from posting as representatives of the school system unless authorized to do so by the director of schools or the director's designee and discourages employees from engaging with students on social networking sites.

Regarding internet use during school hours, the policy prohibits social networking on school computers except for instructional purposes and prohibits social networking on personal devices during school hours except during breaks.

Board Chairman Cleijo Walker praised the revised policy for setting

New Role at Sewanee for Frank Gladu

Will Focus on Downtown Development as Special Assistant to the Vice-Chancellor

University of the South Vice-Chancellor John McCardell has announced that Frank X. Gladu, currently the University's vice president for administrative services, has accepted an appointment as special assistant to the vice-chancellor. In this new role, Gladu will focus his efforts on the development of Sewanee Village and will serve as the University liaison to the Arcadia at Sewanee senior living project.

Gladu has been leading the village development process for the last four years. "Frank has skillfully forged an excellent working relationship with community members and brought our planning goals to a level of remarkable and durable consensus," said McCardell. "This is a natural evolution in his duties."

During the next few months, Gladu's operational duties—including responsibility for the University's PPS, Design and Construction, Business Services and Conference Services offices—will transition to PPS Director Mike Gardner and Vice President for Finance Doug Williams.

"The Village and Arcadia projects are important to the growth and success of the University and Sewanee community, and I am looking forward to devoting my full attention to them," Gladu said. He can be reached by email at <fxgladu@sewanee.edu>.

Reishman at The Academy for Lifelong Learning

Join The Academy for Lifelong Learning (ALLL) at St. Mary's Sewanee at noon, Thursday, Feb. 9. Retired University of the South professor John Reishman will be the speaker.

Reishman's talk will cover the three Pre-Raphaelite painters who founded the Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood in London, in 1838. They are Dante Gabriel Rossetti, William Holman Hunt and John Everett Millais. These painters were reacting to what they regarded as a lull in English artistic achievements, which they believed resulted from a slavish dependence on the standards of the Royal Academy and its enthusiasm for Raphael, Michelangelo, Titian and other masters of the High Renaissance. They were determined to revive English painting and to make art once again a force in British culture. It promises to be a fascinating talk.

Reishman began his career at the University of the South in 1969. He retired last spring, completing 47 years of teaching. He and his wife Claire, a very accomplished art teacher and potter, live in Sewanee.

The ALLL meets monthly, generally on the second Thursday, at noon, for one hour. Speakers are invited to share a wide variety of topics and there is always time for questions and answers. The membership fee for the Academy is $12 per year or $2 per session.

Box lunches are available for $12 by calling Debbie at 598-5342 or email at <reservations@stmaryssewanee.org>. For more information about the Academy, please call Deb Kandul at (931) 924-3542.

Houston Bryan Roberson

Houston Bryan Roberson, professor of history, passed away shortly before Christmas. A special light went out for Sewanee with the passing of this deeply loved colleague, teacher, and friend—a man of quiet demeanor but tremendous strength, who influenced for good all who were fortunate enough to know him.

Houston grew up in Stuart, Va., a small town in mountainous country not unlike this part of Tennessee; he was the son of the late Ralph and Madelene Roberson, and one of seven siblings. He attended Patrick County High School, where he is still remembered with affection and admiration by some of his teachers. He received a B.A. from Mars Hill College, an M.A. from Wake Forest University, and a PhD in history from the University of North Carolina. Before starting his graduate work at UNC, he taught history for many years at Chapel Hill High School; he never lost his love for the city and its people, and it is impossible to exaggerate his influence on students and his fellow teachers there or how much they admired him as a person and teacher.

Coming to Sewanee in 1997, Houston was the first African-American to be appointed a full-time member of the College faculty. He brought the study of race and of African American history to Sewanee in unprecedented and historic ways, contributing as he did so to profound change in the university's curriculum as a whole. He was a personal mentor and friend to many students, especially—but certainly not only—the college's growing numbers of African-American students. He was an accomplished scholar, widely admired for his work on the history of African American religions and Civil Rights in the U.S. His first book was "Fighting the Good Fight: The Story of Dexter Avenue King Memorial Baptist Church, 1865-1977" (2005). In 2014, he co-authored "Witness: Two Hundred Years of Faith and Practice at the Abyssinian Baptist Church of Harlem, New York;" it was a source of special pleasure to him that one of his co-authors was Genna Rae MacNeil, his former advisor, who has movingly described him as "a free man with a pure spirit." In 2002 he co-authored with Rhonda Y. Williams, "Teaching the American Civil Rights Movement: Freedom's Bittersweet Song."

Especially valuable to Sewanee was Houston's short essay, "The Problem of the Twentieth Century: Sewanee, Race and Race Relations," published in the University's sesquicentennial volume, Sewanee: Perspectives on the History of the University of the South (2009); this was the first piece of written scholarship to address directly and forthrightly the history of race on campus and in the Sewanee community. Houston was an invaluable colleague: insightful, constructive, deeply conscientious, and profoundly committed to the History Department's goals and those of the University at this formative stage in its history. His generosity of spirit, understanding of people, courage, and wisdom will continue to animate discussions in the department, the college, and the university, and will resonate for many decades among hundreds of friends, colleagues, former students, and members of the family he loved so much.

Houston was preceded in death by his parents, Ralph and Madelene Roberson, and by a brother Mitchell W. Tatum. He leaves behind to cherish his memory a brother Elder Dr. Larry D. Tatum (Iris), of Cleveland, Ohio; four sisters, Elaine Thomas (Charlie), the Rev. Sheila Thomas (Albert), of Stuart, Va., Teresa K. Roberson and Dr. Olivia R. Givens (Kem), both of Charlotte, N.C., along with a host of nieces, nephews, great-nieces and great-nephews for whose futures he cherished the greatest of hopes.

A memorial will be held in Sewanee later in the semester.

Scott Jon Sloan

Scott Jon Sloan, age 69 of Sewanee, died on Jan. 12, 2017, at the hospital in Sewanee. He was born on Nov. 22, 1947, in New York, N.Y., to Lillian Berger Solomon and Dr. George Solomon. He served in the U.S. Army, including three campaigns in Vietnam as a Combat Infantryman and Combat Medic, receiving multiple medals. He held a Master's Degree from Middle Tennessee State University and a Master of Arts in Theology from the School of Theology at the University of the South. He was employed with the pharmaceutical division of 3M and Bristol Myers; he was an educator with both the Hamilton County Board of Education and Grundy County High School. He was a volunteer Ranger at the South Cumberland Ranger Station.

He is survived by his beloved wife of 40 years, Virginia Beard Sloan; sister, Robin (Arnold) Kanarek of Westsex, England; brothers, Michael (Ruth) Sloan of Charleston, S.C. and Steven (Roberta) Sloan of Los Angeles, Calif.; and his beloved cats, Jack, Micky and Minerva.

A Celebration of Life will be at 2 p.m., Sunday, Jan. 22, at St. Luke's Chapel in Sewanee with the Rev. David Kearley and the Rev. Linda Hutton officiating. Interment with military honors will follow in the University of the South Cemetery. A reception following the interment will be at St. James Episcopal Church, 898 Midway Rd., Sewanee.

In lieu of flowers, the family suggests memorial contributions to The Mayo Clinic, for pancreatic cancer research, <<https://philanthropy.mayoclinic.org>> or to Animal Harbor, 56 Nor-Nan Rd., Winchester, TN 37398. For complete obituary go to <www.watsonnorth.com>.

to share the message of protecting water.

"This water fight is for your sons, your grandsons, for them and their future," he said prior to the event. "We're fighting for your auntie, your sister and their kids, so we will have a better quality of water."

When the event began, Weston shared stories of Lakota history and prophecy, saying that the gathering of the seven Sioux tribes to stop the snake that is the pipeline was foretold centuries ago. Weston wrote a song in Lakota for those at camp and translated lyrics include: "Protectors of the Earth take courage, future generations depend on you."

Family members also danced in full regalia for those in attendance and Rochelle Bullhead, Frank's wife, spoke, becoming emotional as she talked about her willingness to die for a just cause, and her willingness to give her life to protect not only the Sioux people but the people in the room.

Her husband also spoke to the crowd and told how an officer shot him in the back with a rubber bullet while he was protecting Rochelle during the protests.

Weston said the gathering of the tribes at Standing Rock is a wake-up call that Western ways aren't working for Native Americans, where life is bleak on reservations and suicide rates are high. The gathering of tribes at Standing Rock is a call to return to the old ways for Native Americans, he said.

Chris Colane, a Sewanee resident, said she attended the potluck event because she wanted more education about Standing Rock.

"Not only did it inform me about

Frank Bullhead lives on the Standing Rock Reservation and is an opponent of the Dakota Access Pipeline. Bullhead says the effort is about protecting water for all people. Photo by Kevin Cummings

the environmental issues but it also touched my heart about the spirituality and beliefs and lifestyle of the Native American culture and their willingness to stand up non-violently for something they strongly believe in," she said. "And their purpose is to bring attention to water issues even if what they are standing up for will not be achieved. They're still achieving their purpose of calling us each to have a desire to preserve our Mother Earth."

Sewanee area friends provided hospitality for the families during their stay, and the visitors also gave presentations in Nashville and at The Farm in Summertown, Tenn.

in the manufacturing industry and economic development placed him in a position where he either served on or interacted directly with chamber boards.

Born and raised in Wisconsin and graduating from Wisconsin University with a B.S. in Business Administration, in 1980 Payne accepted the challenge of Wisconsin-based Monterey Mills to oversee the start up of a 150-person manufacturing facility in Cowan, Tenn. He continued at the Cowan plant as technical operations manager until the facility closed in 2002.

Taking a position as Regional Economic Development Specialist with the Tenn. Department of Economic and Community Development, Payne worked directly with local economic development professionals and chamber boards assisting with industry recruitment and retention programs.

When a position opened as Executive Director of the Franklin County Industrial Development Board (FCIDB), Payne welcomed the opportunity to move back to the area from his regional office in Cookeville. As FCIDB director from 2005-2011, Payne recruited six new industries which located in Franklin County resulting in over 220 new jobs.

When funding dried up for the FCIDB, Payne assumed a similar role as executive director of the Rhea County Economic and Tourism Council working to provide financial incentives for new industry and partnering with local chambers to create a tourism development program.

Payne cites tourism and the University of the South as assets not yet tapped to their maximum potential. "For the University to grow and thrive is a tremendous asset to the community," Payne said.

He stressed the importance of keeping money in the community by promoting businesses that provide for the needs of the community.

He also pointed to the importance of pursuing economic development born from a recognition and reverence for the region's heritage.

A personal task he's set for himself is to identify a method to measure the chamber's progress.

"It's important to quantify the work you do," Payne said, "to demonstrate to those you want to engage what they can expect to get back."

Payne welcomes inquiries from individuals and businesses who have ideas to offer or who want to learn more about the Chamber's work. To contact the South Cumberland Chamber of Commerce phone (931) 924-5353 or email <mmtnchamber@blomand.net>.

"clear parameters" for internet use.

In other business, board member Lance Williams asked the board to endorse a resolution supporting a new sewer system for Huntland School which is currently served by a septic system. The Huntland Board of Mayor and Alderman is considering applying for a state loan to install a city wide sewer system, Williams explained.

Board member Gary Hanger asked about the cost of public sewage service and expressed reservations about obligating the school system to use the service. "The cost would depend on water usage," said Director of Schools Amie Lonas.

The resolution did not place the board or district under any obligation, according to Williams. The resolution was circulated among the board members for their signatures.

In December, the Tennessee Department of Education released the 2015-16 State Wide Report Card with data on achievement, graduation rates, academic growth and other criteria making possible comparisons between state averages, districts and individual schools. Last year Lonas commented extensively on the result, putting them into context, but has no plans to do so this year.

"The only test scores were from high school level subjects that give end of course tests," Lonas said, explaining the assessment mechanism was different from the previous year so it was difficult to make comparisons. Last academic year the state decided not to precede with the proposed Common Core testing, so many subject areas were not assessed.

The mechanism for counting disadvantaged students also changed, Lonas said. Previously, all students who received free or reduced lunch qualified as disadvantaged, but in the 2015-16 assessment, only students certified as disadvantaged were reflected in the total. In Franklin County the percentage of economically disadvantaged students dropped from 57.7 percent to 31.9 percent. Grundy County statistics showed an even more dramatic decrease from 81.2 percent to 7.8 percent.

Lonas expressed concern about the effect on Basic Education Program funding which is linked to economic factors.

At the suggestion of Walker, the board changed the meeting time from 6:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. The board meets next for a working session on Feb. 6.

BOOKMARKED

A Column for Young Adult Readers and Adults Who Appreciate The Genre
by Margaret Stephens

News and Not

In this most interesting week when we celebrate both Martin Luther King Jr. and the inauguration of president-elect Trump, I’m drawn back to some basic reading as counterweight.

First, to an author whose books about growing up black in the Deep South were groundbreaking when they first appeared in the 70s and 80s: Mildred Taylor. Do you remember the Logan family of “Roll of Thunder, Hear My Cry,” “Let the Circle Be Unbroken,” and the others of the series? The first book won the Newbery Medal in 1977, and the rest are covered in honors, including several from the Jane Addams and Coretta Scott King awards.

The Logans own 400 acres of land in southern Mississippi, bought during Reconstruction when a white farmer needed money. The books narrate their efforts to hold on to it and safely raise four children through the dual hardships of the Great Depression and the racism of their rural community. Some of this makes for some difficult reading: Taylor based much of her work on family anecdotes, and there’s no hiding the fact that segregated schools, hateful language and lynchings are part of our communal past.

Why read it, then? In part because of how quickly you become attached to this close-knit family, including hot-headed Cassie, who narrates; her baby brother Little Man, who’s determined to keep his clothes meticulously clean despite the long walk to school along dusty roads; their father, who takes himself off to work laying railroad track in miserably hot Louisiana in order to pay the taxes on their cherished land.

I read the book because it’s history. I feel a need to go back to that right now. To remind myself what the effects of prejudice can be. To see where we’ve been and how we got there. And here.

Which means I’m doing something even more basic. Don’t laugh, but I’ve hauled various old history textbooks out of the attic so I can refresh my understanding of just what our founders had in mind when they came up with the Constitution and to read for myself what that document actually says. I want a more solid foundation from which to make my own interpretations of what’s going on out there. I have a friend who has the discipline to read news from reliable sites across the political spectrum. I don’t have the patience to do that. But I don’t just want to swallow whole what I’m being told by anyone.

There are numerous reading lists that popped out after the election suggesting books to “prepare us for a Trump presidency,” everything from dystopian novels such as “1984” and “The Handmaid’s Tale” to histories of totalitarianism or the populist movement. This is simply a sampling of what’s on my personal list.

We reportedly now have a president who doesn’t read much, because he’s too busy “doing.” I hope that’s one example we don’t follow, but instead, continue to read to challenge our assumptions with different points of view. As well as nurture our spirits with some of what our more thoughtful writers have to offer.

Arrival

PG-13 • 116 minutes

Nominated for two Golden Globes including a best actress nod for Amy Adams, “Arrival” is a realistic sci-fi movie, focusing on communication and understanding. Adams, who will most certainly earn a Best Actress Oscar nomination for her role, stars as Louise Banks, a linguistics expert helping to investigate why 12 alien spacecraft have landed all around the world. She and her team must find a way to communicate with the mysterious visitors in order to learn what they want and whether they pose a threat to humanity. She learns how to communicate with the visitors—deciphering semi-circular ink blots unbound by what we as humans think of as past, present or future—while world leaders try to control, conquer and destroy what they do not understand.

Rated PG-13 for brief strong language, this movie is well suited for all.

Tuesday, Jan. 24, 7 p.m.

Trapped

Documentary • 90 minutes

Please join the Women’s and Gender Studies and the Wick for a special screening of the award-winning documentary “Trapped” by Dawn Porter. The film will be followed by a discussion led by a panel of faculty and students.

U.S. reproductive health clinics are fighting to remain open. Since 2010, 288 laws regulating abortion providers have been passed by state legislatures. In total, 44 states and the District of Columbia have measures subjecting abortion providers to legal restrictions not imposed on other medical professionals. Unable to comply with these far-reaching and medically unnecessary laws, clinics have taken their fight to the courts.

“Trapped” follows the clinic workers and lawyers who were on the front lines of the battle to keep abortion safe and legal for millions of American women. For more information about this documentary go to <<http://www.trappeddocumentary.com/>>.

Hot Stuff (1979)

PG • 91 minutes

Dom DeLuise directs and stars in this comedy. A trio of undercover government cops in Miami decide that it would be a good idea to open a bogus fencing operation so they can trap criminals. When the crooks find out, trouble ensues and the fun begins.

Thursday–Sunday, Jan. 26–29, 7:30 p.m.

Moana

PG • 103 minutes

Walt Disney Animation Studios presents this CG-animated feature film and the ultimate girl-power story. Moana is the daughter of a chieftain and longs to venture past the reef surrounding their island home. Such travel has been forbidden. The island and the ocean are slowly dying because a demigod, Maui, hilariously voiced by Dwayne Johnson, stole and then lost the stone heart of a goddess.

Moana knows she has to help save her people. The sea entrusts the heart to Moana, and she sets out on an daring adventure to find Maui and restore the heart to the goddess. Come for the adventure but stay for the crab Tamatoa, voiced by Jemaine Clement.

The movie is rated PG for peril, some scary images and brief thematic elements.

Zanele Muholi: “Faces and Phases” at UAG

The University Art Gallery presents the work of renowned South African artist activist Zanele Muholi in a selection of 22 photographs from her series “Faces and Phases,” a series of dignified portrait photographs of black South Africans who identify as LGBTI. Shown together, these portraits of individuals represent and build community. Muholi is a visual activist. In collaboration with her sitters, she uses photography to combat the oppression of a group whose existence had been excluded from South African history, even 10 years after Apartheid. The people represented in Muholi’s portraits choose to be visible, empowered and themselves. They invite us to see and know them, and thereby resist the fear and erasure threatened by the prejudices, hate and brutal violence too often directed at them. “Faces and Phases” ensures visibility for black queer and transgender individuals and communities. “Faces and Phases” is on view in the University Art Gallery from Feb. 3 through April 14.

Muholi is the winner of the 2016 International Center for Photography Infinity Award for Documentary Photography and Photojournalism. She co-founded the Forum for Empowerment of Women (FEW) in 2002, and Inkanyiso, a forum for queer and visual (activist) media, in 2009. She has shown her work all around the world, most recently in the solo exhibition Zanele Muholi: Personae in the National Underground Railroad Freedom Center in Cincinnati, Ohio as part of FotoFocus 2016. Other 2016 exhibitions include Making Africa: A Continent of Contemporary Design, Centro do Cultura Contemporanea de Barcelona, Barcelona, Spain; Mina/ Meg at the Kulturhistorek Museum, Oslo, Norway; Somnyama Ngonyama, National Arts Festival, Albany Museum, Grahamstown, South Africa; Somnyama Ngonyama/Systematically Open?, Parc des Ateliers, LUMA Foundation, Arles, France; and African Art Against the State, Williams College Museum of Art, Williamstown, Massachusetts. Muholi lives and works in Johannesburg, South Africa.

Generous support for this exhibition and artist’s talk has been provided by the Friends of the UAG; the University Lectures Committee; the Art, Art History and Visual Studies department; the Politics department; the Humanities program; and Women’s and Gender Studies program. This exhibition would not be possible without the assistance of the Yancey Richardson Gallery, NY.

The University Art Gallery is located on Georgia Avenue. The gallery is free, accessible and open to the public. Hours are 10 a.m.–5 p.m., Tuesday through Friday, and noon–4 p.m., Saturday and Sunday. Call (931) 598-1223 for more information or go to <gallery.sewanee.edu>.

SAS Varsity Dedicates Win to Ward

St Andrew's-Sewanee School's varsity basketball team earned a road win on Jan. 14 over Hendersonville Christian Academy, 50-30.

The team dedicated the game to Reid Ward, a former SAS basketball player from the class of 1998 who passed away earlier this month. Reid was a force on the boards, averaging more than 10 rebounds a game.

"I told our team about Reid and the pride he took in rebounding," said head coach Rob Zeitler. "The guys made it their goal to dominate the boards this game and they did, grabbing 43 rebounds; Emmanuel Thombs had a season high 13. I am proud of the way this team honored Reid."

On offense, Thombs led the Mountain Lions with 12 points; Kenneth Thomas added 10; Jaylen Tillman posted eight points and nine rebounds; Blaise Zeitler chimed in with seven points and six rebounds; Larson Heitzenrater added five points and six rebounds; John Grammer had four points and three assists; Aubrey Black scored three; and Joe McDonough added one point.

The win moved SAS to 8-7 (2-0). The day before, SAS defeated Lookout Valley High School, 42-31. Thomas led the Mountain Lions with nine points; Tillman added nine points; Thombs scored seven; Grammer and Zeitler had six points each; and Heitzenrater had five.

Powell Earns All-State in Golf

Hannah Powell was selected to the 2016 Tennessee Sports Writers Association All-State Golf Team.

Hannah, daughter of Mark and Ashlie Powell of Cowan, is a senior at St. Andrew's-Sewanee School. Before transferring to SAS, she was on the District 6-AAA Warren County High School girls' golf team.

Hannah is a four-time qualifier for the state golf tournament. She placed 11th at the 2013 Class AAA TSSAA Golf Championships and tied for fifth at the 2014 Class AAA TSSAA Golf Championships.

Hannah won the 2015 Division II-A Regional Golf Championship, and she placed second at the 2015 Division II-A TSSAA State Golf Championships. In 2016, she placed second at the regionals and won the 2016 TSSAA Division II-A State Golf Tournament.

SAS Upsets Monteagle in Conference Tournament

The seventh-seeded St. Andrew's-Sewanee boys' middle school basketball team rallied to sting the two-seeded Monteagle Elementary Hornets on Jan. 14 to advance to the semifinals in the Big 8 conference tournament.

Monteagle hit a three just before the final buzzer but it wasn't enough as the Mountain Lions (4-12) prevailed 26-24 at Grundy County High School.

Nathan King led SAS in scoring with 10 points; followed by Cameron Harmon with nine; Sean Willis with three; and Payton Zeitler and Ethan Hargis added two each. Zeitler's defense, including drawing three charging fouls, led SAS to the win.

King also played tough the entire game despite an injured heel. Cam

Weaver played enforcer in the blocks and Harmon played inspired and physical on the offensive interior. Hargis came off the bench and coolly handled business to provide much needed breaks for Sean Willis, who hustled everywhere and contributed to the stifling defense.

The team now faces Pelham in the semifinals today (Friday) at 5:15 p.m. at Grundy County High School and will play in the championship or consolation game on Saturday, Jan. 21.

Prior to the tournament, the Mountain Lions won Jan. 12 at home against Coalmont, 29-19. King led all scorers with 13; followed by Zeitler with eight; Willis had four; and Weaver and Harmon scored two each.

Swimmers Set Records in Snowball Invite

Host St. Andrew's-Sewanee School finished sixth in combined score, eighth in girls' swimming and fifth in the boys' division amongst a field of 17 teams at the annual Snowball Invitational swim meet on Jan. 14.

A number of SAS swimmers excelled with school records and qualifying swims. Randy Paul, in his first meet of the season, had an impressive day setting new school records in the 50 fly (25.96 seconds) and the 50 backstroke (26.71). Paul also qualified for state in both the 50 freestyle (23.52) and 100 freestyle (52.95).

Catherine Gray narrowly missed the state cut in the 200 individual medley with a time of 2:33.00 (a new school record) and in the 100 backstroke with a time of 1:07.92.

Jack Haight made a regional cut in the 50 freestyle with a time of 27.44 seconds and Sarah Beth Hobby also made regionals in the 100 breaststroke with a personal best time of 1:28.65.

Sam Smith also missed a state cut in the 100 breaststroke by a narrow margin, finishing with a time of 1:09.81.

"We are very proud of our athletes who have qualified to extend their season. Hopefully, we will add more into that group before the season is over," said coach Jake Miller.

Seven Represent Aquatic Club

Seven of Sewanee's Mountain Aquatic Club (MAC) swimmers competed on Jan. 8 in the Karen Hamilton Meet hosted by Tullahoma Swim Club.

Led by Louie Frazier with 26 individual points and Maya Mauzy with 25 individual points, each MAC swimmer had a strong meet. Frazier won the 9-10 girls' 100 freestyle with a time of 1 minute, 25.09 seconds, dropping 0.42 seconds off her previous best time. Additionally, she finished fourth in the 50 freestyle, and fifth in the 50 butterfly, backstroke and breaststroke.

Mauzy finished second in the 100 freestyle with a time of 1:28.63 and third in the 50 backstroke with a new personal best of 41.73 seconds. She placed in the top five in the 50 freestyle and 50 breaststroke.

Caroline Neubauer, in her first USA Swimming meet of the year, took third in the 50 butterfly with a time of 46.02.

Reese Michaels dropped significant time in four out of her five individual events, including an impressive 14.66 second time drop on her first 100 freestyle of the season in the girls' 11-12 category.

In the 8 & Up age group, Konrad Knoll, Sam Frazier and Theo Michaels all had successful meet performances. Highlights include Knoll's third place finishes in the 25 freestyle (20.69) and 50 freestyle (45.08); Frazier's third place finishes in the 25 butterfly (26.71) and 25 backstroke (25.24), and Michaels' fifth place finish in the 25 breaststroke (28.75).

NATURENOTES

Pileated Woodpecker

Woodpeckers

Among the birds that are with us in the winter are the woodpeckers. They seem to be active and noticeable whatever the weather. The largest is the Pileated Woodpecker, with a red crest, black body, and white wing patches in flight. It is often seen foraging for carpenter ants on fallen logs or low on dead trees, making large holes. I consider us blessed to live in a place where they are a common sight.

Another largish woodpecker that feeds on ants, though it forages on the ground, is the Northern Flicker. It has a smallish red crescent on the back of its neck and noticeable white rump and yellow underwings in flight. The next three are smaller yet and similar in size—the Red-headed, the Red-bellied and the Hairy.

We don't seem to have as many Red-headed Woodpeckers as we once did. They are the "iconic" woodpecker, with an all-red head and striking black and white body and prefer open, park-like woodlands. The Red-bellied Woodpecker also has a large patch of red on the back of its head and one would be hard put to see the pinkish area on its belly that gives it its name.

In my part of the woods, if a woodpecker is carrying on and making a lot of noise, it is the Red-bellied. The Hairy is hard to distinguish from the much smaller Downy, unless they are seen together. They both have a white patch on the back, white underparts, and barred black and white wings. Adult males have a small red patch on the back of the head. Downys are much more common, so when in doubt, that is a good guess.

Finally, only in winter, you may see the Yellow-bellied Sapsucker (yes, there really is a bird with that name!) at your suet feeder. It is somewhat similar in appearance to the Downy and the Hairy. And it is indeed the bird that leaves rings of small holes in the trunks of trees, feeding on the sap and on insects attracted to the sap.

Upcoming Herbarium Winter Events

Herbarium Tour and Mountathon, at the Sewanee Herbarium, Spencer Hall, Saturday, Jan. 28, 9:30-11:30 a.m., with Herbarium Curator Mary Priestley—This is your chance to see where and what the herbarium is and to help in the work. Spending a morning mounting pressed plants can be a satisfying and fun experience. The finished product is always useful and often quite beautiful. Come help us mount our backlog of specimens. Learn methods that have been passed down through generations and are still used today, and take home a guide to mounting pressed plants. Meet in the Herbarium on the first floor of Spencer Hall. The main entrance is across from duPont Library and there is parking behind the library.

Water Walk, Snowden Hall, Room TBA, Saturday, Feb. 4, 9:30-11:30 a.m.—This past summer's drought reminded us that the availability of water has always been a concern for Sewanee and other plateau communities. Join geology professor Martin Knoll and Mary Priestley for a walk to learn about water as a resource for inhabitants of the plateau—plants and animals, as well as the human population. Meet at Snowden Hall to caravan to the site of the walk, which will include Hodgson's Pond, Abbo's Alley, the ATO and Tremlett Springs. Wear comfortable shoes for this easy 1-mile walk. If weather is inclement, we will remain at Snowden.

Nature Journaling—A nature journaling group, sponsored by the Herbarium, meets Thursdays, 9 a.m.–11 a.m. in the Herbarium. An informal gathering, participants share observations and writing, and sketch plants or other natural objects. Everyone is welcome.

For more information on these or other Sewanee Herbarium events, please contact Mary Priestley at <marypriestley@bellsouth.net>.
