Housing Sewanee Hosts Summer Helpers

Housing Sewanee Inc. (HSI) hosted three youth groups and one adult group this summer to work on its current project, which will be the first sustainable home constructed by HSI in the greater Sewanee community.

St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Mobile, Ala., has been bringing youth groups to Sewanee since 1993 under the guidance of Margaret Cadens, according to Dixon Myers, director of outreach for All Saints' Chapel and the coordinator of HSI. "Their dedication to HSI over the past two decades has been a remarkable testament to the church's commitment to a service site and creating a lasting relationship with its residents," he said.

The adult group from the Episcopal Church of the Advent in Spartanburg, S.C., has been coming to Sewanee for outreach work since 1995. The group's core has consisted of Sewanee alumni from the 1960s, Myers said. "This group is always highly skilled and enthusiastic, they are very capable of doing anything we ask," he said.

The Rev. Josh Varner, C'95, is the rector of St. Patrick's Episcopal Church in Pooler, Ga. Varner, an active participant in service as an undergraduate, brought a diocesan-wide group that worked with HSI and the Community Action Committee of Otey Parish.

Mary Margaret Winn, C'12, of Grace-St. Luke's Episcopal Church in Memphis, Tenn., returned to the Mountain with a group of high school and middle school participants. Mary Margaret was head sacristan and head proctor at Sewanee; Myers said she wants to pursue a ministerial vocation, so her present work and her leadership background give her a sound foundation

The HSI home under construction now utilizes locally milled framing material, reused building products, the highest quality insulation practices, and student and community volunteer involvement. Upon completion in early September, HSI will host an open house for the public, showcasing the organization's commitment to sustainability.

"One of the primary functions of the Community Fund is to support people and organizations who Plateau a healthier, better-educated, and culturally richer place. We're proud to honor these nine groups for the work they are doing and to support them in our fourth round of grants," said Scott Parrish, SCCF board chair. "This, together with our investment of $60,000 in capacity-building initiatives, will mean a total investment in our community of nearly $125,000 by the Community Fund in 2014."

The Rebel's Rest fire is still under investigation.

Insurance investigators will revisit Rebel's Rest next week to continue to seek the cause of the July 23 fire that destroyed the second floor of the 148-year-old house.

Investigators from both the University's insurance company and the contractor's insurance company are inspecting the home because workers were in the midst of renovations. A State Fire Marshal investigator's preliminary findings show the fire was Twenty firefighters with the Sewanee Volunteer Fire Department battled the Rebel's Rest fire utilizing two pumper trucks, one rescue truck and one support truck, according to Fire Chief David Green. The fire department received the call at 11:30 p.m. and arrived five minutes later; firefighters were not able to get the inferno under control until just after 2 a.m. Two firefighters sustained minor cuts and the hospital with high blood pressure,

The flames danced and destroyed, smoking the beloved wisteria draping the front porch and social media lit up with angst and photos of Rebel's Rest burning on the night of July 23.

Jeannie Babb, a local writer and graduate of the School of Theology, wrote a poem while watching firefighters battle the blaze. "Rebels Don't Rest" finishes with these lines: "If I walked down here to cry/For countless unrememories licked into the sky/The smoke has wicked me dry/And instead the word is

The Sewanee Volunteer Fire Department did fight and managed to save the first floor and the wisteria, as more than two dozen onlookers stood in small groups, some talking quietly, others shedding tears.

Rebel's Rest, the family home of Maj. George Fairbanks, a Civil War veteran, Renaissance man and one of the founders of the University of the South, has birthed countless memories since its construction in 1866. In more recent years, Rebel's Rest served as an event venue and guest house for University visitors.

Rene Fairbanks Dudney Lynch, the great-granddaughter of Maj. Fairbanks, moved to Rebel's Rest in 1935 when she was 3 years old. She lived with her grandmother, mom and younger sister, Sara.

"I was just devastated (about the fire)," Rene said via telephone from her home in Los Altos, Calif. "I still think about it a lot."

The house had three gables in front, and Rene's bedroom was upstairs on the left. The family had chickens, and the girls played in a sandbox in the backyard. JUSTICE AND THE FUTURE To the Editor:

Campaign rhetoric features many intangible "code" words that mean different things to different people. One such word, justice—the quality of being fair and reasonable—when infused with empathy—the ability to put ourselves in another's place links us to the divine. Empathy for the poor and different completes a just standard of right and wrong tempered by divine love. Those lacking empathy are fearful of others. This fear of difference easily morphs into prejudice; prejudice morphs into discrimination and exploitation.

In 1960, in an introductory course in religion, the professor asked, "Is it fair that a black person cannot use our publicly funded library?" Ideas at a new level of awareness tumbled into my head. Imagining myself denied entrance to the library, I realized that I would not be sitting where I was sitting. In that moment I internalized justice fused with empathy.

Political racism against our president and against minority voters continues to threaten justice at the polls, and in turn, the democracy of our nation. Google both political party platforms. Only one relates to present realities and honestly, without code words, states who and what it stands for. That party offers the best hope for America and planet Earth.

In the Messenger's coverage of the Fourth of July, we omitted the names of the Boy Scouts who participated in the flag-raising ceremony in Abbo's Alley. They were Matthew Baranco, Julian Bardi, Fields Ford, Myers Gorrell, Harrison Hartman, Jim Kershner, Calem Knight, Mack Lindlau, Wyatt Lindlau, Matthew Mollica, Porter Neubauer, Aden Rung, Sam Smith and Sean Willis.

We are glad you are reading the Messenger.

Lynette Ariail of Sewanee (right) was the winner of the second annual Animal Harbor Bone Drop on Aug. 2, which was also Ariail's 88th birthday. When Gail Castle (left), Animal Harbor's development officer, called to tell her that she had won the $5,000 prize, Ariail said, "You must be pulling my leg!" This event supports construction of a new Animal Harbor facility in Decherd.

The City of Altamont proposes to increase the utilization of the auditorium of the Florence Scruggs Building for theatrical, musical and dance performances. The City intends to develop a calendar of high quality events that will attract paying audiences. A snack bar will generate additional income to sustain the programs, some of which will feature professional/ SCCF will enable the City to install a sound system in the facility. In addition, the Paul S. McConnell Music Grant, awarded to SCCF to support music on the plateau, will provide underwriting for performances by local musicians in the venue. The total amount of the grant is $6,725.

Coalmont Elementary School, in and Conservation. partnership with the Grundy Health Council and the University of the South, has focused in recent years on increasing exercise and physical activity in its after-school program. Now it is time to promote healthy physical activities for the entire school and surrounding community. Recognizwalking spaces in the area, the school proposes to construct a quarter-mile walking track around the adjacent ball field. This grant of $10,000 is directed toward the cost of installing the track; the project has also attracted the support of the Bristol Myers Foundation.

Community Action Committee is a ministry of the Otey Parish of Sewanee. It provides groceries for over three hundred families per week, plus assistance with utilities, medical, employment and housing needs. All clients are below the poverty level. This grant of $2,660, aimed at food security and sustainability, will enable CAC to provide chicken coops and starter flocks for two clients willing to maintain them for the benefit of themselves and their neighbors. In addition, ten container gardens will be provided to Mountain Goat Trail Alliance is a rails-to-trails recreation project seeking to create a multi-use corridor along a 35-mile track from Cowan in Franklin County to Palmer in Grundy County. The first section of the trail, between Sewanee and St. Andrew's-Sewanee School, is complete, and construction of the next section from SAS to Monteagle will begin this year. A previous grant from the fund is enabling MGTA to complete semi-professional artists. A grant from the acquisition of rail bed between Tracy Ĉity and Palmer. This new grant of $10,000 will support the purchase of additional rail bed between Monteagle and Tracy City, plus provide partial compensation for a contract employee to administer a Recreational Trails grant recently awarded by Tennessee Department of Environment

St. James Episcopal Church in Midway, with a grant from the Dandridge Trust, constructed a playground 20 years ago to serve the community. It is the only recreational space available to the children of this community. Today the playground equipment has deteriorated and fallen ing the limited availability of safe behind contemporary safety standards. This grant of $10,000 from the fund will enable the church to refurbish the playground with new swings, rubber mulch, basketball backboards and nets, and soccer goals, plus the addition of picnic tables. The church provides liability insurance and general maintenance of the playground.

Swiss Memorial Elementary School, serving the Gruetli-Laager community, has worked in partnership with the Grundy County Health Council, the school health program, and the school nutrition program to focus on strategies to combat chronic health conditions. With grant support and innovation funding, these partners have been able to build a greenhouse and a community garden to make healthy foods available for students, staff and the community. This SCCF grant of $3,760, made possible by a grant from the Bonnaroo Works Fund, will help pay for an after-school program that will provide training in many aspects of nutrition, such as planting and maintaining a garden, farmers' markets, food preservation and vegetarian cooking.

The South Cumberland Learning and Development Center, operating under the auspices of Tracy City, is a bold undertaking to refurbish the old high school and make it available for lifelong learning programs for youth and adults that improve employment preparation, health and educational outcomes, and increase community connections by fostering collaboration and partnerships. "Grandma and Grandpa Fairbanks were the center of it all," she said. "The huge family that came to spend every summer at Rebel's Rest revolved around them."

Maj. Fairbanks had a little office in a separate building in the side yard where he could escape the chaos, and his wife had her own private sitting room where no children were allowed, Dudney recalled.

looked around, as some of the big-eyed first-graders audibly gasped. "It was in my fireplace." They calmed considerably, some adopting a sheepish grin. I went on to explain the fire triangle, where the three sides, oxygen, fuel and ignition (or heat) are all needed for fire to occur. Conversely, if you want fire to stop, you must remove one of those essential legs. Ronald, a troubled child who was to die roughly a dozen years later in a gang-related shooting, was especially fascinated by the act of placing a jar over a candle and slowly snuffing the flame. After the third round, I sensed the teacher approaching with arms crossed and quickly moved to the topics of fire prevention and safety.

Fire has had a recent prevalence in several engaging news stories, whether it is a tornadic crown fire in a California forest, our own Rebel's Rest or residences and utilities in Gaza City. Arguably each of these burned in our living room and not in any contained or beneficial way. Rather than standing by in horrified gasp, foresters generally stop large fires by removing the fuel. When you consider the limitless supply of air available and swirling convective flame columns reaching hundreds of feet into the sky, removing heat or oxygen is not possible. One engaging feature of these pyrolytic maelstroms is their ability to projectile vomit shrink just right. chunks of burning debris great distances ahead of the fire front, an admirable reproductive technique.

The highly trained Sewanee Volunteer Fire Department (SVFD) attempts to disrupt the air available to a fire by fogging the interior of a burning structure (where possible), or pouring enough water on the blaze to remove the heat. Since the Rebel's Rest fire equivalent to those they now experience. How many was fully engaged and through the roof when SVFD received notice, they had no choice but to pour water on the fire until it cooled down. Gaza City is burning ing to be that foot-tapping teacher as human aggression because explosive chunks of fire are hurled through snuffs out way too many candles?

"The other day, I had a fire in my living room..." I the air creating independent indiscriminate incendiary incidents. Clearly the only way to stop (or cease) their fires is to halt the influx or spawning of explosive

When fire is not confined to its designated place, it represents loss, whether that is memories and artifacts; or trees, deer, and squirrels; or human dwellings and lives. Since we are a combination of emotional and rational forward-thinking beings, even as we mourn our loss, we envision that Phoenix arising from the ashes. What will remain the same? What can never be recovered? How can we preserve that which is dear to us?

If it's a forest, the answers, like the fire itself, are often beyond our control and, as nature takes its course, a new forest slowly appears. For Rebel's Rest, where a significant amount of façade and structure remain, the answer is more a matter of our ingenuity and budget. Thus, it is easy to project a similar structure arising from those ashes. Some loyalists have even suggested that details such as the squeaky floors should be replicated. Before the practical modernists totally scoff at this suggestion, there are archaeologists and skilled artisans who can emulate the materials and methods used a century-and-a-half ago to restore that structural feel. It may take another 150 years for the boards to

Gaza City is more perplexing. By necessity, people are still living amid the maelstrom, powerless to halt the vomited projectiles that rain from the sky. As emotional futurists, they may well project a time of no more firestorms. In their pain and subsequent rage, these projections may include troublesome methods more gang-related shootings must children grow into? How many more candles must be snuffed? Who is go-

Winning Essay Earns Fowler a Trip to Washington D.C.

Young people from electric cooperatives in 43 states — including more than 150 students representing Tennessee co-ops — visited Washington, D.C., in June for the 2014 Washington Youth Tour, spending time with elected officials and taking in the historic, interesting sites of our nation's capital.

Krystal Fowler of Sewanee, a student at Franklin County High School, was one of two FCHS students chosen for the trip. Eleven students from the Duck River Electric Membership Corporation (DREMC) earned spots on the weeklong tour of D.C. by writing winning essays on the topic "Electric Cooperatives: Serving Our Members Past, Present and Future.

"Youth Tour offers students a great opportunity to develop leadership skills, see our government in action and meet other young people from across the country while touring Washington, D.C., and learning American history," said Jo Ann Emerson, CEO of the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association

The Washington Youth Tour is a joint effort of DREMC, the Tennessee Electric Cooperative Association and NRECA. Each school year, DREMC sponsors a short-story contest for high-school juniors. Winners are awarded spots on the expense-paid trip to our nation's capital the following June as part of the Washington Youth Tour. This year's tour included meeting with elected officials, visits to Washington's popular tourist stops and time to visit with winners representing other co-ops across the state. More than 1,600 youth attended from co-ops nationwide — topping the number of any previous event. Since 1964, more than 53,000 young people have joined the Washington Youth Tour.

The Youth Tour is one of the most rewarding things I do all year," said Connie Potts, DREMC consumer information specialist who served as a chaperone. These students not only learn about our nation and their electric cooperative, but they also learn leadership skills that will benefit them in college and beyond."

Tillinghast to Read From Sewanee Poem Aug.16

Poet Richard Tillinghast will read from his poem, "Sewanee When We Were Young," at 4:30 p.m., Saturday, Aug. 16, in Convocation Hall. The event is free and open to the public.

The reading is part of the University's first-year program, Finding Your Place (FYP), that begins on Aug. 13. FYP is in its second year and involves 150 of the incoming freshman in a 10-day interdisciplinary course before the beginning of the semester. Tillinghast read to the first group of FYP students in 2013.

Tillinghast is also the author of the long poem "Sewanee in Ruins." He is a 1962 graduate of Sewanee. He earned a master's degree and a Ph.D. at Harvard. When he returned to Sewanee as a visiting professor in 1979–80, he began "Sewanee in Ruins," which Arthur Ben Chitty published in a letter-press edition of 1,000 copies in 1981, with a second edition in 1983

SEWANEE UNION THEATRE Friday-Monday, Aug. 15-18 The Amazing Spider-Man 2

Rated PG-13 • 142 minutes

Andrew Garfield and Emma Stone are back in the latest installment of the Marvel Comics series, Spider-Man. Does it matter that we know the details of the plot? Peter Parker(Garfield) is in love with Gwen (Stone); Spider-Man (Garfield) must save New York from destruction by Electro (Jamie Foxx) and the Green Goblin (Dane DeHaan). There are assorted other bad guys (played by Paul Giamatti and Chris Cooper). And Parker's loving family (Sally Field, Campbell Scott, Embeth Davidtz) appear in flashbacks.

Given the high-quality actors this franchise attracts, "Spider-Man 2" rises above the usual comic book fare. This is director Marc Webb's second Spider-Man movie, so he knows what he's doing.

One critic wrote, "Fans who made the first movie such a huge success will doubtless find much to enjoy here, while others will long for the boldness, scope and wit of "The Avengers." Rated PG-13 for sequences of sci-fi action/violence. -LW

by John Shackelford

I was riding my bicycle one morning this summer toward my vacation rental house on the beach just past a small bridge that crosses over the intercoastal waterway in Wrightsville Beach, N.C., when my path led me into a parking lot lined with white diagonal stripes marking a dozen spaces waiting for tourists to arrive. The lot was empty, the sun just above the horizon, and my only companions were a few seagulls in search of a leftover pretzel or Cheeto. As Yogi Berra liked to say, this was "déjà vu all over again."

I lived in this same neighborhood as a college student more than 30 years ago. Each day I would return home on my bike from class or tennis practice on this same stretch of beach road. It's hard not to be happy when your view is the expansive Atlantic, there is an effortlessly rolling bike underneath your seat, and the wind is at your back. Those parking lines were talking to me. They wanted to play. Years ago as a teenager, I would slalom through the tips of each line as if I were flying down an imaginary ski run on a giant mountain only 100 yards from the true definition of sea level. In those days I'm not sure that I felt any differently than those scavenging seagulls gliding overhead riding a light breeze in search of whatever came next.

On this particular summer vacation day, as a grey-haired tourist on a fat-tired bike, I leaned to my left and then back to the right in an easy rhythm feeling the familiar inertia of my bike tires weaving back and forth through imaginary gates. My third child, Michaela, is at the same age today as I was the first time I rode that slalom pattern onto the island I call my second home. She will leave her childhood sanctuary on this mountain very soon for her college adventure, finding her own seagulls, parking lines, imaginary gates, and if she is as lucky as me, a place that feels like home.

I met my wife back in those days when we were young and the wind was at our back. We passed through gates of jobs, children, homes and new adventures together. As the sand and the ocean come closer into view, you realize that at times we swam against the current, pedaled into the wind and scavenged for a lost pretzel when nothing else was available.

None of that really seems to matter now. There is no finish line waiting at the end of my bike ride, no trophy for being the first one back to the beach house. I'm left with a few teenage girls still sleeping inside the house while their dad tried to get his morning exercise, a light breeze drying my sweaty shirt and a chair in the sand asking me to come read and sleep (in no particular order). I'm left with the knowledge that the ride I've shared these past 30 years simply created more to love, more to share, more twists and turns to look forward to on the next ride. I will watch Michaela pack her bags, pull out of my driveway, and head down the road as her older sisters have before her and know for certain that the wind is at her back and the ocean is deeper than she can possibly imagine.

1204 GUDGER RD Nice & Clean 2 BR, 1BA Mobile Home for Sale on 20 Acres

Sewanee, 2.5 cleared acres, large 30' x 40' building & two storage units, plus a double carport. $169,000. By appointment only: 598-0198 or 931-691-4367

REDUCED!

Whether you are looking for a primary residence with wooded serenity or a weekend retreat on approximately 13 +/- acres with a brow view, then this may be the perfect spot for you. The property is located about 20 minutes from the University of the South (Sewanee) and about 45 minutes from Chattanooga, so it feels like it is in a world of its own but is convenient to both locations. The home sits well off the road with a gated entry that serves both this property and the neighbor's acreage to the left. You will wind down a wooded drive and pass the neighbor's tranquil lake to the left. As you approach the home you will immediately notice the biggest draw of this property the stunning, scenic, brow view! There is an inviting master bedroom on the main level as well as the family room which is open to the dining room and features a raised brick hearth fireplace, built-ins and a sliding glass door to the spacious rear deck-perfect for grilling and dining on warm evenings. The dining room has access to the efficient kitchen with pull-out drawers in many of the cabinets. The upper level has 2 additional bedrooms, both with walk-out storage and one with a private covered balcony, and another full bath. The detached garage offers enclosed parking and/or additional storage. Please make your appointment today to see this beautiful property or call for more information.

Bumble Bees

This week's column is by visiting guest writer Jean H. Yeatman, entomologist and daughter of Jean A. and the late Harry C. Yeatman.

As you enjoy your summer flowers, you may wonder about the varieties of bees who visit them for pollen and nectar. Honey bees, which were brought here from Europe, have almost disappeared in the wild. The number of managed bee hives in the United States is half of what it was in the 1940s. This decline is due to Colony Collapse Disorder and other factors. Instead, we see more native species such as bumble bees visiting our flowers and pollinating our vegetables.

Like the honey bee, bumble bees are social insects having colonies with a single queen. In our part of North America, each colony is annual, dying back to newly-mated queen bees in the fall. In the spring, each new queen finds a site for her nest in a cavity such as an abandoned mouse nest, a tree hole or under a tussock of tall grass. Producing wax from glands in her body, the queen makes a cluster of various-sized round pots. She lays an egg in each pot and provides it with nectar and pollen as food for her first offspring. On cold days, she may sit on top of these pots, shivering to generate here, thereby incubating her eggs as birds do. Larvae hatch from these eggs and feed on the food provisions. They pupate in about a month, spinning silk cocoons as many caterpillars do.

The adults which emerge from these first pots are worker bees who help expand the nest and visit flowers. Rather than feeding the next set of larvae mouth-to-mouth in the fashion of honey bees, they deposit nectar and pollen in the pots for the larvae to eat. Bumble bee nests often hold less than 50 individuals at their peak. In the fall, new queens and male $bees \, are \, produced. \, After \, mating, the \, new \, queen \, hibernates \, underground$ or under leaf litter and begins a new colony in the spring.

Bumble bees will defend their nests but are not interested in stinging when they are visiting flowers. Native bees do not leave their stingers behind in the manner of honey bees. If you do get stung, calmly move away from the site and seek help if you are known to be allergic. You may wish to post a "Do Not Disturb the Bee Home" sign as a caution to others.

As valuable pollinators replacing the declining honey bees, bumble bee colonies benefit gardens and wildflowers alike. You can learn more about native bees and other insects via the Xerces Society website, <www. xerces.org>.

Signs for construction of the next segment of the Mountain Goat Trail have gone up along Highway 41A between Monteagle and Sewanee. Construction is due to begin later in August on the segment that will link the paved section in Sewanee to the Dollar General store in Monteagle. A Transportation Alternatives grant from the Tennessee Department of Transportation is funding the construction, with grant-matching funds provided by the Mountain Goat Trail Alliance. Pets of the Week

Meet Aubrey & Zoot

The Franklin County Humane Society's Animal Harbor offers these two delightful pets for adoption. Aubrey is a year and a half old, very loving and athletic. She prefers to be an only dog, but she does well with older children. Aubrey is smart as a whip and has learned several tricks, including how to shake paws. She is up-to-date on shots, heartworm negative and spayed.

Zoot is a precious little bunny who is half Mini-Lop and half Lionhead. She likes to be held and snuggled. Come meet her and see if a house rabbit is the right pet for you! Zoot has been spayed

Every Friday is Black Friday at Animal Harbor. On Fridays, adoption fees will be reduced 50 percent for black or mostly black pets more than 4 months old who have been at Animal Harbor for more than a month. Pets adopted from Animal Harbor qualify for a free post-adoption wellness exam by local veterinarians.

Call Animal Harbor at 962-4472 for information and check out the other pets at <www.animalharbor. com>. Enter their drawing on this site for a free spay or neuter for one of your pets! Please help the Humane Society continue to save homeless pets by sending your donations to the Franklin County Humane Society, P. O. Box 187, Winchester, TN 37398.

PART-TIME PROGRAMS AND RETREATS COORDINATOR

St. Mary's Sewanee, the Ayres Center for Spiritual Development is searching for a part-time Programs and Retreats Coordinator, working between 20–25 hours per week. This position serves as the communication hub for the entire center—between guests, retreat leaders, outside groups and our staff to provide the best possible service for all. The person in this position must embody the spiritual dimensions of hospitality, flexibility and graciously serve the needs of guests and retreat leaders.

Rebel's Rest 1866-2014

Between the two tall gateposts of rough-hewn stone (the gate itself having fallen from its hinges at some unknown epoch) we beheld the gray front of the old parsonage, terminating the vista of an avenue of black-ash trees. It was now a twelvemonth since the funeral procession of the venerable clergyman, its last inhabitant, had turned from that gateway towards the village burying-ground. The wheel-track leading to the door, as well as the whole breadth of the avenue, was almost overgrown with grass, affording dainty mouthfuls to two or three vagrant cows and an old white horse who had his own living to pick up along the roadside. The glimmering shadows that lay half asleep between the door of the house and the public highway were a kind of spiritual medium, seen through which the edifice had not quite the aspect of belonging to the material world. Certainly it had little in common with those ordinary abodes which stand so imminent upon the road that every passerby can thrust his head, as it were, into the domestic circle. From these quiet windows the figures of passing travellers looked too remote and dim to disturb the sense of privacy. In its near retirement and accessible seclusion, it was the very spot for the residence of a clergyman, - a man not estranged from human life, yet enveloped, in the midst of it, with a veil woven of intermingled gloom and brightness. It was worthy to have been one of the time-honored parsonages of England, in which, through many generations a succession of holy occupants pass from youth to age, and bequeath each an inheritance of sanctity to pervade the house and hover over it as with an atmosphere.

Nor, in truth, had the Old Manse ever been profaned by a lay occupant until that memorable summer afternoon when I entered it as my home. A priest had built; a priest had succeeded to it; other priestly men from time to time had dwelt in it; and children born in its chambers had grown up to assume the priestly character...The boughs over my head seemed shadowy with solemn thoughts as well as with rustling leaves.

—from "Mosses from an Old Manse" by Nathaniel Hawthorne, 1842
