

The SWC 1990 to the Present: Survivors' Reminiscence

by Leslie Lytle
Messenger Staff Writer

Among many other notable presences, the 28th Sewanee Writers' Conference (SWC) welcomed poet Charles Martin and fiction writer Tim O'Brien, both who served on the faculty at the first SWC in 1990.

"Aside from Wyatt [founding director Wyatt Prunty], Charles and I are the only survivors of that first conference," O'Brien said. Since then, O'Brien's served on the faculty every other year, and similarly, Martin counted this year's event as his 14th SWC. Martin has also served frequently on the faculty at the School of Letters.

"Since 2008, Sewanee has become a steady summer thing for me. I've had a presence at the conference or the School of Letters or both," Martin said.

"Dry boxes of cereal were the only food late at night," Martin laughed, recalling the first SWC when he stayed at Rebel's Rest, a Sewanee landmark that burned in 2014. But all joking aside, Martin's humor quickly takes a backseat to his awestruck admiration of Sewanee.

Martin knew SWC founding director Prunty from John Hopkins University where they both served on the writing seminars faculty. Martin had never visited the South before coming to the 1990 conference, and he spent a day in Nashville before travelling on to Sewanee.

"Driving up to the plateau was like going into another kingdom. Sewanee is unlike any other place in the world. It's the kind of University the hobbits would have built, twinkling cabins in the woods, the deafening chorus of cicadas," said Martin.

Tillinghast Book Signing at the Blue Chair

On Wednesday, Aug. 2 from 4 to 5:30 p.m., the Blue Chair is hosting a book signing and brief reading from Richard Tillinghast's "Journeys into the Mind of the World: A Book of Places," published by the University of Tennessee Press. After the reading and signing, attendees are encouraged to stick around to chat with Richard during happy hour.

Richard Tillinghast is the author of 12 books of poetry and five of nonfiction, including "Finding Ireland: A Poet's Explorations of Irish Literature and Culture," 2008, and "An Armchair Traveller's History of Istanbul," 2012. "Finding Ireland" was named Book of the Year for travel essays by Foreword Magazine. "An Armchair Traveller's History of Istanbul," published in London, was named one of the 10 best travel books of the year by Publisher's Weekly and nominated for the Onatjee Prize given by the Royal Society of Literature. In 2010 Tillinghast was awarded a John Simon Guggenheim Foundation Fellowship in poetry in addition to a National Endowment for the Arts Fellowship in translation for "Dirty August" (Kirli Agustos), his versions of poems by the Turkish poet, Edip Cansever, written in collaboration with his daughter, the poet Julia Clare Tillinghast. He has taught at the University of California at Berkeley, Harvard, Sewanee, the college program at San Quentin Prison, and the University of Michigan, and currently teaches part-time in the Converse College Low-Residency M.F.A. Program. Richard lived in Ireland from 2005-2011, and currently spends his summers in Sewanee with his partner, the painter Suzy Papanikolas, and winters on the Hamakua Coast on Hawaii's Big Island.

Richard is a native of Memphis and a 1962 cum laude graduate of the University of the South with longtime ties to Sewanee. After graduation, he went on to earn his M.A. and PhD degrees from Harvard, where he studied poetry with Robert Lowell. In 2008, he was awarded an honorary DLitt degree by the University of the South. His long poem, "Sewanee in Ruins," was first printed here as a letter-press chapbook in 1981.

Healthcare Reform Panel

by Bailey Basham
Messenger Staff Writer

A group of concerned Franklin County residents met on Monday night for a panel on healthcare reform sponsored by Sewanee Organize and Act.

The panel was organized to provide a space for citizens to air their concerns and to learn from industry professionals about how, if passed, the proposed repeal of the Affordable Care Act (ACA) would affect medical practices and their patients. In May of this year, the House of Representatives passed the proposed repeal. The vote went to the Senate earlier this week.

The panel was organized and moderated by Sandra Rice, a certified nurse practitioner on oncology and family practice. Rice has worked with the Tennessee Justice Center on different things, and she said it was a Justice Center panel from June that planted the seed in her mind to organize a panel in Franklin County.

"It was just fantastic, and I learned so much. I thought we needed to do a panel like that one in rural Tennessee. We would be really affected by any of the changes with healthcare and the ACA, so I said, 'Let's do this,'" said Rice. "The purpose of the panel was to be a public hearing, to educate and allow citizens to provide input to the proposed legislation.

On the panel were Garrett Adams, founder and director of the Beersheba Springs clinic; Amy Evans from Sewanee Pediatrics & Adolescent Medicine; Nancy Silvertooth, a certified specialist in Medicaid and ACA sign-up and Bill Zechman, an insurance agent who worked with the ACA when Humana was in the market in Tennessee.

For Sid Brown, president of Sewanee Organize and Act, supporting the ACA is personal.

"It's about Medicaid. It's about people who are physically and mentally challenged being supported. It's about me wanting to support a government that will help people who are

'Tigers Don't Leave Tracks!' Community Project

"Tigers Don't Leave Tracks!" is a community-wide project bringing together the Sewanee Parent Organization, Sewanee Elementary School and local businesses. The project encourages customers to use reusable bags when they shop, rather than taking plastic or paper bags, and teaches the children in our community to be conscious about reducing waste.

Participating businesses are showing their support in many ways. The University Bookstore donated 175 reusable bags to the school to help launch the project. Mooney's Market and Emporium, Village Wine and Spirits and the Sewanee Market are generously making 10 cent donations to Sewanee Elementary School for each shopping trip that uses reusable bags or doesn't take a bag. The Lemon Fair is also making 10 cent donations for each disposable bag not used, and 20 cents when customers use a reusable bag purchased from the store. When you make a purchase at the Piggly Wiggly and bring your own bags, you can write a nomination on the back of your receipt for a class at the school (for instance "Mrs. King's class," or "Grade Three," or "Principal's Choice") and enter that class into a draw. The Piggly Wiggly will cater a "Litterless Lunch" for the winning class in October, in coordination with a yearlong project aimed at teaching students ways to reduce the packaging waste produced during meals.

Other businesses are participating too. If you see our signs, ask them how. For more information about the project, please contact Shelley MacLaren at (269) 267 8396.

Look for "Tigers Don't Leave Tracks!" signs in our local businesses, bring your own bags and thank you for supporting "Tigers Don't Leave Tracks!" and Sewanee Elementary School.

SUD Customer Questions 'Surcharge'

by Leslie Lytle
Messenger Staff Writer

At the July 25 meeting of the Board of Commissioners of the Sewanee Utility District of Franklin and Marion Counties, a SUD customer questioned a new line item on his recent bill listed as "surcharge." SUD manager Ben Beavers explained the item previously listed as "water resource repair fee" was changed to "surcharge" by the billing software due to lack of space on the bill when the fee for customer leak insurance was added.

"I think we need to change the 'surcharge' language," said Board President Charlie Smith. Beavers will investigate the options.

The board discussed rolling the water resource repair fee, which is based on usage, into the regular water usage fee and eliminating the separate line item altogether. The Tennessee Department of Environment and Conservation formerly required SUD to identify, via billing, the amount collected for water resource repair, but the requirement has been lifted.

Updating the board on the Serv-Line Insurance program, Beavers said no customers had opted out of the basic leak protection, which costs customers $1.30 per month. Provided a leak is covered by the SUD adjustment policy, the leak protection pays the amount of the customer's bill over the

LETTER OF RESIGNATION

To the Sewanee Community, particularly residents of the First Council District:

Today, I write to tender my resignation from the Sewanee Community Council. With her promotion to the position of University Provost, my wife, Nancy Berner, will be joining the Council as a representative of the University of the South. My continued presence on the Council would therefore constitute a conflict of interest.

I was first elected to the Council in 2008, and in the time since I have been honored to represent my district and to serve the Sewanee community. I wish the Council nothing but success as its members continue to work to make our town a safe, prosperous and inclusive place to live.

I'm grateful to them for their service.

David Coe, 1st District ■

Academy Explores Changes in Generations

Roughly every 20 years, major shifts in values, culture and behavior are observed. Social scientists have created labels for these – silent, baby boomer, X, millennial and Z.

On Thursday, Aug. 10, John Hille will present an entertaining and informative program at St. Mary's Sewanee. This Academy for Lifelong Learning session will be "Relating to Millennials and Other Generations: Are We From the Same Planet." The program is one hour long and begins promptly at noon.

Every generation has a set of experiences and innovations that shaped it. Those before it and those after often find the other generations perplexing and sometimes charming. Come learn ways to relate to and communicate with your children, grandchildren, parents and grandparents. Find out if the generational characteristics of yours fit you well, a little or not at all.

The Academy for Lifelong Learning is a year-round program offering stimulating talks every month on a wide range of topics. The Membership fee to join the Academy is $12 annually, or one may pay $2 per session. A box lunch can be ordered by calling Debbie at (931) 598-5342 or by emailing <reservations@stmaryssewanee.org>. Attendees are also invited to bring a sack lunch and may arrive as early as 11:30 a.m. to enjoy lunch before the speaker starts.

challenged," she said. "Myself, I had a brother who was severely developmentally and physically disabled, and he had to get some kind of support his whole life, as did my father. I want others to be supported too."

Rice has been involved with medical practice since she worked as a candy striper when she was 15-years old.

"I've spent my whole life in healthcare. I was a nurses' aide through college and became a nurse practitioner, so this has always been my passion. I had studied briefly in England with the national health service there," said Rice. "I became a co-chair of the healthcare committee of Sewanee Organize and Act, so this has been my area."

Evans said Grundy County is one of the poorest counties in the country and, because of Medicaid, the children and families that come to her practice are able to receive healthcare. She said the proposal to repeal the ACA is dangerous to the health of American children.

"When a baby is born, you can almost predict based on where they live what their outcome will be. Children who have Medicaid are more likely to grow up healthy and to finish school. Children don't live in a vacuum—they live in a community. If the community is unhealthy, the children will be too," said Evans.

Rice said she was unsurprised that most of those in attendance were of similar political opinions.

"It would be nice to have a dialogue, but I think there's such a wide gap of different opinions that has been very, very difficult to bridge," she said.

Her sentiments were shared.

"In order to move forward, I think we need to be less partisan. It needs to be a humanity-based endeavor. The divide is so distinct that it often comes to people not listening," said Dale McDaniel, Sewanee resident.

The panel was recorded to be sent to elected officials, according to Rice. There were no elected officials present at the panel.

O'Brien agrees. He and his family live in Austin, Texas, a hubbub of freeways, congestion and crowds. "Sewanee was love at first sight, the air, the University, the mountain top feel—it's a perfect setting for conversation. Sewanee is probably my favorite place on earth."

O'Brien knew Prunty from the Bread Loaf Writers' Conference. When Prunty asked him to serve on the faculty at the first SWC, O'Brien said, "Yeah, sure. Wyatt's my friend, a generous kind person who loves people. I didn't even ask how much I was going to get paid." The wage turned out to be far more than O'Brien expected thanks to the generosity of the Walter E. Dakin Memorial Fund, a bequest from the estate of the late Tennessee Williams that has made the SWC one of the top ranking writers' meccas in the nation.

O'Brien recalls Prunty giving a reading at an early conference when the mischievous staff filled his water glass at the podium with vodka. "Wyatt took a huge slug. He couldn't spit it out and swallowed, scanning the room for the culprit." Others might have gotten angry, O'Brien said, praising Prunty for his generosity of spirit in all things.

For the faculty, the conference schedule is demanding. "The conference is a very intense experience, and I never left campus much until I began teaching at the School of Letters when my wife and I had time to drive around the area," Martin said.

O'Brien concurs. "You have nine student manuscripts to evaluate. That's a lot of pages, and you need to read them attentively like an editor and pay attention to every line—I'm anal that way."

Five years ago, Martin who has taught since his graduate school days in the 60s, decided to retire from teaching to devote himself to writing full time. He turned in the manuscript for his sixth poetry collection, "Future Perfect," Scheduled for release in 2018, two weeks before this conference. Also the author of three translations, fine arts books, and a historical perspective on the work of the Roman poet Catullus, Martin plans to turn his attention next to craft lecture essays.

"I like to switch it up," Martin said. "I'm really happy with the decision to write full time."

For O'Brien, as well, writing is his full time profession. "I live in my office in my underwear, and I write. At Sewanee, I'm around people, and I enjoy it."

O'Brien, who has published nine book-length works of fiction is also working on a series of craft essays. Of the things he's written, his favorite is a new piece on the experience of fatherhood, "Papa" Ernest Hemingway, and his two young sons. "My favorite is always what I'm working on now. You love the new infant, feel protective."

Both men have kept in touch with some of their students. "This year, a student I had eight years ago returned, and she's just published a novel," O'Brien said.

"There are more activities than there were in 1990," Martin noted. "I'm teaching a translation workshop, for example. But most of the changes are external like the new Sewanee Inn."

O'Brien confessed, "I was afraid of Charles for the first 10 years. Charles is so quiet and a poet. I didn't want to interrupt his reverie. Then one evening, we ended up in side by side rocking chairs at the French House." Martin gave him a copy of a manuscript he was working on, a reminiscence on Nabokov. "It was incredibly moving and well written," O'Brien said. "We talked about Nabokov for hours and became fast friends."

O'Brien, too, sees little change since 1990, remarking instead on the "abiding feeling of decency, civility, and kindness." Asked to sum up the SWC experience in five words, O'Brien said, "The world should be Sewanee."

In 2009, he followed this up with another long poem, "Sewanee When We Were Young," which was published together with "Sewanee in Ruins" in "Sewanee Poems," issued by the University of the South and printed as a fine-press, hand-set, boxed edition by the Evergreen Press, Gloucestershire, England, with 16 lithographs by Joseph Winkelman, C'64. A more affordable second edition, published by the University of the South, with digital reproductions of the original lithographs by Joseph Winkelman, came out in 2014 and is used as a text by the University's Finding Your Place program for entering first-year students. "Journeys into the Mind of the World" contains several chapters of local interest including "Sewanee and the Civil War," "Nathan Bedford Forrest: Born to Fight," "Peter Taylor and Tennessee's Three Kingdoms," and "Greek Revival and Double Dogtrot," on Southern architecture.

Philip Brady, author of several books of poetry including "Forged Correspondences," writes of "Journeys into the Mind of the World": "While Richard Tillinghast's peripatetic essays amble from Paris to India to the Pacific Northwest to Ireland and England and Tennessee and finally to Hawaii, these beautiful picaresque forays into the mind of the world manage to stand still and stand for themselves—as evidence, as it were, that we belong to one place—a seat of imagination made real by the storytellers, architects, painters, musicians, and mystics Tillinghast encounters. Tillinghast brings to his sojourns a brilliant eye, a friendly soul, and eclectic knowledge of a variety of disparate areas—Civil War history, Venetian architecture, Eastern cultures, Irish music and the ways of out-of-the-way people. This is a book about being everywhere at once, in a strange simultaneity, a time and place beyond any map or guidebook."

MSSA Enrichment Programs Conclude Aug. 6

The Monteagle Sunday School Assembly closes its 135th consecutive summer season of enrichment with the final week of events, through Sunday, Aug. 6. Programming this week features a number of visiting lecturers and performers presenting morning and evening programs in Warren Chapel that are open free of charge to the public; unless otherwise noted, morning lectures begin at 10:45 a.m. and evening lectures at 8:15 p.m. Anyone interested in a full schedule of the Monteagle Assembly's 2017 program is welcome to pick one up at the Assembly Office, call (931) 924-2286 or to peruse the schedule on the Assembly's website at <www.mssa1882.org>.

The Nashville Shakespeare Festival returns for a third year of collaboration with the Assembly this week. Artistic Director Denise Hicks and her colleague and stage veteran Brian Russell will put together a production of "A Midsummer Nap's Dream," a 45-minute version of Shakespeare's most beloved romantic comedy, over two days. The performance happens on Wednesday, Aug. 2, from 4:30-5:30 p.m. at Moses' Rock on the Assembly grounds. Those who wish to take part in the workshop, including a role in the play (no previous experience needed), can do so for the cost of a two-day gate ticket ($32); workshop times are Tuesday from 10 a.m.–noon, 2:30–5 p.m., and 6–8 p.m., and Wednesday from 10 a.m.–noon, and 1–3 p.m.

Two lectures this week will focus on issues near and dear to us on the Mountain. Dr. Lane Mathis Price will talk on Tuesday morning, Aug. 1, about "Arcadia at Sewanee: A Senior Living Community in Sewanee – Its Current Status." Price serves on the board of directors, established in January 2016, of the Arcadia project, which is in its final planning stage. Arcadia at Sewanee is a project to develop a retirement community on the University of the South's Domain (the campus of Sewanee). This will provide a vibrant environment for retirees who wish to maintain their independence while continuing to participate in the multiple cultural, educational, and religious activities unique to a University. There will be independent living, assisted living, and memory-care, all incorporated in a peaceful, beautiful setting. Price is a Board-certified Radiation Oncologist and also Board-certified in Hospice and Palliative Care. She is a frequent speaker on death and dying... and living a full life as we age. Then Friday morning, Aug. 4, David Horwarth of Katharos Farm will lecture about his farm's effort to create "The Purest Meat." Horwarth's family and Tommy Parker's family started Katharos Farm in 2015 with the goal of delivering the purest meat—namely, with no chemicals and only following creation's design. Additionally, Horwarth is working on a project that will sit on a 1,000 acres and will have a working community garden/farm, future farm to table restaurant, and a very unique integration of the outdoors inside of a master planned community.

From Nashville's Cheekwood Estate & Gardens comes Leslie Jones, who talks Wednesday morning, Aug. 2, about "Restoring Cheekwood." Her lecture will provide an overview of the process behind the recent restoration of Cheekwood, an historic Nashville estate that now operates as a museum and garden. The home, built between 1929 and 1932, was created for Mabel and Leslie Cheek, Sr., designed to reflect the 18th-century Scottish Georgian architectural style and outfitted with fine furnishings and decorative objects sympathetic to the historic time period. For two years, Leslie has been researching and developing the plan for the structural alterations, installation and interpretation of this American Country Place Era estate; everything from door knobs to tapestries. She will share an insider's perspective on the process behind such a project, as well as examine the importance of historic preservation in the 21st century.

Additional free events this week at the Monteagle Assembly include the following:

Tuesday, Aug. 1, 8:15 p.m., Pulliam Center: Documentary, "Becoming Bulletproof."

Thursday, Aug. 3, 10:45 a.m., Warren Chapel: Lecture by Oscar Fitzgerald, "American Chairs: 1650 to the Present."

MCCSN Hosts 24th Annual Walk-A-Thon

Cancer has impacted the lives of countless families in Bedford, Coffee, Franklin, Grundy, Marion, Lincoln, Moore and Warren counties during the past 24 years. During that time the Multi-County Cancer Support Network (MCCSN) and its team of volunteers have stepped up to help those families. Financial, educational and emotional support are the core products MCCSN provides to those afflicted in the eight county Middle Tennessee area.

Financial assistance to the families comes from local donors and fundraisers, so it makes sense that it is distributed to only local families in need. MCCSN's primary annual fundraiser is the Walk-A-Thon, which will be held at the football stadium at 839 Dinah Shore Blvd., beside the Franklin County Annex building in Winchester, 6–11 p.m., Friday, Sept. 8.

There's still time to form teams for the Walk-a-Thon. Teams must consist of a minimum of six walkers contributing $50 each. Team money can be raised by having bake sales, car washes, yard sales, or other creative means. Luminary candles in memory of or in honor of cancer victims can also still be purchased as well as quilt raffle tickets.

This year at the Walk-A-Thon there will be a tent or canopy decorating contest, so plan your team and decorations now.

To form teams, purchase luminary candles, or for any other information regarding MCCSN or the Walk-A-Thon, please visit <www.MCCSN.org> or call (931) 393-4443.

average monthly bill. Twenty-five customers signed up for additional water line repair protection and four signed up for sewer line repair protection, Beavers said.

The board approved the amended Cooley's Rift contract setting out the terms under which SUD will provide water to the development. As amended, the number of lots served dropped from 41 to 39, since one of the lots was already sold and another already had water service from Monteagle. The contract stipulates the developer pay SUD a monthly dry tap fee for the lots served until half the lots are sold. The contract also defines easement conditions.

"There's no easement with the county since it's all private roads," Beavers said. The contract stipulates SUD's lines must be at least three feet from other utility lines and that the easement is recorded on the registered plat and deed. The easement circumstances were somewhat atypical, Beavers pointed out and suggested the board might want to reassess easement protocol if the situation occurs again.

Reviewing the recent audit performed by Allen, McGee and Associates, Beavers said SUD fared well.

By law public utilities cannot show a loss more than two years in a row, and SUD has had a positive net cash position for the past three years.

SUD likewise received favorable marks on its inventory practices. Last year's audit cited SUD for not having a sufficiently "robust inventory system." SUD has since implemented a computerized inventory system which tracks each item in stock as well as usage frequency.

SUD's monetary loss for unaccounted for water, 5.9 percent, was well below the state allowed amount. Beavers' July manager's report showed a decrease in unaccounted for water loss. He plans to aggressively pursue hydrant maintenance to reduce water loss further, citing hydrant leaks as a likely cause.

The audit faulted SUD for not retaining an accounting and administrative staff large enough "to provide optimum segregation of duties" to ensure oversight of operations. SUD has three office employees, Beavers said, and would need five to seven to meet the requirement making it financially impractical. This has been the circumstance for the last 10 years, according to Beavers.

The audit also cited SUD for late debt service payment. The mailed in payment was "tendered on time," Beavers said, but not received by the due date. To avoid future late payments, the board authorized making the payment by electronic check transfer. There is no fee for the service.

The board meets next on Aug. 22.

The Sewanee Village Plan: A Graphic Glimpse at the Near Future

by Leslie Lytle
Messenger Staff Writer

The Sewanee Village Plan story begins in 2011 when the University Master Plan identified downtown Sewanee and the immediately surrounding vicinity as a zone for future development, an area soon officially dubbed “The Village.” Drawing on input from public workshops and goals set by the University, the Town Planning & Urban Design Collaborative crafted a Sewanee Village Plan. (See the timeline for more details.)

The six years of planning will soon bear fruit, according to Frank Gladu, Special Assistant to the Vice-Chancellor, tasked with overseeing implementation of the Sewanee Village vision. Gladu identified five projects he expects to see completed in the next five years, some far sooner—a grocery-type market, residential housing, a village green, redesign of the Highway 41A intersection to make the Village more walkable, and relocating the University bookstore to downtown.

The housing upgrade calls for an array of housing types, both single and multi-family dwellings, including apartments, duplexes, row houses, cottages, and traditional single family homes. Providing housing types not currently available in Sewanee and the variety of price ranges will increase both the affordability and availability of housing, Gladu stressed.

The Tennessee Department of Transportation is in the process of engineering the intersection, and Gladu anticipates having a final design by the end of 2017. A design concept for the new bookstore is expected as soon as September. “The University is working diligently to identify a location for the bookstore,” said Gladu.

But as the old adage goes, “A picture is worth a thousand words.” Take a stroll through the accompanying artist renditions, photographs, and illustrations for a glimpse into the near-future of the Sewanee Village vision.

Housing Types

The Village Plan proposes a variety of housing types, single-family detached dwellings (houses and cottages), single-family attached dwellings (four-plexes, duplexes and row houses), and multi-family housing (apartment buildings and apartments in mixed-use buildings).

Architectural Styles

The TPUDC Pattern Book identifies four architectural styles—Folk, Folk Victorian, Craftsman and Colonial Revival. Typical of the Sewanee area, these styles are characterized by use of simple materials such as wood siding and metal or shingle roofing. With special approval from the Lease Committee, other architectural styles in keeping with Sewanee's character are possible. The examples shown here and in the Pattern Book are homes in the local area, many of them in Sewanee or Winchester.

Food Market

Proposed for the lot across the street from the current convenience market, on the same side of Hwy. 41A, the Food Market will offer fresh produce, meats, dairy products, and other ingredient-type items—foods to prepare meals with, rather than just ready-to-eat foods. A second and possibly third story of the same building will feature apartments.

Village Green

Plans call for a village green located on the present convenience market lot. Envisioned as a complement to Angel

Park, the green is expected to accommodate festivals, crafts fairs and farmers markets.

LOOKSATBOOKS

by Pat Wiser for Friends of duPont Library

My Summer Book Report or What I Did this Summer

I recently had great fun as a guest reader for two sessions of Sewanee Elementary School's Read to be Ready camp: 15 rising first through third graders were avid listeners and discussants. To blend story with science, that week's theme, I chose "Stellaluna" by Janell Cannon. A tiny fruit bat is rescued by a mother bird after an owl separates her (temporarily) from her mother. She learns to eat grasshoppers instead of mangoes; the birds learn to appreciate her amazing night vision. Cannon appends interesting information, and the Internet provides fascinating photos, all food for animated discussion. Another time I shared "Each Kindness" by Jacqueline Woodson. The children's wish to rewrite the realistically sad ending was heartwarming. They substituted kindness for coldness to a poorly dressed new student who moves away just as her peers begin to recognize their meanness. This beautifully illustrated book needs a little adult guidance.

The fortunate literature lovers received their own copies of 30 books, including Brenden Wenzel's "They All Saw the Cat," wherein a dog, child, fish, mouse and others see the same feline as vastly different creatures. Wenzel's illustrations reinforce how perspective shapes what we see. First grade teacher Barbara King wrote the Read to be Ready state grant proposal and directed the four-week program. SES teachers Michelle Whaley, Katie Felts and Donna Barnes, with a cadre of volunteers and guests, guided young readers through four weeks of rich activity centering on quality literature. Decherd Elementary School also won a grant. Let's hope to see more reading camps next summer.

Books with kids were part of my California family's summer, too. Our 13-year-old rated Harper Lee's "To Kill a Mockingbird" as her favorite book ever, loving the characters, hating the racism. The classic, which makes history's facts painfully real to today's kids, remains the country's most frequently assigned book for eighth and ninth graders. Her required summer book took her from 1930's Alabama to 1980's Chicago via "The House on Mango Street" by Sandra Cisneros. Poetic vignettes portray an adolescence that our rising freshman found simultaneously engaging and disquieting. We relaxed with the Bruce Cameron's "A Dog's Purpose" series. Each time a dog's life ends through age or tragedy, he reappears as a different breed, always following his purpose, taking care of his humans. Keeping in mind that they are based on a dog's demise and reappearance, the tales can make good family reading.

My favorite summer book for grownups is "Clementine: The Life of Mrs. Winston Churchill" by Sonia Purnell. History has largely defined the beautiful Clemmie as an extension of her husband, and Purnell's extensive research reveals a strong, intelligent woman who challenged and reprimanded the formidable Winston. She became his strongest influence.

The first Prime Minister's wife to take an active role in public life, Clementine was often unpopular with generals and cabinet members. She grasped the hardships faced by others and connected with them. Beloved for such deeds as seeing that shelters from Hitler's bombs got heaters and clean latrines, the intrepid Clementine dragooned officials into joining her in witnessing the challenges faced by ordinary citizens. Forever calling her a pinko, particularly about women's rights, Winston doted and depended on her. They formed a team who saw each other through 57 years of family, hard-core politics and World Wars I and II.

This solid biography is crammed with meticulously documented history and personal anecdote. Many Messenger readers will enjoy it.

For front porch reading, I've discovered the Bruno mysteries by Martin Walker, a journalist of international affairs with extensive knowledge of French history and culture. Walker's website introduction of his protagonist: "Bruno is a French country policeman and former soldier who was wounded while serving with UN peacekeepers during the siege of Sarajevo. He hunts, cooks, tries never to arrest anyone and hates to carry his gun (but sometimes must). He loves his basset hound, his horse and a complicated array of firmly independent women." First in the series is "Bruno, Chief of Police: A Novel of the French Countryside." Some think that extensive descriptions of meals and wine slow the story's pace, but a brutal murder provided plenty of excitement for this reader. The plot incorporates the Périgord region's resistance to Hitler and the complicated involvement of North African troops. I expect to follow the cast of characters through more novels.

Most books are available in duPont Library. School starts soon! Let's enjoy leisurely reading while we can.

Two Shows Open at Artisan Depot Aug. 4

The evening of Friday, Aug. 4 will be extra sweet. The Artisan Depot will be celebrating two new shows. Member and gallery gardener Alida Morgan is having a solo show through Aug. 27, and the latest community show, "American Retro," is also opening. The reception is from 5–7 p.m. at the Artisan Depot.

Alida Morgan is a thoughtful, soulful artist with a wide range of skills. She gives many, many hours to the Guild by keeping the Artisan Depot's garden area beautiful. Weather permitting, we hope to be able to enjoy that space during the reception. She has asked a local band to play for us, and there will be nice refreshments.

The new community show, also opening that night, is an exciting one. It focuses on the things we love from the past—old trucks, real service stations, and other treasures, some of which remain in our community. Come meet the artists and talk to them about their inspirations and techniques.

The Artisan Depot is operated by the Franklin County Arts Guild and is located at 204 Cumberland St. East, Cowan. Gallery hours are noon to 5 p.m. on Thursday, Friday and Sunday, and 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday. For more information about upcoming community art shows, the gallery or the guild visit us at <www.franklincoarts.org> or <www.facebook.com/artisandepot> or contact Diana Lamb at (931) 308-4130.

‘Scenes of the City’ at In-Town Gallery

Come to In-Town Gallery for the August feature show, “Scenes of The City” by Jim Tucker. Both acrylic paintings and ink drawings give a view of the thought processes of the artist as he interprets life in the city. Other paintings, sculptures, glass pieces, carved wood, pottery, jewelry and wearable arts are among the displays shown continuously throughout the gallery. Mark your calendars to attend the opening, meet the artists and enjoy wine and light refreshments 5–8 p.m., Friday, Aug. 4, at 26A Frazier Avenue, Chattanooga.

A man of many contrasts, Jim likes people and his observations of their interactions are revealed in his paintings. He also treasures the solitude of the home and acreage he and his wife share on the Cumberland Plateau near South Pittsburg. Born in Connecticut and raised in South Carolina he is a graduate of University of Georgia, having studied studio art and majored in art history. His grandmother, an artist, encouraged him and when he got discouraged with his lack of progress in watercolor told him not to judge what he could do in watercolor until he had painted at least 100 pictures. Living in Atlanta, he continued his studies at Atlanta College of Art and Callenwolde Arts Center. While working at the Atlanta Journal-Constitution, he exhibited at several of the Atlanta galleries.

A fling with abstract painting gave him wide insight into the difficulty of painting with no discernible subject matter. “Where in the past I’d been communicating with symbols I shared with the viewer—trees, water, sky, clouds—I now found myself attempting to make a statement without those things. Each painting seemed like a ‘one-off’ where I’d solved a particular problem but didn’t know where to go next.” As he returned to more representational painting, he kept the lessons learned in abstract compositions, such as the relationships of shape and division of space, which could easily be transferred to recognizable subject matter. He then evolved into painting the human figure, which he now does with semi-abstract shapes and less attention to detail.

Most fine artists make a habit of regularly sketching and, for Jim, this is a driving passion. Prior to beginning a painting he will have explored different compositions in pen and ink. His black and white drawings are so strong that often they are framed and stand alone as a finished work. “I love the dramatic tonal juxtapositions you can get with the pen and the subtle shades of gray available with ink wash.” He finds tonality a central theme of his work, often using cool, bluish tones in lieu of black.

Some series come about because of a personal reaction to current events. One series of “Wanderers” came to mind because of the refugee crises happening around the world. “There are seemingly endless armed conflicts forcing people from their homes. They become rootless, wandering, going from something but not to anything. I find that very troubling and compelling. As I thought about it, I began to consider the process of wandering in much broader terms. I began to wonder if we are all wanderers to a greater or lesser degree,” says Jim. “I love stories and I process life in terms of a story. It’s central to my worldview and how I get a sense of psychic order. In my current work I want to avoid a sense of literalness, but all my painting is about a story.”

This front wall feature runs through the month of August and will then join works of other artists throughout the gallery. In-Town Gallery, located at 26A Frazier Avenue on Chattanooga’s North Shore is open every day, year round, except for major holidays. Hours are 11 a.m.–6 p.m., 1–5 p.m., Sunday and until 8 p.m. on First Fridays. Call (423) 267-9214, visit <www.facebook.com/intowngallery> or <www.intowngallery.com>.

Record-Breaking Swim on the Tennessee River Begins This Week

After breaking the world record for speed swimming the Rhine River from the Swiss Alps to the North Sea in 2014, Dr. Andreas Fath, Professor of Medical and Life Sciences at Furtwangen University in Germany, is preparing for another endurance challenge on the Tennessee River.

Dubbed TenneSwim, Fath's second "swim for science" will see him swim the entire waterway from late July through August. Fath and project director Dr. Martin Knoll of Sewanee will conduct daily analyses along his route to determine how water quality in the Tennessee River compares to the Rhine. This project will be the most extensive interdisciplinary water quality survey conducted on North America's most biologically diverse river.

"Water pollution is not only a result of the industrial use of water but also a result of unconscious consumer behavior," Fath says. "TenneSwim and the outcome will make people aware of their influence. Small changes in their behavior will have a big, positive effect on water quality."

At 652 miles, the Tennessee River is 112 miles shorter than the Rhine, but its significantly slower current will pose an even greater challenge for Fath. If completed as planned, his swim will break another world record.

TenneSwim begins July 27 at Ijams Nature Center in Knoxville and is organized in partnership with the University of the South, the Tennessee Aquarium, The Nature Conservancy, the University of Georgia River Basin Center, Ijams Nature Center, the River Discovery Center of Paducah, Tennessee State Parks and the Tennessee Valley Authority.

The Tennessee River and its many tributaries are home to more than 230 fishes, more than 100 freshwater mussels and more than 70 crayfishes. Its watershed also contains more than 150 turtle and more than 50 salamander species, including the giant Hellbender Salamander. Many communities rely on the Tennessee River for drinking water, including Knoxville, Chattanooga and Huntsville.

Knoll says he and his team will sample for common water quality indicators such as temperature, nitrates and phosphates, as well as for pharmaceuticals, hormones, pesticides, bacteria and heavy metals.

During TenneSwim, Fath will use a technique he pioneered to detect microplastics suspended in the water. These plastic fragments, less than 5 mm in size, are either manufactured at this size or created when larger plastic items break down into smaller pieces. Their small size enables microplastic to enter the food chain at the lowest levels. Microplastic has been found in the digestive tracts of both freshwater and marine animals.

In 2014, Fath and his team found large quantities of microplastics in the Rhine. Fath estimates that, every year, the Rhine carries eight tons of plastic all the way to the North Sea on its surface alone. "Literally, this is only the tip of the iceberg," he says. "Actual microplastics pollution in the Rhine is most likely many times higher."

This leaves many wondering what levels of contaminants and microplastics the team will discover in the Tennessee River.

TenneSwim is presented with financial support from The Lyndhurst Foundation, Riverview Foundation, PerkinElmer, Sweetwater Brewing Company and a host of German sponsors. For information about this endeavor and to track Fath's daily progress, visit <www.tenneswim.org> and our Facebook page at <www.facebook.com/TenneSwim/>.

Felts Named SAA Assistant Commissioner

The Southern Athletic Association (SAA) recently announced the hiring of Clayton Felts to serve as the Assistant Commissioner for the conference beginning in July.

No stranger to the inter-working of the league office, Felts joins the SAA staff after serving charter member Sewanee for the past six years in the position of director of athletic communication. In that role, Felts oversaw all aspects of the Tigers' communication and creative service efforts for Sewanee's sports teams.

"I am thrilled that Clayton has agreed to join the SAA as our new assistant commissioner," said SAA Commissioner Jay Gardiner. "Clayton brings a creative fire, a wealth of talent, and a solid knowledge of the Southern Athletic Association to this position. He is a man of great integrity and honesty, and I look forward to watching the many great things he will accomplish on behalf of our student-athletes in short order."

While at Sewanee, Felts helped the Tigers triple its media coverage. Sewanee gained national recognition in publications such as <ESPN.com>, <Sports Illustrated>, <Golf Weekly>, <Golf Magazine>, <CollegeFootball.org>, <Southern Living Magazine>, the <New York Times>, <Deadspin.com>, and <Garden and Gun>.

Regionally, Sewanee increased its weekly news coverage in all of Tennessee's major newspapers as well as the Associated Press.

Additionally, Sewanee increased its new media viewership by 115 percent while launching a new athletic website, <SewaneeTigers.com>, and the Sewanee Sports Network.

"For the past six years, Clayton has been highly instrumental in the management of all athletic communications for Sewanee's 24 intercollegiate sports," said Sewanee Athletic Director Mark Webb. "His professionalism, experience and skill set are ideally suited to support the institutions of the Southern Athletic Association. His contributions to Sewanee are many, and he has our deepest gratitude as he makes his transition to the SAA."

This past season, Felts served as the athletic communication director at the NCAA Division III Men's and Women's Tennis Championships and the Women's Intercollegiate Tennis Association (ITA) National Indoor Championship.

In his career, Felts has worked with 12 conference player of the year winners, 19 NCAA Tournament teams, five SAA Man and Woman of the Year winners, 13 NCAA individual championship qualifiers and seven NCAA Postgraduate Scholars. He also served as the host athletic communication contact for numerous past SAA tournaments and championships.

Prior to Sewanee, Felts spent two years in the Athletic Media Relations Department at East Tennessee State University in Johnson City, Tenn.

A native of Tennessee, Felts earned a Bachelor's Degree in mass communication from Austin Peay State University in 2008. While at APSU, Felts worked in the Governors' Sports Information Department. He also earned a Master's Degree in Athletic Administration from ETSU in 2010.

Felts is a member of the College Sports Information Directors of America, the United States Basketball Writers Association and Tennessee Sports Writers Association. He also served on various on-campus committees, including the completion of the University of the South's initial leadership class.

Outside of Sewanee, Felts, and his wife Katie, were active members of various community groups throughout Franklin County.

HEARING HEALTH NEWS

by Debbie Gamache,
M.S. CCC-A Audiologist

SOUND ADVICE

Expect a period of adjustment. Remember once you get your new hearing aids you will need a period of several weeks to get used to the daily care and maintenance of the hearing aids. More importantly the largest adjustment you will go through is, of course, listening with your new hearing aids. You will hear sounds you have not heard for a long, long time and some of these will be good sounds such as birds or the voices of your children or grandchildren. Other sounds are the more annoying sounds that we need to hear for our safety or general knowledge of what is happening around us and these include the refrigerator, the sound of our own footsteps or turning the pages of a newspaper. Be patient, it takes time for the brain to relearn all of these sounds.

Hearing aid technology has advanced enormously in the past 5 years. As a result, Audiologists are able to help persons with the "difficult to fit hearing loss". If you have questions about hearing loss and or hearing aids, please feel free to contact us at Debbie Gamache's The Hearing Center LLC. We are located at 705 NW Atlantic St. Suite B, Tullahoma. You can call us at 931-393-2051. You can also visit our website at www.thehearingcenterllc.com.

NATURENOTES

Queen Anne's Lace and Chicory

Two plants that have been making a lovely showing together on our sunny roadsides (where not sprayed or mowed) are Queen Anne's Lace and Chicory. The lacy white compound umbels of the Queen Anne's Lace, in the carrot or parsley family, and the light blue flowers of the Chicory, in the aster or sunflower family, make an attractive contrast. Both have long histories in the North America, though neither is a native, and both have been used for their roots as food. (A note of caution here: don't consider harvesting them from roadsides due to harmful chemical residues from spraying and runoff from roads.)

Queen Anne's Lace was a prized garden plant in England and was brought to our shores on purpose by the first European settlers. Even the early Greeks and Romans used it as a medicinal plant. It was also eaten as a vegetable, though only as a pot herb when young. If you have pulled it up as a weed, you have noticed the carrotty smell. So how did this tough, stringy Wild Carrot become the vegetable we eat today? Research and plant breeding programs at the time of World War I and its attendant food emergencies led to the carrot we now know, making it a relatively recent food item in our general diet.

Most people are familiar with the use of roasted and ground chicory root in coffee or as a coffee substitute, particularly in Louisiana. This use began when the port of New Orleans was blockaded by the Union during the Civil War. The plant is a native of Mediterranean Europe (as well as western Asia and North Africa) and was used there during the Napoleonic Era and earlier. It was even cultivated in Egypt and by medieval monks.

BARDTOVERSE

by Phoebe Bates

Attributed to Alexis de Tocqueville (1805–59) by Dwight D. Eisenhower in his final campaign address in Boston, Massachusetts, November 3, 1952. Unverified.

I sought for the greatness and genius of America in her commodious harbors and her ample rivers—and it was not there ... in her fertile fields and boundless forests—and it was not there ... in her rich mines and her vast world commerce—and it was not there ... in her democratic Congress and her matchless Constitution—and it was not there. Not until I went into the churches of America and heard her pulpits flame with righteousness did I understand the secret of her genius and power. America is great because she is good, and if America ever ceases to be good, America will cease to be great.
