Students were able to view animals such as a Cope's tree frog, black rat snake and an alligator snapping turtle. Students earned this special program because the majority of classes reduced the amount of trash they produced during the second Litterless Lunch audit. Thank you to the Tigers Don't Leave Tracks community partners for their continued support of these efforts. Second-graders Brandon Sells, Maggie Lu Rudd and Will Roberts are pictured with a visitor from the Tennessee Aquarium.

Swiss Pantry Shows Love to Customers and Vendors

by Kevin Cummings, Messenger Staff Writer

The hot asphalt off David Crockett Parkway cuts a swift trail through Belvidere, and just off that well-worn path, Swiss Pantry beckons for a pause with a cold drink and cowboy cookie.

Stapled to a highway but tucked into the heart of a Mennonite community for almost three decades, the store and bakery has called to the sweet and savory side of both travelers and locals.

Enos and Charlotte Miller moved to Belvidere from Virginia in the summer of 1987 and the dairy farmer and his wife bought a house and needed extra money to pay the mortgage. Charlotte was known for sharing baked treats with her neighbors and soon they and others started offering to pay for her sourdough bread and cinnamon rolls.

The family constructed Swiss Pantry, about half the size it is now, and the Millers had a haven for their customers.

"We could tell there was a demand and there was nothing like it in the area, and we felt this is the way God was leading us to go," Charlotte said.

Enos's three sisters moved down from Virginia to help and the Miller family was selling enough baked treats and bulk goods so that Swiss Pantry doubled in size after two years.

"Sourdough bread was our staple back then as were our cowboy cookies and those two are still, outside of the donuts, our bestsellers," Charlotte said.

The youngest of the Miller children is currently learning to make sourdough bread and all eight of their kids, seven boys and one girl, ages 14 to 34, have been raised in the business.

"When we first opened we had two kids, well three, I was pregnant with the third one," she said. "They have all learned how to cook and every last one of them has had specific jobs that they've had to do here."

Charlotte has also watched her customers' children grow up in the Swiss Pantry, like one woman whose grandmother always brought her in for a happy face cookie.

"She has grown up, gotten married and has kids of her own and now she's bringing her kids in here for the same thing," Charlotte said. "And that's just really cool to me that there's this ongoing loyalty from our customers."

Frame Gallery Hosts First Art Exhibit, Reception

by Kevin Cummings
Messenger Staff Writer

For Rea Mingeva, coming to work at Frame Gallery was yet another turn of fortune in her life—and a reunion with a kindred spirit.

Mingeva, a longtime art professor at Minnesota State University, first met Harriet Runkle when Mingeva was working in the kitchen at St. Mary's Sewanee retreat center, where Runkle's husband John was director. The two women had a love of art in common and formed a quick bond.

"On several occasions I was like, 'I really need this person (Mingeva) in my life; I don't know how,'" Runkle recalled.

When Runkle purchased the assets of Corners Custom Framing and started her own business there in January, her vision was to not only offer framing services, but create a corner shop of artistic invitation and education. Soon she tabbed Mingeva, a master framer, to join the staff.

"How awesome could anybody's life be, where you could end up in this fabulous space with this fabulous partner doing this after lifting heavy dishes at St. Mary's at 65 (years-old)?" Mingeva asked.

Throughout her journey, Mingeva said she has had wonderful opportunities as she wades through what works and what doesn't for her. She retired from teaching at Minnesota State to focus on her own art, when she could have been making a six-figure salary with summers off—but she said she couldn't teach passion.

School Board Reverses Position on Middle Schools

by Leslie Lytle
Messenger Staff Writer

At the June 18 Franklin County Commission meeting, the Franklin County School Board will ask the commission to fund the design plans for two new middle schools, with an estimated design cost of $1.8 million. This decision followed the vote at the May 14 school board meeting to rescind the request for funding for a single consolidated middle school.

The board had previously rejected the two-school solution to the problem of the county's aging middle schools, citing concerns the high construction cost would result in sacrificing programming and curriculum needs. The search for a site for the consolidated school stalled due to high property costs and drainage problems at the two most desirable locations.

The engineering firm who advised the board in evaluating the middle schools' dilemma suggested Director

Swiss Pantry offers an array of in-house baked goods, as well as meats, cheeses and plenty of other items, such as spices, candy, snacks and sandwiches. Some of the goodies in the store come from other Mennonite/Amish communities in Langston County, Penn., or Holmes County, Ohio.

She said Mennonite communities can vary greatly, but they form a large network of people willing to help.

"They are very much supportive of each other," Charlotte said. "Anytime there are needs both in the community and among each other, they're very good at helping to meet those needs."

Local area vendors also provide goods for the Pantry, a handful of which include Triple T Cattle Farms' beef, Mama Sue's bath products, Nature's Wealth poultry, and fudge from SteBe Cakery.

From 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday, May 26, the store is hosting a "Vendor & Customer Appreciation Event," which will allow area vendors to showcase their wares, Miller said. In addition, the store is offering 20 percent off on everything except baked goods.

One loyal customer, Lane Price, an oncologist who splits time between homes in Monteagle and Decatur, Ala., often stops at the Swiss Pantry on her way. Price said she likes the consistency of the store's quality and especially enjoys their Brunswick stew and sourdough bread.

"People there are just extraordinarily nice and the food is excellent," she said. "They make soup in the winter months that is just outstanding."

The Swiss Pantry has a welcoming feel to it and the swirling smell of fried pies, cinnamon rolls, meats and cheeses provides a comfort.

When asked what it's like to work there every day, Linea Powell, the store's marketing specialist, described a team atmosphere.

"Our boss (Charlotte) is amazing and willing to lay her life down for us," Powell said. "We really do want to help each other. I'm always amazed at just the kindness and generosity that there is, and the loyalty that they have to this store."

Charlotte said the store is a ministry for the seven or so employees, as well as the community, and they want to be "God-honoring" in how they treat everyone.

"I don't ever want to come across that this is something we have accomplished on our own, because we haven't, it has definitely been God being with us every step of the way and directing us," she noted. "...Neither my husband nor I have a business education or experience in running a business, so God has been really gracious and good. We're never going to be millionaires sitting here but we are happy where we're at and with the ministry that God's given us."

Swiss Pantry is at 10026 David Crockett Parkway. For more information call (931) 962-0567.

to the pencil drawing of Moore.

Mingeva's creation process is prayer and conversation, she noted.

"It's trying to capture a silence between me and the painting that feels like a conversation between me and the real person," she said. "All my work is very silent, it's very quiet."

"If there's anything that feels so honest, so reverent, it would be when I'm watching that brush on my canvas," she added. "Every mark becomes something that I have to react to differently. I don't set out to make a painting look any (specific) way, I set out to have this conversation."

Another aim of the reception today is to showcase the new frame shop, which John, an architect and woodworker, helped remodel. Harriet said she wants to add more artistic opportunities there, possibly workshops and an "Art on the Spot" station, where people can create in the store. Mingeva also currently offers private art lessons at the gallery.

"It's not a static place where you bring in your art, leave it and come back and get it, but you can look at an exhibit and hopefully get to know this as a place where creativity is alive," Runkle said. "As a teacher, an art historian and art lover, it's a place where I feel creative and feel like I can encourage that for people who come in the shop."

Frame Gallery is between Village Laundry and Shenanigans. The monthly art exhibits continue in June with the photography of John Willis.

of Schools Stanley Bean contact Gary Clardy with Clardy Construction Consulting Company from Dickson, Tenn.

Clardy rejected renovating the schools, arguing the $35-$37 million price tag would get the county nothing but a roof over the existing structures. Looking at property costs and site work for a single consolidated school at the locations under consideration, Clardy concluded building two new schools would cost less.

He recommended building two identical schools on the existing school sites and retaining the gyms at both schools as well as the eighth grade wing at North Middle School, a much newer structure. Under his proposal, classes would continue in the extant structures during construction, eliminating the need for portables.

Clardy also recommended refurbishing the gym roofs and transforming the stages into locker rooms since the new buildings would have auditoriums. The new schools would accommodate 500 students each, with the eighth grade wing providing for 200 additional students at North, which has a higher enrollment.

The plans called for a covered walkway to North's eighth grade wing, making the total cost slightly higher. Clardy estimated construction and refurbishing at North would cost $21.2-$24.3 million, and $20.5-$23.5 million at South.

He stressed the projected costs were "conceptual figures" and anticipated having more firm numbers by the next board meeting.

The estimates included Clardy's .5 percent fee for serving as construction manager. The typical fee ranges from 2-3 percent.

"I'd like to impact Franklin County in a good way," Clardy said. A 1970 graduate of Franklin County High School, Clardy went on to earn a degree in civil engineering. As the Assistant Superintendent for Engineering and Construction for the Rutherford County school system, Clardy has supervised the construction of 14 schools.

Clardy's time line proposes beginning construction in November of this year and projects a completion date of January 2020, with the old schools demolished the following summer when students are not in classes.

In addition to voting to ask the county commission for design funding, the board voted to have the school system's attorney Chuck Cagle review Clardy's contract before retaining him as construction manager.

"What I want to see in the two buildings remains unchanged," said school board representative Adam Tucker, stressing the importance of quality programming.

Board member Christine Hopkins concurred. "What's fair at North needs to be fair at South."

Director of Schools Contract Extended; Budget Dips Heavily into Fund Balance

by Leslie Lytle, Messenger Staff Writer

Contingent with the decision at the May 14 meeting to recommend the county build two new middle schools, the Franklin County School Board approved extending the two-year contract of Director of Schools Stanley Bean by an additional two years.

“Given the middle school project we have before us, continuity is really important,” said school board representative Adam Tucker.

Bean’s first year of service ends June 30. The recent board evaluation rated Bean’s performance in the good to excellent range in all categories.

In the discussion of the 2018–19 budget, Bean cited several circumstances causing the draw on the reserve fund balance to increase from $1.9 million in 2017–18 to $2.6 million for the coming year. The budget reflects a 3 percent increase in health insurance costs, a 1.5 percent increase in bus drivers’ wages, and an $100,000 shortfall in anticipated pre-K funding. Also, Bean noted, last year the school system’s property tax revenue increased by $700,000, with the projected increase for the coming year only $31,000. Funding from the state also decreased due to decreased enrollment.

The budget includes a 2 percent raise for all school system employees consistent with the raise proposed for all county employees. The board will ask the county to fund the school employees’ raise.

Reviewing the budget, the board asked Bean to increase the certified substitute teachers salary to $80 per day to attract quality substitutes. The board also asked Bean to restore the position of school system psychologist rather than expecting the Director of Special Education to fulfill both roles.

“We used to have three school psychologists,” said board member Linda Jones, justifying the request.

The board will hold a special called meeting at 6 p.m., Thursday, May 24, to finalize the budget in order to present it to the county finance committee by Tuesday, June 5.

Franklin County High School Principal Roger Alsup addressed the board recommending changes to graduation honors policies to give due recognition to graduates who enroll in honors and advanced placement classes. The changes would also prevent circumstances such as the recent Grundy County High School dispute over the selection of valedictorian, Alsup said.

Alsup proposed honors scholars complete at least 12 honors courses; valedictorians and salutatorians must have attended FCHS for the last five semesters; the ACT test taken most recently prior to graduation be used to determine class ranking; and weighting honors courses with a maximum score of 4.5 and advanced placement courses with a maximum score of 5, instead of the traditional 4.0 high grade.

Bean will consult with Huntland High School Principal Ken Bishop about the recommended policy changes.

“We need to have the same policy at both schools,” board chair Cleijo Walker stressed.

CHIROPRACTIC CARE FOR ATHLETES

Many of you may have been seeing some of our new patient testimonials called “ATHLETES CORNER” on Facebook, LinkedIn, etc. These are all athletes that I have treated for various issues in order to get them back on the playing field of whatever sport that they participate in. However, an athlete does not necessarily need a health issue for chiropractic to be beneficial for them.

As we all know, we are in era of sports craze, ranging from recreation league, school, college, and professional. There is of course always the risk of injury in every sport, whether it be a micro or macro trauma. Anyone who has sustained such an injury should have a chiropractic checkup. Why? Because these injuries very commonly jar the spine and cause misalignment of the spine called “subluxations”. Subluxations left untreated not only detrimentally affect athletic performance, but they can escalate into much more serious problems. Subluxations apply pressure to nerves, muscles, tendons, and ligaments. Chiropractors are the only physicians who are trained to locate and remove subluxations of the spine through the chiropractic adjustment. We also utilize physical therapy modalities to help muscles relax and hold the chiropractic adjustment in place. Many of my patients get phenomenal results with the dry needling as well.

Injuries are not the only reason athletes obtain chiropractic care. All levels of athletes are finding that it enhances their performance. A balanced structural system promotes improved reaction time, strength, and coordination which have been proven in various studies, as well as quicker recovery time.

Bluesman Andy Cohen Returns to Cowan

Memphis blues musician Andy Cohen returns to Cowan to offer a guitar workshop and concert next week at the Cowan Center for the Arts.

Cohen's deep knowledge and understanding of the folk, blues, and roots musical traditions and his virtuoso finger-style guitar performances have won him acclaim in acoustic music circles. Over the years, Cohen has toured or worked with many of the blues greats including Rev. Gary Davis and Son Thomas, and has helped to support a number of his mentors and promising younger musicians by organizing festivals and other performances. He has also worked to spread his knowledge through classes, workshops, and, he says, "anywhere people are making music." He has received the prestigious Eisteddford Award from the Folk Music Society of NY for "his outstanding contributions to the field of traditional music, as performer, collector, and advocate," and a Lifetime Achievement Award from the California Autoharp Gathering.

Cohen's guitar workshop will be from 5–7 p.m., Thursday, May 24, at Cowan Center for the Arts. The workshop will focus on Piedmont Blues fingerstyle guitar. Cohen says, "What's called Piedmont Blues is awfully similar to what's called Travis Picking. Pickers who play a melody against a constant alternating bass line done with the thumb, and all the complications that arise from that interaction, distributed all over the South but more thickly in the eastern regions. The technique which probably arose in Africa, is common in both Black and White playing. Most early players used just the thumb and index finger to accomplish it."

"This workshop is designed to highlight the several secrets of one of those master players, Rev. Gary Davis, who was a school of music unto himself. If you can do even a little of his music, it illuminates all the rest of it and makes it accessible."

The workshop is limited to 15 participants, and costs $20 per person. The long running weekly Cowan Acoustic Jam will follow from 7 p.m. until 9:30 p.m., moving to the Center for the Arts this week from its usual location at the Franklin County Arts Guild's Artisan Depot Gallery.

Friday, May 25, the concert will feature Cohen performing an eclectic mix of songs from a variety of Southern musical traditions, drawing from Country Blues, the repertoire of his mentor Rev. Gary Davis, "blues rooted in Mississippi, the Piedmont, Memphis and Chicago" & ragtime, along with Gospel and spirituals "from a dozen different forms of worship." Doors open at 6:30 p.m., with admission on a "pay what you want" model. Seating is limited, and reservations are recommended.

Cowan Center for the Arts Theater is located at 301 Montgomery St., in Cowan, and is operated by Cowan Community School, a Tennessee non-profit organization. For more information, visit <cowancommunityschool.org> or call (931) 313-1623.

SAS Girls' Tennis Team to Play in State Semifinals

After finishing fourth in the region, the St. Andrew's-Sewanee girls' tennis team has played its way to the state semifinals.

SAS will play their semifinal match at the Spring Fling, Tennessee Spring Sports Championships, on May 22 at 9 a.m. at the Adams Tennis Complex in Murfreesboro.

In the first round of the sub-state on May 14, the SAS girls traveled to Middle Tennessee Christian School in Murfreesboro to play the University School of Jackson, the No. 3 team from the West region. Senior Ester Yang of China and sophomores Tessa Shackelford of Sewanee, Anna Post of Monteagle and Carla Hof of Germantown all won their matches. Freshman Jenna Black of Sewanee was winning her singles match when it was stopped after SAS claimed the overall victory, 4-0. In postseason play, once a team wins four matches and clinches the win, the other matches are stopped.

On May 15, SAS played Middle Tennessee Christian School (No. 1 team in the Middle Region) at Adams Tennis Complex in Murfreesboro. Yang, Post and Hof all claimed wins. SAS led the overall match 3-2 heading into doubles. Both doubles teams, No. 1 Yang and Shackelford, as well as No. 2 Post and Hof, jumped out to early leads in the first-to-eight pro-set. Both teams continued their march to victory with Post and Hof getting there first, winning their match 8-2 and propelling SAS into the Final Four at the state tournament. The Yang/Shackelford match was stopped two points shy of a victory, 7-2 (30-love).

The win moved SAS to the state semifinals, where their opponent was yet-to-be determined as of print deadline.

Region Tournament

Prior to the state tourney, the SAS girls' tennis team entered the DIIA East Region team tournament as the No. 1 team from District 2. The East Region, arguably the toughest in the state, is made up of District 1 teams from the Knoxville area and District 2 teams from the Chattanooga area.

On May 8, in the first round of the region tournament, SAS hosted the No. 4 team from District 1, The King's Academy. The Mountain Lions easily handled the visiting team, winning 4-1. Yang, Shackelford, Post and Hof all recorded wins. At No. 5 singles, Black fought back from a first set loss to tie the score at one set all and played an awesome tie-breaker, but eventually lost to a very consistent opponent.

On May 10, SAS traveled to the Webb School of Knoxville to play the Christian Academy of Knoxville (No. 2 team from District 1) in the semifinals of the region tournament. SAS played its best match of the year, coach Kenneth Alexander said, but the team lost and Shackelford claimed the lone win, 6-2, 6-1.

On May 11, SAS hosted Chattanooga Christian School in the playoff for third and fourth in the region. After the singles matches and wins from Yang and Hof, SAS trailed 3-2 overall when Post and Hof lost a good doubles match, 8-4, to end the contest. SAS finished fourth in the East Region and qualified for sub-state.

HEARING HEALTH NEWS
by Debbie Gamache,
M.S. CCC-A Audiologist

SUMMER HUMIDITY WARNING

Moisture, which can cause hearing aid distortion and loss of power, is more of a problem during the summer because of high humidity and perspiration.

You can minimize moisture problems by consistent use of a drying appliance each night. You simply place your hearing aids in the drawer of the appliance and leave them overnight where they will be dried out to remove moisture (as well as sanitized and deodorized!). Remember, normal wear and tear can cause hearing aid parts to wear out, corrode, or lose power. This may happen so gradually you may not notice the loss of power, increased distortion or decreased battery life.

Care and maintenance of your hearing aids is crucial. We offer repair services and cleaning appliances and tools at Debbie Gamache's The Hearing Center LLC. We are located at 705 NW Atlantic St. Suite B, Tullahoma. You can reach us at 931-393-2051. You can also visit our website at www.thehearingcenterllc.com.

NATURENOTES

Pewee and Phoebes

We have recently had a couple of bird experiences, one with an Eastern Wood-Pewee and one with Eastern Phoebe. We often hear the Pewee but had never seen one until, sadly, it crashed into one of our windows, which was strange because we had never seen one around the house. It is around the same size as the Phoebe and is also in the flycatcher group, but it doesn't have the tail-wagging behavior of most flycatchers. It does forage and nest in the middle to upper canopy of the forest, which explains why we hadn't seen it. Its arrival in spring, heralded by its song, is one of the highlights of the season. The Phoebe is with us year-round. It does flick its tail, but downwards, differing from other flycatchers. It hunts from conspicuous perches and often nests on buildings or other manmade structures, so we see it often. They may also be found nesting in rockhouses around this area. A Phoebe has nested on our porch near the back door since 1999, before we even moved into the house, except for a year or two when house finches took over all the nesting sites. Phoebes are noted for their tameness and they didn't seem much bothered by our going in and out. In fact, a Phoebe may have been one of the first birds ever banded, by Audubon in 1840. They were raising four nestlings this year, and we were keeping the cats in because they appeared about to fledge. Spotting a strange cat on the porch, I went out the door clapping my hands to chase it away, and in a flurry of wings the fledglings were gone!

Phoebes and Pewees are birds whose songs are easy to learn, because they say their names. Phoebes call loudly and often, saying "fee-be" and "fee-blee." Pewees whistle a slower, sweeter "pee-oo-wee" with an upward lilt, and "pee-oo," with a downward lilt.

at the end closest to the airport. Bicycles are to be at Woody's Bike Shop at 1:30 pm for judging.

Name of Group: _____

Contact Name: _____

Phone Number(s): _____

Group Size: _____ Number of Animals: _____

Number of Vehicles: _____ Is one of your vehicles a float? Yes No

Will your group be playing music? Yes No

Brief description of your group: _____

THIS YEAR ALL FORMS MUST BE RETURNED by Saturday, June 30, for your group TO BE IN THE PARADE

There are three ways to submit your form

*Drop it off in the "From Sea to Shining Sea" jar by the door at the Blue Chair

*E-mail it to: Leighannecouch@gmail.com

*Mail it to: Leigh Anne Couch, 245 Running Knob Hollow Rd., Sewanee 37375

We appreciate your help in making the parade safe and enjoyable for everyone.

If you will be throwing candy, please be sure to throw it as close to the curb as you can. We want to keep our little ones as safe as possible by keeping them from running out into the road. I know, not an easy task, but we can try. Also, if you have a horn or other type of loud noise, please turn it off when your entry reaches the Kirby-Smith Monument. There are those who do not like to hear the sirens and they will be seated at or near the hospital. Due to insurance precautions, we will once again be asking that you sign a release form. Someone will be there the day of the parade to take care of this. And last but not least, if you will be riding a motorcycle or 4-wheeler, please wear your helmet and be very cautious in your driving. Remember, there are children all along the parade route. Your help in this will be greatly appreciated.
