

Sewanee Village Plan: Ambitious Goals, Long Range Vision

by Leslie Lytle, Messenger Staff Writer

"This is just a plan. Bulldozers are not perched to come in," said Frank Gladu, University Vice President of Administrative Services, welcoming more than 80 people who came to hear an update on the Sewanee Village Implementation Plan, Aug. 25, at the American Legion Hall.

The Sewanee Village concept grew out of the 2011 University master plan, which included a vision for downtown Sewanee. "Only a few of the proposals in the Implementation Plan will likely be accomplished in our lifetime," said Gladu.

"The Sewanee Village Plan is based on four core principles that make a great village," said Brian Wright with Town Planning and Urban Design Collaborative (TPUDC), retained by the University to implement the Sewanee Village vision. "The village should be walkable, include a mixture of business and residential properties, be compact, and reflect diversity by being attractive to people of all ages and lifestyles and offering diverse housing types."

With these goals in mind, the University received approval for rezoning 67 acres in the downtown vicinity from agricultural and general residential use to mixed-use, allowing for commercial development. The Franklin County Planning Commission also agreed to zoning amendments reducing the setback distance to as little as zero feet; allowing for smaller lots; and allowing for a wider variety of uses including businesses such as a market, inn, grocery and microbrewery.

The plan addresses the need for housing with small cottages sharing communal space, affordable single-family dwellings, and apartments, including apartments on the second story above commercial buildings and 300 square foot micro-housing units.

Community Council Votes to Continue Project Funding

by Leslie Lytle, Messenger Staff Writer

At the Aug. 23 meeting, the Sewanee Community Council voted to continue the $10,000 project funding program indefinitely. The Council also reviewed protocol for the upcoming election and discussed the rational for and equitability of transfer fees.

In the summer of 2014, the Council approved the project funding program on a two-year trial bases. Under the provision of the program, the municipal service fee paid by leaseholders was increased to generate $10,000 to be used for physical improvements and amenities on the Domain, the funds to be disbursed at the council's discretion.

In discussion about whether to continue the program, council representative David Coe asked if any residents complained about the increase in the municipal service fee. Superintendent of Leases Barbara Schlichting said one community member objected to the Council overseeing the disbursement of the funds and would have preferred the decision fell to the leaseholders.

In the two trial years, an appointed committee composed of both council members and non-council members reviewed projects and made recommendations to the council.

Council representative Pam Byerly said she preferred the review committee be composed entirely of council members. Other council members concurred, arguing an all-council member review committee could increase interest in serving on the council, which was the initial intent for establishing the program.

Vice-Chancellor John McCardell pointed out deferring the selection process decision until after the upcoming council election could be an incentive to a potential candidate who favored one mechanism over the other.

The council voted to continue the project funding program at the present level of funding indefinitely and to defer a decision on the selection

Glacet Takes Helm of the Sewanee Children's Center

by Kevin Cummings, Messenger Staff Writer

Carrie Mauzy swept pea gravel off the playground sidewalk as a pint-sized kid with spiky brown hair pushed a dump truck at her feet, spilling new gravel onto the sidewalk.

"She's marvelous," Carrie said about Sandy Glacet, the new director of the Sewanee Children's Center, who had just helped a child off a fence and was now passing out toys on the playground.

Carrie is in her 31st year as a teacher at the Children's Center, a parent-run school for kids ages 3 to 5 that a group of University of the South employees started in 1949.

"Sandy has a clear understanding of what young children need and what their strengths are," Mauzy said. "She has a real vision for what's current in education and bringing children back to nature and play-based learning. Children learn best through feeling, sensory and nature."

Sandy, a Sewanee graduate, took over as director in August after Harriet Runkle stepped down. She started teaching at the center in 2012, but left for a year to return to her native France when her husband, Aymeric, the University's chair of French and French Studies, was on sabbatical. The couple has two sons, ages 7 and 4.

"I want the community to know that the Children's Center is a really great place for parents and children; we all work together to be sure the children have a good foundation to be ready for elementary school," Sandy said.

She grew up two hours north of Paris and before moving to the U.S. was an assistant teacher for disabled children. Her parents still live in France; her mom is a nurse for elderly people and her stepfather works in the insurance business.

Genevieve Schutz, age 5, is a recent Children's Center graduate and Sandy was one of her teachers.

"Miss Sandy is so understanding," Genevieve said. "Whenever we needed help, she would understand. And she's French and taught us French words like 'bleu.' She would give us challenges in French. I want to write a whole book about Miss Sandy!"

Genevieve's mom, Regan Schutz, is former vice president of the Children's Center Board of Directors.

"I can't tell you how delighted—and excited—I am for the community's preschool to be under Sandy's guidance," Regan said. "Coupled with the Rev. April Berends as board president, SCC is on its way to even more success."

Sandy noted that the Children's Center doesn't pressure children to learn, but rather invites them to, creating special activities to generate a desire to learn. She smiles and her cheeks brighten when she talks about a student suddenly grasping a concept.

"Childhood is a childhood, we don't need to hurry up," she said. "They need to be ready and when a child is ready to learn, it's so easy. You can see their face when they have that click."

Mindful Self-Compassion Workshop

An eight-week Mindful Self-Compassion workshop will be taught each Wednesday, 6–8:30 p.m., at St. Mary's Sewanee beginning Sept. 28 and ending Nov. 16.

The course will include a half-day retreat 10 a.m.–2 p.m., Saturday, Oct. 29.

Mindful Self-Compassion (MSC) is based on the groundbreaking research of Kristin Neff and the clinical expertise of Christopher Germer. MSC teaches core principles and practices that enable participants to respond to difficult moments in their lives with kindness, care and understanding.

Self-compassion can be learned by anyone, even those who didn't receive enough affection in childhood or who feel uncomfortable when they are good to themselves. It's a courageous attitude that stands up to harm, including the harm we unwittingly inflict on ourselves through self-criticism, self-isolation or self-absorption. Self-compassion provides emotional strength and resilience, allowing us to admit our shortcomings, motivate ourselves with kindness, forgive ourselves when needed, relate wholeheartedly to others and be more authentically ourselves.

Rapidly expanding research demonstrates that self-compassion is strongly associated with emotional wellbeing, less anxiety, depression and stress, maintenance of healthy habits such as diet and exercise, and satisfying personal relationships.

After participating in this workshop, you'll be able to: practice self-compassion in daily life; understand the empirically-supported benefits of self-compassion; motivate yourself with kindness rather than criticism; handle difficult emotions with greater ease; transform challenging relationships, old and new; manage caregiver fatigue; and practice the art of savoring and self-appreciation.

The class will be taught by Maryellen McCone, MA, LPC/ MHSP and Richard Barrali, CYT. The cost is $350 for eight-weeks plus the half-day retreat. A manual containing exercises and core meditations is included.

For more information or registration materials contact McCone at (931) 636-4415 or email <mmccone@sewanee.edu>.

For the past year, TPUDC has taken on design and architectural review services for buildings on leaseholds within the village boundary. Wright and his team are in the process of creating an Architectural Pattern Book to guide those considering building homes and businesses in the village area.

The pattern book identifies four residential styles. "We want to capture the character of the place and still allow for creativity," Wright said. "We want people to have a sense of comfort about what to expect."

Central to the plan's vision is the transformation of Hwy. 41A to accommodate accessibility to proposed amenities on the non-campus side of the highway. The Tennessee Department of Transportation (TDOT) is considering the University's request to narrow Hwy. 41A to two lanes (without the previously proposed roundabout). The plan calls for sidewalks with tree lawns on Hwy. 41A, as well as street-side parking.

TDOT rejected the request for a crosswalk on Hwy. 41A, Wright said, because there wasn't sufficient pedestrian traffic. Instead, TDOT proposed a HAWK-style signal activated by a pedestrian pressing a button at the crossing, which sets off flashing yellow lights, then flashing red lights, and finally a solid red stop light.

Questioned about semi trucks navigating the transformed highway, Wright pointed out Cowan and Winchester both offered street-side parking on portions of Hwy. 41A.

Wright said plans did not call for bike lanes on Hwy. 41A, but talks were underway with the Mountain Goat Trail Alliance to incorporate the Mountain Goat Trail into the downtown area.

In the core of the village, the plan proposes parking behind the businesses and other buildings lining the street. Asked about parking for a Senior Citizens' Center, Wright said parking ease would be incorporated into the design plan, without steps or ramps needed to access the facility.

One visitor argued parking behind the building wouldn't adequately address parking needs and suggested subsidiary parking facilities. Wright said satellite parking and some sort of tram system were both being considered. "I hope we have a parking problem so these ideas get prioritized."

Another visitor stressed the need for supporting existing small businesses and spoke out against businesses being required to modify the structure of their buildings. Gladu insisted this, required modification, was not the case.

Renovations and additions to existing businesses and homes will be required to follow the Pattern Book guidelines, according to Wright, but everyday maintenance and repair will be exempt from the Pattern Book criteria.

"We've totally failed if existing businesses go out of business," Wright said. Addressing concerns about where the money would come from to implement the changes proposed in the plan, Wright said, "We're not proposing something be built. We're just setting the framework for it, setting the stage. This is a 100-year plan."

Gladu said addressing housing needs and modifying the Hwy. 41A intersection were top priority. Wright also cited the need for a full-service grocery-type market in the village.

The University has issued a Request for Qualifications (RFQ) with the intent of qualifying development teams to pursue projects identified in the plan. Priority will be given to RFQs received before Oct. 1. Guidelines and more information about the Sewanee Village Implementation Plan are available at <sewanee.edu/village>.

The council also approved a motion by Coe that any proposed increase in the amount of funding be announced at two consecutive meetings to allow for community input.

Updating the council on the upcoming election, council representative and election officer Pixie Dozier reminded the council that to accommodate redrawing of district boundaries and restructuring of the council's composition, all council representatives' terms would end in November. "All seats are open for election," Dozier said. In addition to electing three representatives in each of the four districts, the council will elect four at-large representatives.

To ensure continuity, half the newly elected representatives will serve two-year terms and the other half will serve four-year terms, with the candidates receiving the most votes serving four years. Beginning with the 2018 election, all representatives will serve four-year terms.

Candidates must be Sewanee residents for at least two years. All candidates must return a nominating petition signed by 10 registered-voter residents by Oct. 15. Candidates running for a district seat must have 10 signatures from residents of their district. See the district map attached for information on district boundaries. Nominating petitions are available at the lease office.

Voting takes place during the general election, Nov. 8. Early and absentee voting will be offered Oct. 25–Nov. 7 at the Lease Office.

Reporting on the University's proposed intention to reduce transfer fees, Provost John Swallow said both the amount of the fee and formula by which it was determined were under review. The transfer fee is assessed when leaseholds change hands.

Echoing community complaints, council representative Drew Sampson expressed disappointment a $7,000 transfer fee was recently assessed the nonprofit Folks at Home. He argued the transfer fee was, in fact, a tax, not a fee, since no service was provided in return. He also argued the transfer fee was unfair, since it originated to offset loss of revenue when ground rent was frozen 30 years ago at a rate based on the assessed property value at the time; in 2011 ground rent was unfrozen for new leases and so increased with assessed property value, but the transfer fee continued to be levied.

Schlichting pointed out that since revenue from ground rent increased in 2011, the transfer fee was slightly reduced.

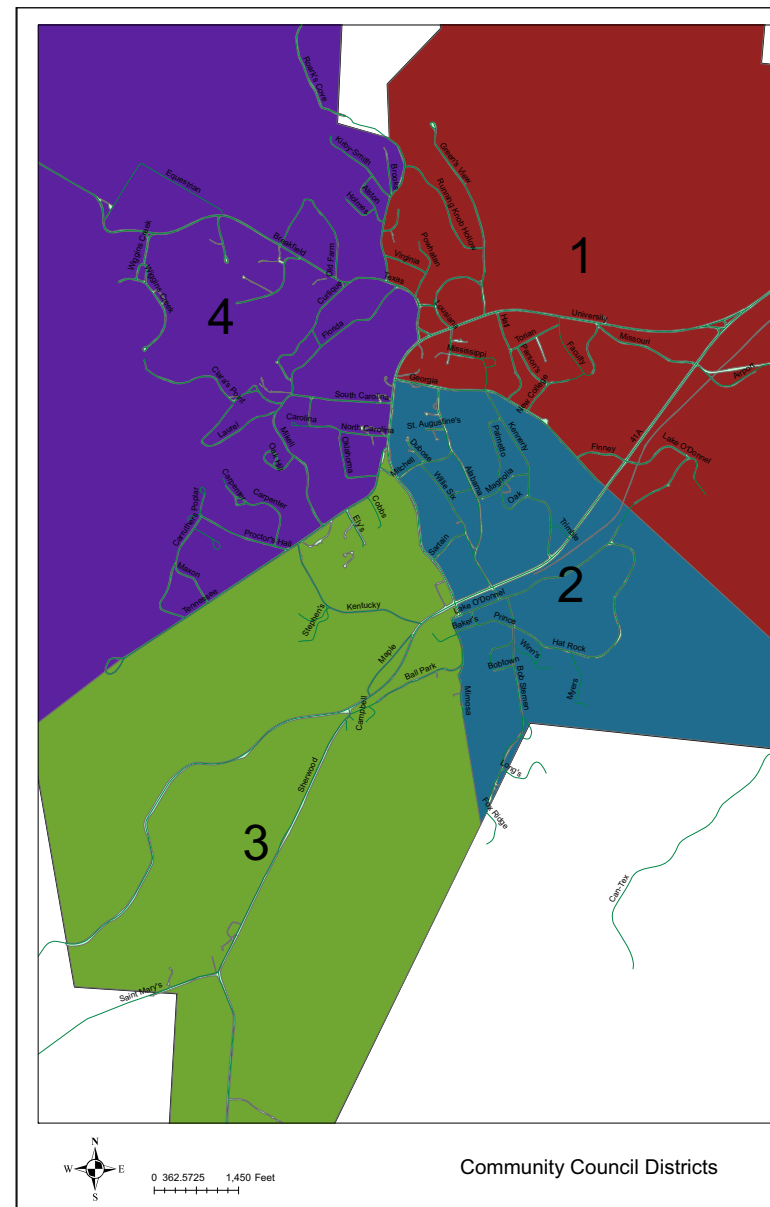

McCardell introduced the student council representatives for the 2016–17 academic year. College representative Abbey Shockley is a junior majoring in politics. Jeremy Carlson representing the School of Theology is studying to be an Episcopal priest.

It's just so great and it reminds me why I come to the center every day. I feel grateful to have my chance here."

The Children's Center, located at Otey Parish, is funded through money from the Sewanee Community Chest, school fundraisers and parent dues, and parents are also asked to participate in co-op activities, such as washing clothes or other work at the center.

"I'm really connected with the parents and the teachers," Sandy said. "They are very supportive. The director needs to understand the routine in the classroom and to know the parents to have open communication. We have great teachers and we are all passionate and devoted about what we really believe is the right way to teach."

Teaching Children How to Make Healthy Choices

On Aug. 24, DuBose Conference Center in Monteagle hosted the “Healthy Horizons” diabetes prevention and healthy living event with fourth-graders and their teachers from each Grundy County elementary school. Coordinated by the Southeast Regional Health Office Director Beth Delaney, this program was a collaboration of the State of Tennessee and the Grundy County Health Council. Mary Jo Gallagher, Grundy Coordinate School Health Coordinator, helped to plan and manage the day.

More than 140 fourth-graders, along with many of their parents and an army of community health workers and volunteers, moved from station to station to learn about making healthy choices with respect to nutrition and exercise. Some of the stations were “Sugar Awareness,” teaching about dangerous levels of sugars hidden in many of the foods and drinks they consume; anti-tobacco education; “Bones in Motion,” featuring easy to perform exercises; and Tai Chi, taught by Folks at Home’s Kathleen O’Donohue.

Additional highlights included a tour of the DuBose Center’s vegetable and herb garden, complete with a water-barrel demonstration, and always popular “worm petting” at the compost boxes with Katie Gray, DuBose Garden and Sustainability person.

Parents of the children were treated to a nutrition education session by health educator Amy Davenport and a cooking demonstration by DuBose staff members Angela Lanier and Stephanie Kelley, followed by a nutritious lunch.

Community volunteers included people from the Friends of the South Cumberland, and Julie Keel, Emily Partin, Barbara Camm, and VISTA workers Bobby Luffman and Jennifer Horton. Sheila Beard and Jeremy Taylor were on hand from the Volunteer Behavioral Health Care System, and it was an introduction to the Mountain for new Franklin and Grundy County Health Educator, Sophia Leon-Meza.

Other community volunteers included Rhonda Campbell, Karen Wickham, John Campbell, Haley Colvin, Charlene Nunley, Paula Hamlin, Kim Simmons, Chasity Melton, Katie Goforth, Lynn James and Sherry Cagle, who lent a hand as station leaders.

DuBose Conference Center is a 501 (c) 3 nonprofit organization that has expanded its vision to include community outreach and engagement.

MEET YOUR NEIGHBOR

by Kevin Cummings,
Messenger Staff Writer

As we talk, Steve Blount eats a breakfast bagel. Later in the day he'll meet with a forensic pathologist in Nashville for a murder case he's prosecuting as the 12th Judicial District senior assistant district attorney.

The Tampa, Fla., native is a soft-spoken man, the father of two college-age kids and someone deeply in love with his community.

"Sewanee gets in your blood and under your skin and I'm one of those people that happened to," he says. "I still go through the gates and touch my roof to get an angel and put it back when I come back."

He and his wife, Mary, a fellow political science major, started their romance with each other and this town in 1977 when a professor invited a group of students to dinner.

"There was a young child toddling straight for an open fireplace and we both rushed to the child at the exact same time," he says. "That led to a conversation, which led to a first date."

Outside of his time in law school at Florida State University, he and his wife have called Sewanee home for almost 40 years.

Steve learned his early courtroom skills from his mom, dad and paternal grandfather, people who loved a healthy debate.

"My first attraction to the courtroom was I'm argumentative," he says, "and will argue and/or discuss almost any topic with anybody. I'm hypercompetitive, probably to a fault."

Steve's dad worked his way to vice president of a company that dealt in door-to-door sales and his mom was an elementary school teacher. Some of his best childhood memories were with his dad and grandfather, a fireman, fishing for largemouth bass on Chassahowitzka River not far from Crystal River, Fla.

Steve Blount

Steve decided to be a lawyer during late night conversations with his cousin and Sewanee classmate Eric Zinn in their dormitory and at the Tiger Bay Pub. Both Eric and Steve decided to be lawyers.

Blount was in private practice from 1984 to 1990 with a law firm in Winchester, handling divorce proceedings, injury law, criminal defense and "just about anything that came in the door."

In 1990, he started working part-time as an assistant district attorney while still handling civil cases. In 1993, he went to work exclusively for the State.

"I had two full time jobs and I needed to pick one," he says. "The one that gave me the most pleasure was courtroom work and that's prosecuting."

"I slept much better and I sleep much better as a prosecutor than as I did as a private attorney," he adds. "That has everything to do with the types of cases you're doing, the justice of it, the ethics of it, because the ethics that a prosecutor lives by are different than a defense attorney."

Steve says his work comes home with him, much like it did with his dad.

"How I get away from it—you're getting personal—I go home and hug my wife and she looks in my eye and knows to leave me alone," he says. "I try not to take it home but it's with me, it's always emotionally there, so the way that I deal with it is with a very loving, supportive family who understands."

Another way Steve dealt with the stress of prosecuting was through supporting his children at St. Andrew's-Sewanee School, attending soccer games, officiating swim meets, going to plays and helping at track meets. Steve says if he wasn't an attorney, he'd probably be a sports coach or school teacher.

Now that his son Zachary just graduated college and his daughter Emily is a junior, Steve looks forward to traveling more with his wife in the future. They are planning to visit Santa Fe soon, their first real vacation without kids in 23 years.

"I used to be an avid scuba diver," he adds. "I'd like to get back to recreational scuba diving."

Cozumel is down the road a ways, so after breakfast, Steve dives back into the challenging waters of being a prosecutor.

Sewanee to Host Symposium 'Incorporating Equality: The First 150 Years of the 14th Amendment'

The University of the South will host a symposium Sept. 15–17 marking the 150th anniversary of Tennessee's landmark approval of the 14th Amendment. "Incorporating Equality: The First 150 Years of the 14th Amendment" will bring together some of the nation's leading historians, constitutional scholars, lawyers, and judges to reflect on the Amendment's future in light of its past. CLE credits are available for attorneys licensed in Tennessee.

Two events leading up to the symposium are open to the public at no charge: a screening of the documentary "14: Dred Scott, Wong Kim Ark & Vanessa Lopez," and an opening talk by noted historian David Blight.

The 14th Amendment was proposed by Congress in 1866 to establish a new framework of law for a nation rebuilding from war and the abolition of chattel slavery. Tennessee's state legislature approved the Amendment that year, the first in the defeated Confederacy and the third in the nation to do so. During the next 150 years, the application and enforcement of the 14th Amendment reconstructed the course of American history and law—and in ways the framers and legislators of 1866 could not have foreseen.

Distinguished presenters at the symposium include: David W. Blight, professor of American history at Yale University and director of the Gilder Lehrman Center for the Study of Slavery, Resistance, and Abolition; Annette Gordon-Reed, professor of American legal history at Harvard Law School and the Radcliffe Institute for Advanced Study; Michael Kent Curtis, professor in constitutional and public law at Wake Forest University; Daniel J. Sharfstein, professor of law and history at Vanderbilt University and co-director of the George Barrett Social Justice Program; Kareem Crayton, visiting professor of law at Vanderbilt University; and others.

See the symposium website <www.sewanee.edu/law-symposium/> for the full schedule, presenter information and registration. A registration discount is available for local residents who would like to attend all the sessions. Contact Tanner Potts at (931) 598-1934 for details.

Two public events will take place on the Sewanee campus leading up to the symposium. The documentary film "14: Dred Scott, Wong Kim Ark & Vanessa Lopez" will be shown at 7 p.m., Wednesday, Sept. 14, in the Sewanee Union Theatre. A panel discussion will follow.

The film explores the recurring question about who has the right to be an American citizen. "14" examines the citizenship clause of the 14th Amendment through compelling personal stories and expertly told history. Under the 14th Amendment, "All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside."

The symposium's opening lecture by David Blight, "The Origins and Meaning of the 14th Amendment in the Civil War and Reconstruction," is also open to the public. Blight will speak at 7 p.m., Thursday, Sept. 15, in Convocation Hall. A reception and book signing will follow.

Blight is professor of American history at Yale University and director of the Gilder Lehrman Center for the Study of Slavery, Resistance, and Abolition. He is the author of numerous influential works in the history of race, the Civil War and Reconstruction, including "Race and Reunion: The Civil War in American Memory," winner of the Bancroft Prize, the Abraham Lincoln Prize and the Frederick Douglass Prize.

Sewanee Welcomes New College Faculty

The University is pleased to welcome 13 new tenure-track faculty members in the College, as well as other new faculty members. Please see information below about each new appointment.

Katherine Cammack, assistant professor of behavioral neuroscience, earned a B.S. from Santa Clara University and a Ph.D. from Rutgers University. Her research explores how drugs of abuse impact normal behavior and cognitive processes, using rodents as a model. She explores the ways abused drugs alter normal brain processes such as learning, memory, and motivation; how social or environmental enrichment impacts drug seeking; and why similar individuals respond differently to the same drug.

John Coffey, assistant professor of psychology, has a B.A. (Psychology) from Creighton University, an M.S.W. from the University of Michigan, and a master's and Ph.D. (Developmental Psychology) from Claremont Graduate University. His research integrates contemporary developmental theories of relationships and emotions with positive psychology theories of well-being to test how early life experiences (e.g., caregiver-child relationship, emotions) affect adolescent and adult indicators of well-being and maladaptation.

Jim Crawford is an award-winning actor who has appeared on stage at regional theaters across the country and who headed the B.F.A. and M.F.A. acting programs at Southern Methodist University. There he directed productions of plays including Tom Stoppard's "Arcadia," Oscar Wilde's "An Ideal Husband," Moliere's "The Miser" and Wallace Shawn's "Aunt Dan and Lemon." Sewanee's new associate professor of theatre and dance, Crawford has a B.A. from Brown University and an M.F.A. from University of California at San Diego.

She is working on a book about Henry Ford and the Ford Motor Company, tentatively titled "Fording Religion in the Automobile Age." She earned a B.B.A. from Washburn University, an M.A. from New York University, an M.Phil./M.A. and a Ph.D. from Yale University.

JoyAnna S. Hopper, assistant professor of politics, researches public policy and administration, with a focus on environmental policy in the American states. Hopper has a B.A. from Eastern Illinois University, an M.A. from the University of Missouri, and a Ph.D.

from the University of Missouri.

Maha Jafri, assistant professor of English, has a B.A. from the Johns Hopkins University, and an M.A. and Ph.D. from Northwestern University. She is currently completing a book manuscript entitled "Between Us: Gossip, Sociability, and the Victorian Novel."

Evan Joslin joins the University as assistant professor of chemistry. Joslin plans an organometallic approach in her research and teaching students in the disciplines of organic and inorganic chemistry, because the futures of these two fields are inextricably linked. She earned a B.A. (with ACS certification) from Agnes Scott College and a Ph.D. from the University of Virginia.

Arturo Marquez-Gomez, assistant professor of Spanish, focuses in his work on contemporary cinematic arts and literature in Latin America, and hopes to develop future research on contemporary women film directors, photography and audiovisual cultures of the South Cone Region. He has a B.A. from the University of Chile, an M.A. in Spanish from Middlebury College, and an M.A. and Ph.D. in Hispanic Studies from Brown University.

Sean O'Rourke, last year's Brown Foundation Fellow, joins the University as professor of rhetoric and director of the Center for Speaking and Listening. He has a B.A. and M.A. from Humboldt State University, and a J.D. and Ph.D. from the University of Oregon. O'Rourke's primary concern is with the communication arts of an engaged citizenry—public speaking, freedom of speech, robust and responsible debate, reasoned deliberation, constructive argument in controversy—at the center of democratic civic life.

Lucia Garcia-Santana, instructor/assistant professor of Spanish, earned a B.A. from Universidad de La Laguna, Spain, and an M.A. and Ph.D. in Spanish studies from the University of Connecticut. Originally from the Canary Islands, Spain, Garcia-Santana works on the manifold manifestations of displacement—exile, internal and external migration—as reflected in the literature and culture of Spain and Latin America.

Everett "Clint" Smith, assistant professor of biology, has a B.S. from the University of Central Arkansas, and a Ph.D. from the University of Kentucky. Since 2011, Smith has been a postdoctoral fellow in the division of Pediatric Infectious Disease at Vanderbilt University Medical Center. X-Men: Apocalypse

7:30 p.m., Friday, Sept. 2 through Sunday, Sept. 4
2016, Rated PG-13, 144 minutes

X-Men franchise veteran Bryan Singer returns to direct this superhero tour de force that brings us back to the heart of "Xavier's School for Talented Youngsters" – aka, a refuge for mutants. When an indestructible and immortal mutant thousands of years old known as Apocalypse (Oscar Isaac) arises from his slumber, he recruits a team of others, including a disillusioned Magneto (Michael Fassbender) to cleanse the world and rebuild it under his vision. Jennifer Lawrence and James McAvoy reprise their roles as Mystique and Professor Charles Xavier as they band together to decide how best to destroy an unstoppable foe. Panned by critics as having a clichéd villain and predictable plot, this film had high expectations to meet after the wildly successful and inventive "X-Men: Days of Future Past" that artfully blended the old generation of mutants with the new. However, it is specifically the actors, now fully comfortable in their mutant skins, and Singer's expertly directed action sequences that saves this film from pure drive. A good popcorn film, parents of small children should be cautioned that there are several sequences of action and destructions as well as brief strong language and a few suggestive images. Come for the acting and gorgeous special effects, but don't expect too much from the plot.

To Kill a Mockingbird

7:30 p.m., Wednesday, Sept. 7
1962, Unrated, 129 minutes

Based on the Pulitzer-prize winning novel by Harper Lee, this cinema classic set the standard for courtroom dramas and defined the career of Gregory Peck, who embodies Atticus Finch, a straight-laced lawyer working during The Great Depression in rural Alabama. Finch finds himself in a precarious position when he agrees to represent a black man who claims the rape charges set against him towards a white woman are unjust. Finch finds the town turning against him and his family over this decision. As told through the eyes of his stubbornly tom-boyish daughter Scout, this film brings to life one of the most important works of Southern literature and brought up issues of race vs. justice long before it was acceptable to do so. Part drama and part coming of age tale, this is one not to be missed on the big screen. Though unrated, heavier themes of the story may go over very young children's heads, although the message of justice despite color lines is one that bears repeating to all generations.

The Shallows

7:30 p.m., Thursday, Sept. 8 through Sunday, Sept. 11
2016, Rated PG-13, 86 minutes

A movie doesn't have to have a cast of thousands to wow—sometimes it just takes the right actors, a tightly focused plot and fantastic camerawork to do the trick. Blake Lively, whose star began rising with the 2015 time-travel romance "The Age of Adeline" plays Nancy, an expert surfer who decides to hit the waves solo and finds herself a near-snack for a great white shark. Only 200 yards from shore and alone, getting back won't be as easy as it seems. Filmed mainly on the Gold Coast of Queensland, Australia, the brilliance of "The Shallows" is in the unseen and in its simplicity—director Jaume Collet-Serra keeps the camera locked onto Nancy and the underwater sequences are expertly done. Taut and well-paced, audiences won't be able to keep their eyes off the screen. Rated PG-13 for bloody images and intense peril, this one might be too tense for the teensies, but a satisfying thrill ride for everyone else.

Part of Documentary Film Shot in Sewanee

by Bailey Basham, Messenger Intern

A photo still from the production of "¡Ayayay!"

Alvarez's film, "¡Ayayay!," will be shot in four parts: a summer shoot—which was done in Sewanee—along with a winter and spring shoot in Tennessee and a 2- to 3-day shoot in Colombia, South America. The film received a $1,000 production grant from Temple University and is a recipient of the Big Vision Empty Wallet Kickstart Diversity Program.

According to Alvarez, "¡Ayayay!" begins with a pair of siblings who don't get along. One is visiting the other from Colombia, and it is her first time out of the country. The fights with her Tennessee-based sibling get so bad that she ends up homeless, without knowing the language or having a place to go.

"Well, originally the protagonist was a 'he'—my brother Brian Jordan Alvarez was going to play the sibling who is visiting Tennessee for the first time, and I was going to play the sibling who already lives in the states. My brother dropped out, and in effect, the sibling fight that happens in the script happened in real life," said Alvarez.

"The story of the main character is that in her homelessness in a foreign land, she discovers she has a superpower: her hometown dance of mostly salsa. Body language is the only international language she knows. At first she uses it defensively and combatively. But what she needs to learn to do is not to fight, but communicate; she needs to communicate with people she doesn't understand and who don't understand her. And she needs to be able to listen to what they're saying, too."

Some Sewanee locals might recognize Alvarez through her connection with the Bridge Program, which she ran for three years, or her time spent adapting the 1931 novel "The Other Side of the Mountain" by May Justus into a play, supported by the Grundy Area Arts Council, in coordination with the Coalmont Elementary School's Leaps program.

Though she ran into some set backs in the production of "¡Ayayay!," Alvarez said it is something that she has been planning to do for years.

"When I took over the lead role as the sibling who wanders homeless in Tennessee, estranged from her brother and family, it was real for me in many senses—I had brought with me a crew of nine people, many of whom were from all over the U.S., but my parents were far away and my brother was out of the picture as I was encountering the biggest challenge of my life, shooting my first feature length film. In many ways I was also lost, and I had to write certain parts that hadn't been written yet because I hadn't planned on shooting them until later," said Alvarez.

"I would have shot it, even if I hadn't been doing my thesis—I've been planning this film for a long time. My team was behind me and behind the project, and they were ready for whatever came. In a sense, I thrived on the freedom of having to make up half of what we shot just the day before. It brought the story to a new level."

According to Alvarez, one of the first people the main character meets after the fallout with her brother is Whistle, a hostile squatter, played by Kathleen O'Donohue.

"I am not an actor, but Catalina asked me to help her by doing a role in a film she was making in 2014 and again in this film. What's interesting about the character Whistle is her movements and nonverbal communication," said O'Donohue. "Assisting Catalina in realizing her visions and dreams was the most rewarding aspect for me. It was inspiring to work with diverse people who are talented and passionate about their field of work, creating and making cinema. When I think about each of them, I am inspired and honored to have been a part of their project."

Alvarez said the community has been very welcoming and helpful to her and her crew in the production of "¡Ayayay!"

"¡Ayayay!" has thrived on community love and hospitality, which is also a part of its quest," said Alvarez. "My parents, Angela and Paul Jordan, generously opened their doors for the whole crew to stay at their house during the shoot—most of us lived there for three weeks. Howell and Madeline Adams graciously allowed us to film at their Little Green Gym. The Sherwood Mining Company allowed us to film at a location on their site, and Helen and Archie Stapleton let us shoot on their land and use their cabin. Then there was the incredible generosity of John and Jane Lovett at Falls Mill, which I highly recommend visiting—there's graffiti from the 1800s."

Alvarez and her crew aim to have the filming completed in May 2017. "¡Ayayay!" is projected to be released in May 2018. Tax-deductible donations may be made to help with filming and production costs at <http://ayayayohmy.weebly.com/donate.html>.

Opening Reception Today at Carlos Gallery

The Carlos Gallery in the Nabit Art Building at University of the South is pleased to present "Wide Receivers and Near Misses," an exhibition by artist Lauren Ruth. Ruth is a multidisciplinary artist whose sculptural works engage issues of social ritual, participation and the body. The exhibit runs through Saturday, Oct. 1.

The opening reception and artist talk is at 4:30 p.m., today (Friday), Sept. 2, at the Nabit Art Building, room 103.

The works in "Wide Receivers and Near Misses" are conceived as defamiliarized stand-ins for various sensory organs and communication tools. Drawing on the human propensity for miscommunication, the works push against conventions of propriety to facilitate corporeal awareness and unexpected exchange.

Ruth's bold, human scale works present mundane objects—ground beef, hay bales, the body—in unfamiliar and surreal terms. The sculptures resemble furniture, signage and interior décor. Human ears tower over the viewer like indelicate eavesdroppers and meat pillows offer a comfortable seat.

Ruth has exhibited at the Corcoran College of Art + Design, Washington D.C.; the Delaware Center for the Contemporary Arts, Wilmington, Del.; the Museum of Contemporary Art Detroit, Detroit, Mich.; the University of the Arts, Philadelphia, Pa.; Root Division, San Francisco, Calif.; and Zeitgeist Gallery, Nashville, Tenn.

Ruth earned a B.A. from Dartmouth College and an M.F.A. in Sculpture from Cranbrook Academy of Art. Ruth was assistant professor of art at the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga from 2013–16. Ruth recently relocated to Chico, Calif., where she is assistant professor of sculpture at the California State University, Chico.

Gallery hours are from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and 1–5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. The gallery is located at 105 Kennerly Road.

'Autumnal Sashay and ExPo Challenge'

What is an Autumnal Sashay? Perhaps it's a fancy dance with words and emotions as we welcome cooler air and prepare to meet the Fall Equinox. Or maybe it's just a pretty name for a poetry event.

Either way, Sewanee Poetry Night's next event on Tuesday, Sept. 6, is labeled "An Autumnal Sashay" and features a return of some crowd favorites along with newcomers and loyal word-smiths, including Spencer Hupp, Sara Kachelman, Sally Hubbard, Michael Cimino-Hurt, Saunders Drukker and Karen Nelson.

Poetry Night also has a new feature, the Extemporaneous Poetry Challenge, or ExPo. Anyone who wants to take the challenge will blindly draw a phrase or sentence and then immediately perform a spontaneous poem beginning with that phrase or sentence. If they can perform for two minutes, their name goes into a $50 drawing held at the November Poetry Night.

Poetry Night on Tuesday begins at 7 p.m. at the Blue Chair Café & Tavern. For more information, visit <facebook.com/FogPoets> or email <FogPoets@gmail.com>.

In-Town Gallery Presents 'Towers' in September

Doug McCoy's unique canvases are featured for the September show at In-Town Gallery. "Towers" is a showing of the highly detailed pen and ink drawings. Meet the artist at the opening reception 5–8 p.m., today (Friday), Sept. 2, at 26A Frazier Avenue.

A native Chattanooga, McCoy began drawing at the age of two. He drew his own comic books, wrote songs and story boarded ideas for movies, and later earned a B.A. at UTC.

"Studying art, music and theater simultaneously gives me a unique perspective on the world, which influences my art through pop culture and the relationship of man with nature," said McCoy. "I want my paintings to convey a feeling, whether introspective or whimsical, but it is important that a work of art have an impact on the viewer."

Using canvases toned in acrylic paint he then uses archival ink, layering washes and glazes, while erecting vertical symbols of fanciful architectural designs. "Art is primal—a basic need of communication. After cavemen found food and water, they began to draw," says McCoy. His works are so intricate and time consuming that viewers can't help but be drawn into the process. A regular exhibitor at the Chattanooga Sunday Market, he has a large following and regularly exhibits in juried shows. Among his awards is a piece on permanent display in Chattanooga's sister city Hamm, Germany.

In-Town Gallery, located at 26A Frazier Avenue, on the North shore, is open every day year round, except for major holidays. Hours are 11 a.m.–6 p.m. Monday–Saturday, 1–5 p.m. Sunday and until 8 p.m. on First Fridays. For more information go to <www.facebook.com/intowngallery>.

Strayhorn to Give Public Talk Related to Sewanee's 'Common Book'

The University of the South's common book this year for new college students, Ta-Nehisi Coates's "Between the World and Me," provides a unique experience for Sewanee's newest students, as well as faculty, staff and community members, to engage in dialogue and discussion. Terrell Strayhorn, director of the Center for Higher Education Enterprise at the Ohio State University, will give a talk related to the book at 4:30 p.m., Wednesday, Sept. 14, in Guerry Auditorium. The community is invited.

Written as a letter to Coates's teen-aged son, "Between the World and Me" speaks to young black people at this moment in U.S. history and raises important questions about how to come to grips with their place in the world. Writing in the New York Times, Michelle Alexander said, "Whether you agree or disagree, one of the great joys of reading Ta-Nehisi Coates is being challenged in ways you didn't expect or imagine."

The book is in stock at the University Bookstore and available at online booksellers, and several copies are at duPont Library. The community is invited to read along and participate in campus events open to the public.

Strayhorn is professor of educational studies in the College of Education and Human Ecology at the Ohio State University and director of the Center for Higher Education Enterprise.

A renowned student success scholar, highly acclaimed public speaker and award-winning writer, Strayhorn is author of 10 books, more than 50 book chapters, more than 150 journal articles and many other scholarly publications. He has presented lectures around the globe.

Strayhorn maintains an active research agenda focusing on major policy issues in education: student access and achievement, equity and diversity, the impact of college on students and student learning and development. He received a bachelor's degree from the University of Virginia, a master's degree in educational policy from the Curry School of Education at UVA, and a doctorate in higher education from Virginia Tech. He is a native of Virginia Beach, Va. Known for using the hashtag #DoGoodWork on social media, Strayhorn in 2011 was named one of the country's top diversity scholars by Diverse: Issues in Higher Education, and in 2014 became the youngest full professor in Ohio State's history.

Some problems are good ones to have.

For example, up here on the Mountain we have the Mountain Goat Trail, almost five miles of smooth, nice, not-too-hilly asphalt. More and more people are using it, which is really excellent, because people are exercising, they're getting fresh air, and they're meeting other people who are doing the same.

However, because of the increasing use of the trail, we find ourselves needing rules so that everyone can use and enjoy the trail, without detracting from each other's experience. It's a bummer when you go someplace expecting to enjoy yourself and leave feeling irritated at someone or something.

After all, we have walkers, runners, casual cyclists, more serious cyclists, plus the occasional skateboarder or rollerblader. We have people in wheelchairs, parents with strollers and dogs on leashes. Everyone is sharing this outdoor resource. We all want to have a good time, without stepping on anyone else's experience.

So how do we all navigate this situation? Two things: Be alert and be considerate.

Stay to the right, pass on the left. Check ahead and behind you every so often. And—please, people—be gentle with other trail users when you come up on them from behind.

I have a friend. He's not a cyclist; he's a guy who sometimes rides a bike, if you get my drift. And he has a bell on his handlebars, that he rings loudly and often when approaching anyone who's walking in front of him on the trail. He thinks, and I agree, that it's friendlier than the standard "on your left" as well as more easily heard.

Recently as he approached an older man who was walking, he rang and rang his bell, and passed. The walker was nevertheless startled and angry when my friend went by him, because the man had earbuds in and didn't hear the bell, or the "good morning," or anything except whatever he was listening to. He furiously blamed my friend, which I think is pretty unfair.

If you insist on using earbuds, then you probably should be even more careful about staying to the right, not meandering on the trail. And be ready to be startled. Often. (There are laws in some states forbidding having both earbuds in on public roads and trails. Just saying.)

You might have the idea that being on a walking and biking path is an opportunity to cease paying attention, to stroll and think, to experience nature in a relaxing way. I understand that. But when we choose the MGT for an outing, we put ourselves in a public place where others have also chosen to be. By making that choice, we really don't have the luxury of not being clued in to what's going on around us.

The good news is, if we follow a few basic rules, then we can all share the Mountain Goat Trail—and other paths and trails—and have fun. Which is pretty much the point, isn't it?

So get out there on your bike or on foot and enjoy the trails as fall approaches. Just remember to keep an eye out for others who are doing the same, and be thoughtful.

See, swirl, smell and sip.

Hummingbird Rescue

Jennifer Roberts, a newcomer to Sewanee, contacted me on Wednesday about a hummingbird she had found who had been tangled in spider webs. Believe it or not, this makes the third hummer I have received because of web entanglement! We all learn how strong spiders' webs are, and this clearly proves it. I first revived it by feeding it sugar water that I sucked up into a straw and then slipped over the end of its beak. Seeing its long tongue flick out past its long beak is amazing. After removing all the strands of web with tweezers, the little guy got liftoff. I released it on my deck and continued to see it feeding on my begonias for several hours more. Just this week I have gotten two baby fawn calls, one about a hawk tangled in a barbed wire fence, and I received two tiny possums that were lodged in the pouch of a mother possum killed on the roadside. I am daily heartened by the efforts people in our community make to help the critters in need.

Pets of the Week

Meet Ben and Pharaoh

Animal Harbor offers these two delightful pets for adoption.

Ben is an active but mature Rat Terrier who enjoys his vermin-hunting activities as much as he enjoys playing and cuddles with his favorite people. Ben is heartworm-negative, up-to-date on shots, microchipped and neutered.

Pharaoh is so regal for a silly kitten, but he can often be found pouncing on toys or doing other less than regal activities. He is about 4-5 months old and ready for a new place to grace with his presence. Pharaoh is negative for FeLV and FIV, house-trained, up-to-date on shots, microchipped and neutered.

Every Friday is Black Friday at Animal Harbor. On Fridays, adoption fees will be reduced 50 percent for black or mostly black pets more than 4 months old who have been at Animal Harbor for more than a month. Pets adopted from Animal Harbor qualify for a free post-adoption wellness exam by local veterinarians.

Animal Harbor is now in their new shelter at 56 Nor-Nan Road, off AEDC Road, in Winchester. Call Animal Harbor at 962-4472 for information and check out the other pets at <www.animalharbor.org>. BE SAFE! OBEY THE BICYCLE HELMET LAW Tennessee law requires all persons under the age of 12 to wear a helmet while riding a bicycle on any state road. University Avenue is a state road and, therefore, subject to the law. The act also contains provisions requiring restraining seats on bicycles for passengers who are children under 40 pounds or who are less than 40" tall.

BARDTOVERSE

by Phoebe Bates

Labor Day, Monday, September 5

How do you tackle your work each day?

Are you scared of the job you find?

Do you grapple the task that comes your way
With a confident, easy mind?
Do you stand right up to the work ahead
Or fearfully pause to view it?
Do you start to toil with a sense of dread
Or feel that you're going to do it?

You can do as much as you think you can,
But you'll never accomplish more;
If you're afraid of yourself, young man,
There's little for you in store.
For failure comes from the inside first,
It's there if we only knew it,
And you can win, though you face the worst,
If you feel that you're going to do it.

Success! It's found in the soul of you,
And not in the realm of luck!
The world will furnish the work to do,
But you must provide the pluck.
You can do whatever you think you can,
It's all in the way you view it.
It's all in the start that you make, young man:
You must feel that you're going to do it.

How do you tackle your work each day?
With confidence clear, or dread?
What to yourself do you stop and say
When a new task lies ahead?
What is the thought that is in your mind?
Is fear ever running through it?
If so, just tackle the next you find
By thinking you're going to do it.
