Blount Tapped as Parade Grand Marshal

Fourth of July Parade Still Accepting Entries

The Fourth of July planning committee is pleased to announce that the 2015 Grand Marshal is Steve Blount.

Blount was selected from a large, talented pool of nominees. "It is encouraging that there are so many people in our community who exemplify servant-leadership every day," said Erin Kunz, one of the parade organizers.

He is the senior assistant district attorney for the 12th Judicial District based in Franklin County and has served in this position for 25 years.

Blount has been instrumental in the 12th Judicial District Drug Court since its inception in 2005. He serves as chairman of the Drug Court Team and as vice president of the 12th Judicial District Drug Court Foundation. Organizers hope to have as many parade entries as possible. Gather up family, friends and coworkers, and join in. All entries are welcome: musical, clowns, bicycles, horses, floats, baton twirlers, beauty pageant winners or cars. This year's parade will travel downhill from Hall Street to the Sewanee Market; it will begin at 2 p.m. on July 4. Parade entries must be made by June 30.

Chasing Dragonflies Hood Practices Citizen Science

by Kevin Cummings, Messenger Staff Writer

About 50 feet away it hovers, hawking on this beginning-to-bake June morning. Robley Hood identifies the Great Blue Skimmer by its size, color and flying pattern as she sits beneath the pavilion in Abbo's Alley.

The dragonfly bobs out and above us, staying close as if it knows we are talking about it and the rest of its cousins on the Domain. Hood is a citizen scientist, a woman who gets bundled up to protect against bugs, sun and snakes, and takes her camera to different bodies of water in Sewanee in search of odonates—dragonflies and damselflies.

"They are unbelievably beautiful," she says. "Some of them are like looking at Tiffany stained glass windows, and you don't see it unless you can get close up." "Dragonflies can see almost 360 degrees, and they don't hear, so everything is visual. If someone comes up to it, they think it's a predator. It's real tricky; you have to learn how to stalk," she adds. Kirk Zigler, chair of Sewanee's biology department, calls Hood's work outstanding and says that as the climate changes, any observations collected today will be important in tracking how species distributions change over time. "Dragonflies and damselflies are amazing creatures and she has made significant contributions to our understanding of local biodiversity by documenting species and their behaviors," he says. (Continued on page 8)

Reunion of 1960s Civil Rights Workers Honors Walter

Group Gathers to Share an Untold Story of Grassroots Activism

by Leslie Lytle Messenger Staff Writer

Former members of the Selma Interreligious Project (SIP) gathered in Sewanee recently for a reunion and to honor the Rev. Frances Walter, founder of SIP. He served as director of SIP from 1965 to 1972.

In 1965, the National Council of Churches contacted Walter about carrying on the work of Jonathan Daniels, a young Episcopal civil rights worker murdered in Hayneville, Ala., while attempting to enter a whitesnly store with a young black woman. Walter rose to the challenge.

The 1965 voting rights march from Selma, Ala., to the state capital in Montgomery influenced Congress's passage of the Voting Rights Act later that year; the 1965 bill solidifed the to end racial discrimination.

"The people around Selma weren't enjoying the rights they helped to bring to the rest of the nation," said Steve Suitts, one of Walter's early recruits. "African-Americans were organizing themselves, and SIP supported and enabled their efforts." Suitts was a student at the University of Alabama in 1965 when he joined SIP.

Ralph Knowles, a young attorney with SIP, was defending more than 2,000 black high school students who were

Eviction was used to punish blacks who stepped "out of place," SIP organizers recalled. SIP provided the FBI with information on 70 black sharecroppers who were Middlebury College has walked onto our grounds during Camp Gailor-Maxon and absconded with an acoustic guitar and two laptop computers, all of which belonged to our counselors and staff. None of our campers were in danger, but the idea of such an event is unsettling. The Monteagle Police Department responded promptly and professionally to our call. Officer David Brown handled the initial complaint and then worked with his fellow officers to follow up on tips, some of which came from good Samaritans in our community.

Less than 36 hours later, a suspect was in custody, and some of the goods had been returned to their rightful owners. The police continued to follow leads and were able to recover the rest of our stolen items for us just a few days later. Special thanks to Officer Brown and Officer Jack Hill for their diligence

GARDEN GRATITUDE To the Editor:

I have always loved beautiful flower gardens. My parents and I always loved to walk in Ábbo's Alley.

After my husband, Glenn, and I were married, we spent our vacations visiting beautiful flower gardens across this country. Because of my feet and legs, it is very difficult for me to travel anymore. When we lived in Chattanooga, we were fortunate to have a dear neighbor with a beautiful flower garden next door for us to enjoy. Now, we want to say a special thank-you to Caroline Shoemaker for her beautiful flower garden across the street from us.

We offer this portion of "God's Garden," a poem by Dorothy Frances

> The kiss of the sun for pardon The song of the birds for mirth One is nearer to God's heart in the garden Than anywhere else on earth

We want Caroline to know that her garden is a great blessing to us and we are grateful.

Myers Receives Bonner Foundation Award

The Bonner Foundation recently recognized Dixon Myers, Sewanee's coordinator of outreach, for his exemplary work by awarding him the B-Loved Community Award, which is given to recognize an individual's support of the value commitments of the foundation: civic engagement, community building, diversity, international perspective, social justice and spiritual exploration. The recognition was based on Myers' innovative work at the University.

Coordinator of the outreach program since 1991, Myers has inspired a generation of students. Among the efforts he has helped begin are Housing Sewanee Inc., a local low-income housing organization, and numerous outreach trips offered during college breaks (Jamaica, Haiti, Ecuador, Costa Rica, New York, New Orleans, Miami).

"Not only does Dixon's résumé exhibit the Bonner Foundation's core commitments to community building, spiritual exploration, international perspective, and social justice, it is the inspiration and source of many of the recent developments in community engagement at the University," said professor Jim Peterman, director of Sewanee's Office of Community Engagement.

academic, conference and residential facilities for both the seminary and the Beecken Center. The campus master planners worked with the School of Theology dean and faculty to identify needs, including adequate space for the Beecken Center and its long-standing program Education for Ministry.

"This move will have an impact upon the School of Theology and the University for decades to come," said Vice-Chancellor John McCardell. "I am pleased that the Regents determined that a central campus relocation of the School is not only feasible, but the right thing to do."

In February the Board of Regents heard a report about potential sites and programs from the Rt. Rev. J. Neil Alexander, dean of the School of Theology. Based on that, the Regents asked staff members to move forward with more detailed concepts and plans for a central campus site. The resulting plan to move to the Bishop's Common location was approved in June, after the Regents reviewed options developed with an architecture firm.

Diocese of Texas Makes Grant to Sewanee

The University is pleased to announce a $1 million gift from the Episcopal Foundation of Texas. Though the gift is being made to the University, a significant portion has been designated for the School of Theology.

"We are blessed by our long partnership with Sewanee, and we have the distinct pleasure to have many Sewanee graduates among both our lay leaders and our clergy. We are grateful to be able to make this gift and pray it will help to support the continued health and vitality of the University of the South and of the School of Theology," said the Rt. Rev. C. Andrew Doyle, bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Texas.

The School of Theology, an accredited seminary of the Episcopal Church, has been an essential part of the University of the South since 1878. Over the years, the School has played a major role in the Church, the Anglican Communion and the world by forming and educating men and women for leadership positions. With the recent expansion of the Beecken Center, the School now provides training for congregational and outreach development in dioceses and parishes, in addition to its long-established Education for Ministry program

"This gift provides a tremendous boost to the plans we have for the School of Theology, as the University and the School of Theology are planning to expand the School's buildings and programs," said Vice-Chancellor John M. McCardell Jr.

The University's vision for the School of Theology includes the construction of state-of-the-art academic, conference and residential facilities; an increase in student scholarships; support for faculty development; and additional opportunities for theological education in the Beecken Center.

"The leadership of the bishop and Diocese of Texas is critical to Sewanee's future, particularly their support of the expanding work of the School of Theology," said the Rt. Rev. J. Neil Alexander, dean of the School of Theology. "Bishop Doyle shares our vision that theological education is the birthright of all of the baptized and the Foundation's support is a major factor in making that vision a living reality."

The Friends of Canon Gideon Foundation is hosting a picnic on the bluff, 6–8 p.m., Sunday July 12, at St. Mary's Sewanee to raise funds for Canon Gideon Byamugisha's Hope Institute near Kampala, Uganda. This year's focus is to furnish a classroom with desktop and laptop computers. In the past year, funds raised in Sewanee have helped purchase a Toyota van and paid for pediatric ophthalmology testing for Nakato Aisha (who has been blind since birth), and enrolled her in a special boarding school for the blind. Hope Institute staff member James Mutyaba (above) introduces Nakato to her new school. For information and to RSVP contact Sally Hubbard at 598-5338 or email <sally@hubbard.net>.

Bigbee & Burnette share FSC Award

At the recent Friends of South Cumberland State Park annual meeting, Dr. Wallace Bigbee of McMinnville and Ty Burnette of Monteagle were awarded the Jim Prince Award, which is given annually in memory of a founder of the Friends of South Cumberland (FSC) and an early leader and role model. It is the highest award of FSC, given to those persons who most exemplify leadership in outdoor conservation for the region encompassed by the South Cumberland State Recreation Area.

Bigbee was founder and longtime president of the Savage Gulf Preservation League (SGPL), a group organized to support the purchase of Savage Gulf by the state of Tennessee for designation as a State Natural Area. The Nature Conservancy and Huber Lumber Company helped by making the acquisition of adjacent Collins and Big Creek gulfs possible. Subsequently, the SGPL acquired land for a parking lot at the Greeter Falls trail head. Bigbee has remained active in conservation work, serving on the Tennessee Conservation Commission and the Commissioner's Council on Greenways and Trails.

Burnette has served as president of FSC for four years. During his tenure, the Friends acquired additional acreage around the Savage Gulf, at Foster Falls and at Carter State Natural Area. FSC also initiated a chapter of the Tennessee Naturalist Program and has been a sponsor of Camp Discover, a two-week day camp at Tracy City Elementary School. Under his leadership, Trails & Trilliums has grown, the outreach to Grundy County schools has expanded now to include all fourth- and fifth-graders, and the Back-the-Ranger volunteer program was initiated. evicted because they voted. Unfortunately, only one of those cases was ever prosecuted.

"The FBI was not a friend of civil rights," said Suitts.

Many of those attending the reunion talked about learning they were under surveillance. "It was amazing how much people knew about you," said Martha Jane Patton, who left her career as a legal secretary to join SIP. "We were paranoid, and with good reason," said Walter.

Suitts recalled escorting a black community member to vote and being threatened by a sheriff flourishing a baton and his rifle-toting deputy.

Black and white young people who fraternized were committed to mental institutions without ever seeing a judge, SIP members recalled. Knowles filed a suit bringing about changes in the law that stopped the practice. SIP went on to work to deinstitutionalize mental health facilities and to support and promote SIP-sponsored group homes. Said Walter, "We dealt with the pressures of the time."

The work of SIP ranged from legal and technical assistance to helping alleviate job, food and housing insecurity. The women's quilting co-op that SIP helped organize was so successful that the beautiful handmade quilts were eventually sold at Bloomingdale's in New York City. When the women needed assistance with managing finances, SIP found them an accountant through the Black Muslims.

The black community's appeal to churches of diverse faiths for help led Walter to christen the organization the Selma Interreligious Project, but most of the recruits who signed on didn't have a faith-based connection. They were students, young attorneys and activists from the women's movement and anti-war movement who answered the call to address yet another injustice. All the recruits lived in Alabama and were not, as the FBI claimed, "outsiders."

All of the SIP staffers made countering injustice a life-long mission, and they are prone to downplay their accomplishments, instead praising the people they helped.

"Some of the greatest people who ever lived were the dirt poor blacks and whites who managed to survive and enjoy life in the face of seemingly insurmountable obstacles. And the world will never know these people's names," said Knowles.

Some Interesting Facts About Odonates:

- They are among the oldest insects on the planet at more than 330 million years old.
- Dragonflies are among the most aggressive insects on the planet and will eat other dragonflies, but not their own species. In their larval stage, they will eat small fish.
- Males have two sets of sex organs, and there are complicated mating rituals. Some species mate in mid-air, and damselflies and dragonflies form a heart or wheel shape when they mate.

Dragonfly (from page 1)

Hood has photographed and documented 36 different species of dragonflies in Sewanee, and 25 species of damselflies since she started her quest about four years ago.

"Citizen science is increasingly important in documenting biodiversity," Zigler adds. "Digital photography, GPS and the Internet allow observations from around the globe to be stitched together into precise pictures of species distributions. Anyone with a passion for a particular bit of biodiversity can make a real contribution to understanding that group, and Robley's project certainly exemplifies that."

Walter to christen the organization the Selma Interreligious Project, but most of the recruits who signed on didn't have a faith-based connection. They were students, young attor-

When Hood photographs and documents the existence of an odonate species, that information goes in the county record at Odonata Central, a website that stores information on dragonflies and damselflies. Recently Hood discovered a Unicorn Clubtail in Sewanee, a dragonfly that hadn't been previously recorded in Franklin County, as well as two damselflies, the Sweetflag Spreadwing and the Spotted Spreadwing.

A change in the University's mowing pattern around "in-town lakes," such as Lake Cheston, Lake Bratton, Lake Finney and Lake Gregg, has improved the odonate habitat and led to an increase in dragonflies and damselflies.

"We altered the mowing plan last spring to provide additional vegetation along the lake edge for increased water quality and soil stability, to provide additional habitat, and to reduce mowing labor and materials," says William Shealy, grounds manager for Sewanee's Physical Plant Services. "Robley says this has made a big difference in the number and variety of species she is seeing."

Without the new mowing pattern, Hood says she would never have seen the Arrowhead Spiketail at Lake Cheston, a rare dragonfly in Sewanee.

She notes that a small pond on the way to Lake Dimmick is her "honey hole," and has a wider variety of species than any other body of water on the Domain.

HEARING HEALTH NEWS

by Debbie Gamache, M.S. CCC-A Audiologist

SUMMER HUMIDITY WARNING

Moisture, which can cause hearing aid distortion and loss of power, is more of a problem during the summer because of high humidity and perspiration.

You can minimize moisture problems by consistent use of a drying appliance each night. You simply place your hearing aids in the drawer of the appliance and leave them overnight, where they will be dried out to remove moisture (as well as sanitized and deodorized!). Remember, normal wear and tear can cause hearing aid parts to wear out, corrode or lose power. This may happen so gradually you may not notice the loss of power, increased distortion or decreased battery life.

Care and maintenance of your hearing aids is crucial. We offer repair services and cleaning appliances and tools at Debbie Gamache's The Hearing Center LLC. We are located at 705 NW Atlantic St., Suite B, Tullahoma. You can reach us at 931-393-2051. You can also visit our website at < www. thehearingcenterllc.com>.

Grant Supports Online Privacy Study

The Appalachian Center for Resilience Research (ACRR), directed by Sewanee research professor of psychology Sherry Hamby, has received a grant of more than $299,000 from the Digital Trust Foundation to study privacy and security issues related to cell phone and Internet use in the local area.

The project will investigate both online privacy concerns and security practices in rural Appalachia. Privacy concerns include many types of crimes and intrusions that were rare only a few years ago: identity theft, monitoring usage or collecting personal information online, tracking location, "phishing" schemes to trick people into revealing personal information, harming reputations, and spam and other unwanted solicitations. The project will also study security practices to learn more about how people protect themselves from these privacy intrusions. The project will also investigate whether there are unique aspects to privacy and security issues in rural communities, where access to computers and cell phone networks is less widespread.

Hamby is the principal investigator; she is joined by co-investigators Kimberly Mitchell and Lisa Jones, both from the Crimes against Children Research Center at the University of New Hampshire. Over two years, the project will use focus groups, interviews and a large-scale survey of more than 500 people in the Appalachian community to document experiences of privacy risks, as well as security practices and strategies. Findings will be presented in a variety of ways in order to reach community members, fellow researchers, policymakers and practitioners.

The Appalachian Center for Resilience Research, based in Sewanee, is devoted to better understanding and promoting the ways in which people achieve resilience after experiencing violence and other adversities. ACRR is particularly interested in scientific approaches to understanding and facilitating resilience by rural and lowincome communities in Appalachia and elsewhere.

Flag Rag

Fly the flag of freedom, somebody said or, so I heard, or thought, or, maybe, read. Salutingly we snap our chest, our head. Schooled in attentive reverence, afraid Of no invader, we attack instead. All for democratic freedom, our dead wear blankets of their freedom, their bloodshed.

Freedom is our artifact. We believe We are the world's salvation. As we grieve, Young blood drips from our nation, to achieve A lack of isolation. No reprieve Saves us from desperation, nor naive Antiwar demonstration, cannot give Us our now dead freedom. So we live, With liberty, omitted from the weave.

We all should fly free, as in days of yore Gliding as an Albatross, far from shore. Freely, there is no 'First' Class anymore No marking of who's the boss, by a door Or any other high cost, that's paid for By the blood, or by the loss, of the poor, Now free from poverty because, no more Do we blockade their success as before.

The albatross is in decline Our freedom flag kisses the earth Not out of love, but of a dearth Of the love of soaring our skies. Flying free, demonstrably, breaks Twin towers of wealth and of trade So, with war paint as our charade Freedom is dead for freedom's sake.

At Bonnaroo, I noticed some attendees carrying banners on poles. While these help locate you in a crowd (like the beer mug flag), they are also symbols of identity. Multiple nationalities fly for an Irish artist. Perhaps we feel unity under the spell of her music.

I also pictured them as campaign signs, or a knight's colors jousting on a field of clashing armament. Flags symbolize one's position, which can be as simple as, "Hey, bring beer!" or display nationality and heritage, or symbolize their current phantasm, like a unicorn.

Can we act without these symbolic touchstones demonstrating our presence? Some heroic battle sagas focus on efforts to raise and impose our flag. Dramatizing flag advancement dismissively simplifies the lethal struggle involved in violent disputes. This matters if you want to inspire support. A thoughtful person won't agree to a venture measured only in carnage and acreage. Idealized, abstract "causes" are far easier to promote.

The beer tent where I volunteered had flags specifying the brand name of the beer. We were supposed to distribute "swag" trinkets, thus "branding" wearers as customer tribe members. But the vendor failed  $to\ follow\ through.\ Apparently, as\ an\ oligopolist, building\ brand\ loyalty$ is not essential. You own the playing field and the customers. Perhaps the vendor and the customers know that owning people is wrong and eschew the symbols.

Bonnaroo creates tribal identity. It brands everyone it "owns" with a digital bracelet specifying their role and privileges. Inside, with our personal and tribal identity flags we manage interactions by expectations. The calculus of consent is our willing agreement in exchange for the unique experience. Opportunities to return take a foundation of expectations and build our experiential knowledge of right behaviors. People who return are pre-adapted and effectively guide those whose experience is more naive.

Do festival transients, many in altered states of awareness, in an open field in the June heat relate to our comfortable, secure world? We fly a street number flag and it says, "Hey, bring packages." When we see our national flag, our heritage, do we feel "owned" by a political choice oligarchy? When we ascribe heritage to a flag that has cornerstones of battle, sedition and racism, do we remove our brand, raising our free arms in unity? Do we relegate that symbolic flag to the museum of history? Must every flag be a battle flag? Aren't all battle flags unicorns, nothing but a phantasm of broken dreams? Does the albatross depend upon the entire sea of humanity to live? You must make your "own" decision.

Readings by Faculty School of Letters, Young Writers' Conference

Young Writers' Begins on June 28

The Sewanee Young Writers' Conference opens on June 28 and continues through July 11. It has organized a series of readings by faculty members in the program to which the public is invited.

At 6:30 p.m., Monday, June 29, there will be readings by Amy Arthur (poetry), Robie Jackson (fiction), Justin Quarry (fiction) and Marjorie Gellhorn Sa'adah (nonfiction).

At 4:30 p.m., Tuesday, June 30, readings will be given by Bryn Chancellor (fiction), Eugene Cross (fiction) and Elyzabeth Wilder (playwriting); and at 6:30 p.m., Nickole Brown (poetry), Jessica Jacobs (poetry) and Kerry Madden (fiction).

The Sewanee Young Writers' Conference provides ninth-, tenth- and eleventh-grade students with creative opportunities that are otherwise hard to find, either at high schools or other summer programs. The workshops in playwriting, fiction, poetry and creative nonfiction are led by writers of significant accomplishment and promise.

Former workshop leaders have won the Roerich poetry prize, been recognized by the New Yorker as among the 20 best young American novelists, and featured by "Oprah's Book Club." Students spend most mornings in workshops, and most evenings in discussions or readings by faculty, special guests and fellow participants.

Thiel Reading on July 1

The Sewanee School of Letters is hosting a reading by Diane Thiel at 4:30 p.m., Wednesday, July 1, in Gailor Auditorium. A reception will

Thiel is the author of eight books of poetry, nonfiction and creative writing pedagogy, including "Echolocations" (winner of the Nicholas Roerich Prize), "Resistance Fantasies," "The White Horse: A Colombian Journey," "Crossroads: Creative Writing Exercises in Four Genres" and "Winding Roads: Exercises in Writing Creative Nonfiction." Her translation of Alexis Stamatis's novel "American Fugue" received a National Endowment for the Arts International Literature Award. Thiel's work has appeared in such journals as Poetry, the Hudson Review and the Sewanee Review, been reprinted in more than 50 major anthologies, and has been translated widely. A recipient of numerous awards including the Robert Frost and Robinson Jeffers Awards, and a Fulbright Scholar, she is professor of English at the University of New Mexico and has served as writer-in-residence for the Sewanee Environmental Institute. She is teaching a nonfiction workshop and a course on writing pedagogy at the School of Letters this summer.

Oscar-nominated screenwriter Lucy Alibar, an alumna of the Sewanee Young Writers' Conference, will give a talk at 4:30 p.m., Wednesday, July 8, in Gailor Auditorium.

Alibar is best known as the co-screenwriter of the film "Beasts of the Southern Wild," which was nominated for an Academy Award. The screenplay, based on Alibar's original stage play "Juicy and Delicious," won BAFTA and Scripter awards, while the film itself won the Sundance Grand Jury Prize and the Cannes Film Festival Camera D'Or.

Alibar's essays and stories have been published in Zoetrope, the Oxford American and the Wall Street Journal. Her first novel, "Throw Me On the Burnpile and Light Me Up," (which is also based on a stage play and headed for the movies ) is scheduled for publication by Scribner's. Alibar is from the Florida Panhandle and now lives in New York City. She attended the Sewanee Young Writers' Conference in the summer of 1999.

Sewanee School of Letters offers a master's program in English and in creative writing to students who have only summers to devote to study. The faculty consists both of Sewanee professors, from English and allied departments, and distinguished faculty from other campuses. Courses are rigorous, but the

The Rev. Dr. Henry Lee Hobart Myers

The Rev. Dr. Henry Lee Hobart Myers, friend and hero to many, born in Sewanee on November 14, 1927, graduate of the Sewanee Military Academy and the University of South, and former member of the faculty at the School of Theology, died peacefully and surrounded by love on May 13, 2015, at his home in Canton, Georgia. Hank was 87 years old.

The sixth of eight children of the Rev. George B. Myers and his wife, Margaret, Hank grew up in Bairnwick, which is Gaelic for "House of Children" and now serves as the Women's Center of the University of the South. He attended his mother's Bairnwick School, and claimed to have played a cow—in Latin—during a school play. We do not doubt that his mother asked him to moo in Latin or that he succeeded.

During World War II, Hank served in the military police at Fort Monmouth, New Jersey. As an MP, he once helped a fellow MP go AWOL just long enough to attend Christmas Eve mass at the local Roman Catholic church.

Hank graduated from General Theological Seminary in New York and earned his doctorate in divinity from Vanderbilt University. He was ordained into the priesthood at All Saints' Chapel, Sewanee. During his

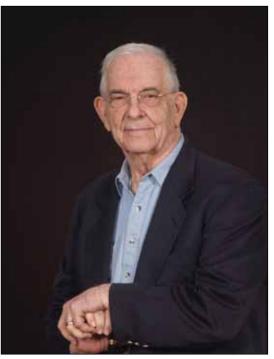

He returned to Sewanee in 1963 where he taught homiletics and pastoral care at the School of Theology until 1976. Hank also served many parishes during his priesthood, including St. Francis in Norris, Tennessee; St. Paul's in Chattanooga; Christ Church in Alto; St. Stephen's in Edina, Minnesota; Christ Church + Washington Parish in Washington, D.C.; St. Bartholomew's in Florence, Alabama; St. Augustine's Chapel at Vanderbilt University; and Trinity in Russellville, Kentucky. He also volunteered as chaplain at the Comprehensive Care Center in Nashville in the early years of HIV/AIDS where his ministry embraced patients and family members, and (especially) the caregivers at the Center. His counseling changed lives wherever he ministered.

Hank had an excellent sense of when to break the rules; he called it "rebelling well." He once held off a KKK cross burning with an unloaded .45 and his clerical collar. (His bishop had told him not to guard the house; this was not the last bishop Hank would find a way around.) Preaching at the baptisms of his grandchildren, he assured each baby that their parents would fail them. (Forgiveness, Father God, and Mother Church would become their "family

Hank was preceded in death by his first wife, Mary Faye Rogers, and is survived by their children Ann Marie Romero (husband, David) and George Myers (wife, Amy). He also is survived by his wife of 37 years, Carole, and her children Jennifer Needham (husband, Don) and John Trumbull. He was the proud grandpa/granddaddy of Kirk Myers, Kate Myers Seitz, Michael, Jason, and Chris Romero, and Meg and Grace Needham. He was devoted to being there for his children and grandchildren through his presence and hundreds of letters, sharing his guidance and serving as their "guarantor." Hank also is survived by his sister Lady Rosamond Thornton, brother Lucas Myers, and many nieces and nephews.

A memorial service for Hank will be held at Otey Parish on Thursday, July 2 at 10 a.m. Interment at the University Cemetery will follow the service. All are welcome.

Tennessee Fiddlers Perform on Saturday

The Tennessee Fiddle Ensemble (TFE) will perform at 6 p.m., Saturday, June 27, in the Princess Theater in South Pittsburg. The group played at St. Andrew's-Sewanee School in

The Tennessee Fiddle Ensemble brings together the talents of Jim Wood, John Boulware, Inge Wood and Ben Ayers in a chamber group that explores the rich fiddle tune and folk song traditions of North America. They focus on bringing to audiences a myriad of authentic grass-roots musical styles with the nuance and attention to detail associated with a fine chamber ensemble. With impeccable credentials (among them, they have a collective eighteen state fiddle, mandolin and band championship titles), Jim, John, Inge, and Ben present essentially the "state of the art" in North American fiddling and folk songs, both new and old. All the musicians play multiple instruments.

A five-time state fiddle champion, Jim Wood has had years of formal training and studied jazz theory at Berklee College of Music but describes himself as "really just a country fiddler at heart." The Nashville native has played at the Grand Ole Opry.

Inge Wood, born and raised in San Jose, Costa Rica, says she studied never thought she would play music anywhere but her living room. But her move to Nashville in 1997 "would change the course of [her] life forever."

Boulware took up the fiddle at age 12 and has learned styles ranging from Celtic to bluegrass to old-time. He holds a National Beginner Division Country Musician Guitar Championship, two consecutive age-division titles at the Tennessee State Fiddle Championship and in 2006 was named the state fiddle champion.

Ayers is a 2011 graduate of St. Andrew's-Sewanee School and has played multiple dates in the area. He is a graduate of the Middle Tennessee Štate University's music business program, where he studied jazz guitar and song-writing. He brings not only his arranging and compositional talents but his considerable multiinstrumental skills (mandolin, guitar, bouzouki, tenor banjo and bass) to

Bazzania Publishes Songbook

The Bazzania Girls Band has published a songbook to accompany the folk song CD they produced a year or so ago. "Honey, Baby, Mine," which is sold with a CD included, has the lyrics and chords to all of the songs on the CD. Narrated by a Bazzania "wannabe" named Lizzy, the book also includes information about each of the songs.

Thanks to area jam sessions that welcome children, more and more of them are picking up guitars and learning to play. This CD/songbook will help these children improve their musical skills and expand their repertoires. It's also just fun to sing along with the CD. "Honey, Baby, Mine" may be purchased at the South Cumberland State Park and through the Friends of South Cumberland webpage, <www. friendsofscsra.org>. Plans are to expand to include local shops and stores in the near future.

Tillinghast Reading, Signing Bairnwick Book on July 3

The University Book and Supply Store is hosting a reading and book signing by Richard Tillinghast, 3–5 p.m., Friday, July 3, at the bookstore.

Tillinghast's book "Bairnwick: A Sewanee House and Its People" is part classical piano in her teen years but of the Sewanee History Series. It tells the colorful and often humorous story of Dr. George B. Myers of the School of Theology and his wife, Margaret Hobart Myers, who built and lived in Bairnwick, now the Women's Center, with their eight children. At the time, their home served as a kind of unofficial community center, with weekly teas for seminarians and their families, as well as students in the Bairnwick School.

> Tillinghast is a 1962 graduate of the College. He is an acclaimed poet and author; his books include "Finding Ireland" and "An Armchair Traveller's History of Istanbul," as well as poems like "Sewanee in Ruins" and "Sewanee When We Were Young." He has published in the New Yorker, the Sewanee Review, the Atlantic, the Paris Review, the New York Times and elsewhere. Tillinghast lives in Hawaii and spends his summers in Sewanee.

A Column for Young Adult Readers and Adults Who Appreciate The Genre by Margaret Stephens

Parallel Lives

Ironically, as some in our country speak of the ever-deeper, or perhaps never-healed, divide between black and white, rich and poor, I've been re-reading "Tale of Two Cities."

Most of us are so familiar with Dickens' opening that we can quote it: "It was the best of times, it was the worst of times, it was the age of wisdom, it was the age of foolishness...." We know that those cities were London and Paris on the verge of the French Revolution, just before the people's rage over centuries of oppression by the apparently indifferent aristocrats was about to explode into the violent revenge which would be remembered as the Reign of Terror.

I'd bet that most of us are just as glad we don't live in that era.

I'm struck by a scene from another work about the French Revolution, "The Scarlet Pimpernel." First play, then novel, and today perhaps best known in its various screen adaptations, author Emma Orczy puts us in the cell where jailed aristocrats await their fate. One man admits that perhaps if they'd paid a little more attention to the people before, they wouldn't be condemned to the guillotine now.

What do two old books have to do with our lives today?

I think—and forgive me, what I do is read and write, so I'm biased here—that there's wisdom to be gleaned from these novels, and I'm not talking about details of a specific period in history.

They tell me what it feels like to rage against societal oppression. Books are one way we can understand what's going on in the hearts and minds of the "other." My own contact with the larger world is already limited in my isolated mountain cove and in our small community. If I only rely on the noise of news and the Internet, I am limited in a different way. I may know what's happening, but knowing how something feels? That requires the nuances of slower media.

Award winning African-American author Jacqueline Woodson, who grew up in South Carolina and lives in New York, helps me understand more about our own divided society, more about the racism that our president points out from which we are not yet cured. Her books are easily available from duPont Library.

In her picture book "The Other Side," a young girl on the wrong side of the fence from her white friend finds a way to connect in their segregated neighborhood. Her memoir-in-verse, "Brown Girl Dreaming," which won the National Book Award for Young People's Literature, gives an intimate picture of growing up in the South of the 60s and 70s. "Beneath a Meth Moon: An Elegy," a book for older readers, tells the story of a teen who turns to methamphetamines to ease the memories of Hurricane Katrina. "After Tupac and D Foster" give us the gritty reality of teen life in New York City, which includes the shooting of a young black male.

Perhaps my favorite, the picture book "Each Kindness," tells of little Chloe who, with the rest of her friends, refuses to have anything to do with new classmate Maya, whose clothes clearly are somebody else's castoffs. Their teacher shows them how a single act of kindness can ripple out like a pebble dropped in water. But too late, and Chloe "watched... the chance of a kindness with Maya become more and more forever gone."

Bridging divides—healing them—takes action. But first it helps to learn as much as we can about what's on the other side.

Queen Anne's Lace

Queen Anne's lace is in its glory on our roadsides and in our fields and gardens, reports Yolande Gottfried. It seems that the first flowering heads of each season are the largest, though the plant usually produces several heads. And these flower heads are amazing. They are compound umbels (from the flowering stalks, radiating from a central point like the ribs of an umbrella) composed of 75 smaller umbels with a grand total of 2, 500 florets per head! Look at the flowers closely to marvel at their intricacy and delicacy, with differences among the tiny petals.

Queen Anne's Lace is listed in the category "alert" by the Tennessee Exotic Pest Plant Council, as it can be an exotic pest plant in similar or nearby habitats. Yet it was a prized garden plant in England and was brought to our shores on purpose by the first European settlers. Even the early Greeks and Romans used it as a medicinal plant. It was also eaten as a vegetable, though only as a pot herb when young. If you have pulled it up as a weed, you have noticed the carrot-y smell.

So how did this tough, stringy wild carrot become the vegetable we eat today? Research and plant breeding programs at the time of World War I and its attendant food emergencies led to the carrot we know today, making it a relatively recent food item in our general diet.

The common name comes from a legend that as Queen Anne, the wife of James I of England, sat in the summer with her ladies in a garden which included this plant, she challenged them to make a lace as beautiful as the flower. Of course, no one could (or would) outshine the Queen at lace-making, and the plant inherited the name we now use.

The red flower in the center is thought to represent a blood droplet where Queen Anne pricked herself with a needle when she was making the lace. The function of the tiny red flower, colored by anthocyanin, is to attract insects. —from Wikipedia
