Bean Resigns Franklin County Commission Seat

by Bailey Basham Messenger Staff Writer

Stanley Bean, who was appointed Director of Schools in June, resigned from his position as county commissioner in the July meeting.

Bean had been on the commission for 11 years.

"I want to say how happy and proud and honored I am to be director of schools. I hope I can do as well as others who have gone before me in past years. One thing I would like to see at some point is for the school committee and the long-range planning committee to work together. On Aug. 4, we have 5,300 students coming in," Bean said. "The number one thing is we have to make sure our students are safe."

David Eldridge, seat A in the seventh district, asked Bean if he was able to say anything about the consolidation of the middle schools. Bean said the issue had not been brought up in any school board meetings he had attended.

"They were going to kind of wait to get my feet wet and get through budget proceedings," said Bean. "I'll honor their requests going forward, but I do want to talk with all the school board members about what I think we should do. They will have the final say so, but we're all going to have to do it together."

At the meeting, Sewanee resident John Wendling spoke to the commission about a building material called insulated concrete forms, which he used to build his own house because of the material's high efficiency in regulating energy. According to Wendling, who has both a bachelors and a master's degree in physics and learned of the material via a Department of Energy-sponsored seminar, said the material could help save municipal buildings thousands of dollars

Logix, one of the leading ICF companies in North America, describes the material as "a system of formwork for reinforced concrete usually made

The commission also moved to recommend that the certified tax rate from the state be denied and that the tax rate for the county remain at 2.67 percent. The decision to stay with the current tax rate came after much discussion in the July finance meeting of how lowering the tax rate to the proposed 2.36 percent would affect the county.

Recommendations by Mayor Richard Stewart for the following positions were approved:

Appointment to Consolidated Communications, Gerald Smith, 3-year term:

BRAVO!

To the Editor:

As ongoing patrons of the Sewanee Summer Music Festival, we must extend our heartfelt thanks to all the talented and dedicated people that brought us this year's music, which concluded Sunday afternoon. They, together, brought the best offerings in a long time, in our opinion. A few thanks: The University, including the Dean Terry Papillon, Chris Carlson (Conference Services) and Physical Plant Services, SSMF Director Evelyn Loehrlein, the Artistic Committee, Music Faculty and conductors, volunteers, Program Benefactors, Business and Community Sponsors and advertisers. Key to this success, in our opinion, are the students (and their parents) who dedicated time, talent, money and travel to execute a challenging and thoughtful array of musical offerings for four weeks. Looking forward to next year.

FRIENDS AT THE THEATER To the Editor:

Every summer for a week or so, it has been a long standing tradition for me and my daughter, Mary Ming, to visit our friends, Laura and Ron Gordon, in San Diego. You may recall that Laura and Ron resided in Sewanee for 16 years at "Chanting Steep" on Kirby-Smith Rd. Their wonderful old house, built in 1929 (year of the great stock market crash), is now the home of Knowles and Bill Harper.

most recent visit, we went to see the world premiere of Rachel Bond's play "At The Home Place" at the La Jolla Playhouse in San Diego. Playwright Rachel Bonds grew up in Sewanee, graduated from Brown University, and is the daughter of Peggy and the late Bill Bonds. Rachel's older sister Carol Bonds grew up with the Gordon's daughter Kristen (all three girls attended St. Andrew's-Sewanee).

A renowned playwright now living in Manhattan, Rachel's plays have been performed at such prestigious venues as the famous McCarter Theater at Princeton. Her current San Diego premiere, "At the Old Place," is reviewed here by Ron Gordon:

"After sitting in awe for 80 minutes watching this little masterpiece, I now have a pretty good idea why Rachel is held in such high regard as a playwright. It is as if Tennessee Williams and O'Henry got together to write a short but forceful work packed full of deep undertones and far reaching insights. This would give some inkling of what 'At the Old Place' is about. The play takes place in the front yard of a tiny house that could be anywhere in the South. In short succession you are introduced to a cast of four seemingly ordinary characters (some rather annoying at first) whose lives come into sharp focus by the end of the 80 minutes, and whom, remarkably enough, you've grown to understand, pity a bit, and most importantly really care In keeping with the long standing about. How the playwright manages literary tradition of Sewanee, on our to accomplish this in such a short time period, while simultaneously keeping her audience deeply engaged, laughing and hurting, eludes me. I think this playwright has real talent. This was a beautiful little piece and the Sewanee community should pop a few buttons puffing up their collective chests when realizing they must have had at least a small influence on this skilled scribe. Wouldn't it be nice to see 'At the Old Place' performed right here water to the sinks to wash up, but this year's donation, a new rain water collection tank and delivery system, will soon correct that deficit. FOCAGIFO also provided funds this year to develop the miserable gutted meandering track called a "road" to the campus, and while they were there, work began to straighten, widen, stabilize, and compact a standard dirt road. Paving it will necessitate future funds.

In addition to this obvious physical progress, the students seem more confident in general and especially about speaking English. The Sewanee visitors had several opportunities to engage with them about such topics as relative value of vocational-technical education versus college; about leadership, and in student-lead worship. The elected student leaders show calm dedication in welcoming destitute new students to campus and making sure the staff is informed of their needs. Presently there are 107 students, 14- to 20-years old, HIV orphans or other vulnerable youth. Half of these board at the school; there are 15 girls in one tidy room with two-or-three-level bunk beds, tidy because they have no belongings except a change of clothes. After two years of study they graduate with tools for their chosen trade, such as a pedal sewing machine or a mechanics tool box.

 $While \, Marilyn \, and \, Sally \, assisted \, in \, painting \, two \, classrooms, \, Tom \, laid \, brick \,$ for an outdoor stage with offices above. They distributed 150 new T-shirts garnered from surplus supplies of the Sewanee Writers' Conference, the Sewanee Young Writers' Conference, and the Sewanee Summer Music Festival.

In retrospect, the peak moment was the dedication of the new rain water tank, which has a colorful ceramic sign embedded in concrete saying "This water project was dearly funded by Sewanee Friends and Commissioned by Ms. Sally Hubbard, Volunteer Executive Director of FOCAGIFO-USA on 8 June 2017. Together Achieving Much More." That people in Sewanee provide clean water to students in Africa is a modern-day miracle, as joyful for the donors as for the recipients.

The rector and vestry of Otey Church have agreed to assist the Friends with annual fundraising events. To get involved or to donate, please contact Sally at <sally@hubbard.net>. To donate online, make all your Amazon purchases at <smile. amazon.co/ch/32-0455862.> The next fundraiser will be a Jambalaya dinner 5–8 p.m., Saturday, Nov. 18,

CHIROPRACTIC OUTLOOK

By Dr. Kurt Shull CHIROPRACTIC OVERVIEW

The term "chiropractic" combines the Greek words che (hand) and praxis (practice) to describe a treatment done by hand. Hands-on therapy-especially adjustment of the spine is central to chiropractic care. Chiropractic is based on the notion that the relationship between the body's structure (primarily that of the spine) and its unction (as coordinated by the nervous system) affects health.

Spinal adjustment/manipulation is a core treatment in chiropractic care, but it is no synonymous with chiropractic. Chiropractors commonly use other treatments in addition to spinal manipulation, and other health care providers (e.g., physical therapists or some osteopathic physicians) may use spinal manipulation.

If You Are Thinking About Seeking Chiropractic Care:

• Ask about the chiropractor's education and licensure.

• Mention any medical conditions you have, and ask whether the chiropractor has specialized training or experience in the condition for which you are seeking care.

• Ask about typical out-of-pocket costs and insurance coverage. (Chiropractic is covered by many health maintenance organizations and private health plans Medic and state workers' compensation systems.)

Tell the chiropractor about any medications (prescription or over-the-counter) and dietary supplements you take. If the chiropractor suggests a dietary supplement, ask about potential interactions with your medications or other supplements.

Tell all of your health care providers about any complementary health approaches you use. Give them a full picture of what you do to manage your health. This will help ensure coordinated and safe care.

We are now accepting new patients. Call our office for a free consultation Dr. Kurt Shull Avoice of silk and chiffon ... a spirit of brass and iron ... a woman who was 95 years old and ready to tell all! Actress and story teller Dolores Hydock shares the funny, irreverent, true story of Ninette Griffith, who was Fashion Coordinator for Loveman's Department Store in Birmingham, Ala., during the 1950s and 1960s—a time when the downtown department store was a temple of style and fashion. Sassy, ambitious and unflinchingly honest, Ninette was an elegantly independent woman whose life unfolds in these stories of reckless romance, celebrity hijinks, fashion disasters, and the adventures of a life that followed no one else's pattern. Hydock's one-woman shows and stories bring to life the Gardens, "and we're eager to make this voices and spirits of a wide range of characters from history, literature, and everyday life. Her work has been featured at conferences, concerts and special events throughout the United States, including the National Storytelling Festival in Jonesborough, Tennessee, and her 10 CDs of original stories have all received awards from Storytelling World Magazine for excellence in storytelling. Dolores has taught acting and storytelling at Birmingham-Southern College versity of the South's farm manager, and has been the Teller-in-Residence at the International Storytelling Center will lead the project and educate volin Jonesborough. She performs at the Assembly's Warren Chapel at 10:45 a.m., Tuesday, July 25 and Wednesday, July 26.

She will speak about her journey from stage to vocal studio, where she teaches some of the many talented singers who perform worldwide. Since 1985, Rice has been teaching at Westminster Choir College in Princeton, New Jersey where she is Professor of Voice. Along with her teaching at Westminster, Rice has a private studio of professional singers and has been a vocal consultant to the Metropolitan Opera's Lindemann Program allow and is currently the voice teacher for the Domingo-Cafritz Program with the Washington Opera.

The Cuban Missile Crisis seems unexpectedly relevant today, as tensions mount with Russia. Thursday evening, July 27, former naval officer Gary Slaughter offers his perspective on the standoff between the United States and the Soviet Union in the 1960s. During the height of the Cuban Missile Crisis, the author—then a 23-year old Navy ensign—dissuaded the commander of a after-school clubs, but Pritchett is pas-Soviet submarine from firing his nuclear torpedo at the Ensign's destroyer. In doing so, the Ensign prevented a nuclear exchange between the Soviet Union and the United States, which would have likely destroyed the world. This incident was immediately classified Top Secret, and it remained so until the collapse of the Soviet Union some 40 years later. Slaughter's talk, "Behind the Book: Pritchett bring visions of school gar-Sea Stories – A Memoir of a Naval Officer (1956-1967)," will reveal the details of this dangerous and historic encounter.

Community members are invited to Tracy City Elementary (TCE) 8 a.m.-noon, Saturday, July 29, to help raise a high tunnel for the school's new educational garden.

"We're excited to be starting another school garden in Grundy County," said Erin Lee, an Americorps VISTA serving as network coordinator for the plateau's Cumberland Teaching event an educational opportunity for the community.'

Lee is seeking around 20 adult olunteers to help construct the high tunnel. Carolyn Hoagland, the Uniunteers so that they can obtain skills and knowledge to construct their own high tunnel.

"High tunnels come in all sizes," said Hoagland. "They can be a great season-extending addition to a backyard garden.'

The high tunnel will allow teachers and students to use the garden for more of the school year than the cool and wet weather would otherwise

Alexis Pritchett, second-grade teacher at TCE and manager of the new garden, approached the Cumberland Teaching Gardens network this winter about the project. Most school gardens in the area are currently run as sionate about having it used in classes to supplement curriculum starting

A Column for Young Adult Readers and Adults Who Appreciate The Genre by Margaret Stephens

Not Your Cookie-Cutter Life

Time to talk about fitting in. Or not.

Not fitting in, that is, not, not talking about it.

It's almost the norm in literature, not fitting in, or feeling like you don't. It's a tradition that goes back at least to Joseph (oddball of Jacob's 12 sons) and Milton's Satan, thrives throughout the great 19th century novels (Elizabeth Bennett, like Disney's Belle, is definitely the bright spark in her small town) and continues strong today with figures like Harry Potter and Artemis Fowl.

Not fitting in makes for a more interesting character, I suppose, but the frequency of literary misfits may also be a function of the way writers themselves think. After all, they tend to be spectators rather than participants, observers rather than groupies.

Which exactly describes Will in Nick Hornby's "About a Boy," a novel you may know primarily through the resulting film, the first in which Hugh Grant began to parody his usual gorgeous-guy role. He's a tad old to be relying on nothing but charm, yet in his 36 years on the planet, Will has never involved himself in anything. To fill days which most people occupy with family and work, he prefers to drift, observe, and pass time with TV and shopping.

Will is, in short, a kind of overgrown boy.

Which is why he turns out to be the best person to educate 12-yearold Marcus in how to fit into a teenage world.

The title says it all: the book centers around one boy, Marcus, whose eclectic mother has raised him to be the ultimate misfit. But it's also about boy-man Will, who's never achieved responsible adulthood. And, about the unlikely people who begin to form a cluster, a larger family, if you will, around—"about"— both.

Hornby is funny, irreverent, perceptive, and a real find, and I've got a stack of his novels here to prove it. Though I'm missing his memoir, "Fever Pitch," which I heard about because of the Americanized version of the resulting film about one man's obsession with the Boston Red Sox, which my own Sox-obsessed son introduced me to. (In the original, Hornby was writing about his lifelong obsession with the Arsenal Football Club.)

Obsession is the driving force behind another misfit's life in Wesley King's award-winning young adult, "OCDaniel." Thirteen-year-old Daniel's life is dictated by undiagnosed OCD (obsessive compulsive disorder) which has him, among other things, avoiding the use of certain numbers (to the detriment of his math assignments), flicking light switches (not so popular at parties), and, every single night of his life, going through "The Routine," which keeps him from sleep until he's (among other things) taken an exact number of steps from bed to bath, brushed his teeth with 192 vertical movements per side, and flicked the lights 305 times. It's exhausting even to read about, especially since a single mistake will force Daniel to start the entire Routine again.

King writes with precision about the internal agony of Daniel's attempts to control and conceal all this, a struggle the author himself lived. What seems most painful is that Daniel is so alone in his illness. I want to strangle both his parents, and wonder just how his mother remained oblivious to that sometimes five-hour-long nightly routine, especially the light-flicking.

Yet this isn't an illness-of-the-month book, and it certainly isn't a depressing one. Like Marcus, Daniel discovers friendship and encouragement in a most unlikely place, and we get an unexpected twist of plot that sends Daniel on the trail of a potential murderer.

King says he wrote the book so that anyone suffering with OCD would know they weren't alone. This is one of the best reasons for writing about people who feel like they don't quite fit in—to remind us all that we really do, somewhere, somehow.

This is where I'd love to throw in a poll. Do you consider yourself someone who fits in? Just curious. Because I bet there are a lot of us walking around feeling like we don't quite.

The SUT is closed until the end of August. The fall semester schedule will be announced soon. Here is a movie review on "Star Trek Beyond" from the July 29, 2016 issue of the Messenger.

TWOGIRLS ONEMOVIE

by Sarah Beavers and Emily Blount

Star Trek Beyond (2016, PG-13, 2 hrs. 2 min.)

Dir. Justin Lin

Starring: Chris Pine, Zachary Quinto, Karl Urban, John Cho, Zoe Saldana, Simon Pegg, Anton Yelchin, Idris Elba and Sofia Boutella

Sarah: This kicked some major and serious butt. "Star Trek: Beyond" has become my favorite in the recent "Star Trek" reboots. "Star Trek" (2009) was full of annoying post-editing (lens flares, anyone?) and "Star Trek Into Darkness" (2013) butchered what could have been a beautiful retelling of the Enterprise crew versus arguably one of its more formidable opponents, Khan Noonien Singh (unfortunately played by ultra-white-guy Benedict Cumberbatch). Since being let down by "Star Trek Into Darkness" led by J.J. Abrams, I had mixed expectations going into the theater for "Star Trek Beyond." However, I was blown out of my chair and launched directly into deep space to chill with the crew of the U.S.S. Enterprise. Be prepared to pack Depends because you will not want to leave the theater and miss a moment.

Emily: I guess I should start by saying that I'm extremely biased when it comes to all things "Star Trek." I could watch a 2-hour movie of the Enterprise crew doing nothing more but interact with one another and I would be a happy camper. That being said, this film was a great comeback for the reboot franchise after the disappointment that was the 2013 "Star Trek Into Darkness." (Petition to pretend this film doesn't exist, anyone?) "Star Trek Beyond" delivered well developed rapport between the crew, reminiscent of the original TV series, making it a fitting 50th anniversary tribute of "going boldly where no one has gone before."

Sarah: This movie was tight, beautiful, wonderfully written and acted (thank you Simon Pegg and Doug Jung). The introduction of the new character, Jaylah, who is a resourceful scavenger stranded since a child on a deserted planet at the edge of the known universe (Rey in "Star Wars: The Force Awakens" anyone?) was very organic and not forced. I am so pleased sci-fi movies such as "Star Wars: The Force Awakens" and "Star Trek Beyond" are introducing these lovable orphan ladies into their stories to inject some much needed life and freshness into the old and male-dominated franchises.

Emily: The editing was well done and the makeup and special effects were on par as usual. I agree with Sarah regarding Jaylah. I'm always over the moon when new female characters are introduced into franchises. However, I hate to point out that even in this newest reboot edition the cast of characters is still largely male. Saldana's Uhura received some fantastic scenes, but honestly I'm waiting for her to get her own movie. One thing "Star Trek" has consistently excelled at since its inception in 1966 is diversity. The reboot holds true to this, but I'm of the opinion that there can always be more.

Sarah: "Star Trek Beyond" took a long hard look at where it came from, took that to heart, and made something beautiful out of its roots. I truly and honestly believe any "Star Trek" fan will look at this movie with the same wonder and love that made them fall in love with "Star Trek" in the first place. Even though the cast is largely male, they are making huge steps (by Hollywood standards) to be more inclusive. Lt. Cdr. Sulu is canonically gay with an adorable daughter.

Emily: Lt. Cdr. Sulu should also get his own movie.

Sarah: True to that. Also, the ladies (there could always be more) aren't shrinking violets in the corner but are active, present and kicking butt, almost like they are real people, too. I grew up watching "Star Wars" and "Star Trek: The Next Generation," and unfortunately the Padmé Amidalas, Beverly Crushers and Guinans were few and far between in the sci-fi genre. I grew up wanting to be a Jedi like Luke Skywalker or a Starfleet Captain like Jean-Luc Picard (sign me up for bootcamp on Dagobah with some Earl Grey, hot). I am happy to the point of crying that today's young girls and boys can grow up wanting to become a new Jedi like Rey, rebel fighters like Poe Dameron and Finn or Starfleet officers such as Lt. Uhura and Lt. Cdr. Sulu.

Emily: Sci-fi has always been a dynamic genre and like Sarah, I grew up on "Star Wars" and "Star Trek." I'm overjoyed these two franchises that defined my childhood are still being produced today (with even more diversity and female representation). No, this movie was not perfect, but the new injection of a tone more similar to that of the original series brought a level of nostalgia, which when mixed with the reboot's own unique flair, makes me want to watch this film again and again.

Sarah: I will gladly pay full price to see this movie again in theaters, and buy it full price (maybe even with Blu-Ray) when it releases on DVD.

Emily: I have already planned my second theater visit. Sarah: My life is not that together in order to plan that far ahead.

Chorale Prepares for 52nd Season

The Sewanee Chorale announces the first rehearsal of their 52nd season on Monday, Aug. 21, at 6:30 p.m. in Room 220 of Guerry Hall. Singers age 13 and older are invited to join the weekly 90-minute rehearsals in preparation for a November concert, Songs of Joy and Thanksgiving. The concert will include works of Benjamin Britten, Vaughan Williams, Robert Shaw, Rutter, and Broadway tunes.

The United States, as the rest of the world, is seeing an increase in the number of community choirs. Roughly one-tenth of Americans sing in a choral ensemble, a number that has grown steadily over the last 20 years. Ruth Cobb, director of the Sewanee Chorale, suggests that a combination of factors have contributed to this phenomena. The economic advantage is that an instrument doesn't need to be purchased, everyone is ready for choir if they want to put in some time and effort. As schools eliminate music education, families find that the community choirs offer the education and the experience of giving your best effort for the group, not personal glory. There are measurable benefits to both mental and physical health in getting out to sing and socialize with others. Scientific studies show that in breathing together, the choristers' heartbeats also synchronize; its no surprise that singing together crosses all sorts of demographic boundaries. Finally, the pure joy of singing. The increase of oxygen gets the endorphins going, you see the smile on the face of the person sitting across from you, and there's little that compares to the delight of creating a choral sound.

Requirements are few. First and foremost, says Cobb, "The desire to gather each week and work together; this is the most valuable part of the community choir—the commitment of the members to each other." The Chorale asks for a donation from each member to help defray the cost of music and the cost of hiring an accompanist for the performance. The Chorale also receives valuable support from the Sewanee Community Chest.

Interested persons should contact Cobb at <TheSewaneeChorale@gmail.com> with questions or to request that a folder be prepared and waiting for them at the first rehearsal.

The Jet at the Sewanee Airport

When we moved here in the summer of 1964, there was a fighter-like jet on display at the Sewanee airport. It was the Convair XF-92A.

As I heard it as a child, the University of the South Air Force ROTC had won a contest of some sort and had been awarded an aircraft to put on display. They could choose between the venerable Lockheed T-33 or this other jet. The cadets chose the other jet.

The airplane was on display just off of Airport Road to the east of the office, about where the windsock is now. Mounted up on blocks, with it's 1950's style crosshatch tires flat and at least one locally installed bullet hole in the tail, it had a railed ladder that allowed one to peer through the crazed glass into the cockpit. It was too far to the wing and the top of the fuselage was too rounded to crawl onto the plane and explore more, even to my young-and-immortal 7-year-old self.

My father, William K. Kershner, and the airport manager, Lt. Col. Les McLaurin (USAF, retired) contacted the Air Force museum about the airplane. Since this was actually a one-of-a-kind prototype that had been misplaced during the heyday of jet development, they wanted it back. It was retrieved in 1969 and restored. It is on display at the U.S Air Force Museum, Wright-Patterson AFB in Dayton, Ohio.

This plane was the precursor to other delta wing designs such as the F-102 ("Duece"), the F-106 and probably the B-58 Hustler bomber.

Trail Friends' Initiative Launches at South Cumberland State Park

The Friends of South Cumberland State Park, in conjunction with the park manager and rangers, are embarking on an exciting new volunteer program called "Trail Friends" at three popular trailheads in the park.

The Friends are looking for people who want to become knowledgeable about the most popular trails in the park. "Trail Friends" will be stationed at these trailheads during periods of high visitor traffic to welcome hikers, provide information and answer questions about that particular trail.

The trailhead areas Trail Friends will staff include Stone Door in the Beersheba area; Grundy Forest in Tracy City (Fiery Gizzard north); and Foster Falls, between Tracy City and Jasper (Fiery Gizzard south). Volunteers are needed to be available for shifts on Friday, from 2-5 p.m., Saturday, from 8-10 a.m. and 10 a.m.-noon, and Sunday from 11 a.m.-1 p.m. and 1-3 p.m. during the peak park visitation months of September, October, April and May.

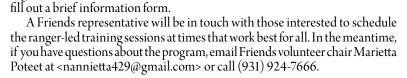

Trail Friends volunteers will be expected to have a working knowledge of the trail to which they're assigned, including park rules, trail features and current conditions, and where to obtain trail maps, etc.

In order to serve as a Trail Friend, each volunteer is expected to complete three training sessions with a park ranger, and master additional online cur-

Haskell Honorary Chair for Goldenrod Gala

David Haskell, professor of biology at the University of the South and noted author, has been named Honorary Chair of the Friends of South Cumberland's Goldenrod Gala fundraiser event, set for Saturday, Oct. 21.

"I am delighted to serve as the honorary chair for this outstanding event in support of the work of the Friends of South Cumberland, on behalf of Tennessee's largest and most biologically significant state park," Haskell said. "Even as the park is growing, daunting challenges face those who care for it, interpret its amazing natural assets, and help provide visitors with an enlightening and safe park experience. The Goldenrod Gala is a wonderful opportunity for those who care about South Cumberland State Park to show their support and give back to an area that has enriched so many of our lives."

The Goldenrod Gala, the first of its kind for the Friends organization, will be a festive evening event in Sewanee, under a ballroom tent overlooking Lost Cove and the newly-dedicated 4,000-acre Sherwood Forest area of the Park. #### Indian Pipes

I found several of these Indian Pipes growing under a grove of pine trees near the corner of Georgia and Kennerly Avenues. I saw them often growing up in Connecticut, but I've never seen them in my 24 years in Tennessee. Kelly Smallwood says she's seen them only rarely, and she spends her life in the woods!

So Indian Pipe (monotropa uniflora), also called Ghost Plant, is a plant, not a fungus. It has no chlorophyll, and it is parasitic, getting its nutrients from the fungi of the root system of certain trees, primarily beech, but also pine. It quickly turns black when picked, hence another name, Corpse Plant. Another name is Fit Plant, which is attributed to easing epileptic seizures. There are many medicinal uses attributed to Indian Pipe, but I wouldn't experiment.
