Council Learns About “Trial” Crossing Lights

County Studied Traffic Flow Before Installation

by Leslie Lytle, Messenger Staff Writer

Joe David McBee, Franklin County highway commissioner, told the Sewanee Community Council that the new crosswalks and lights in downtown area are “a trial” at their meeting on Aug. 31.

“The crosswalks are a trial, but we hope they will be permanent,” McBee said. McBee attended the meeting to address the concerns in response to the two crosswalks and the solar warning lights installed in mid-July, one on University Avenue at the Blue Chair and Angel Park, and the other on Ball Park Road next to the Senior Citizens’ Center. The push-button style crosswalk warning lights were installed after traffic flow studies and two years of research by the Franklin County Highway Commission, McBee said.

On behalf of the Sewanee Business Alliance, council member Theresa Shackelford brought the need for a crosswalk in the Angel Park area to the council’s attention in June of 2014. Police Chief Marie Eldridge concurred, saying street-side parking posed hazards for pedestrians. After considering options, the council voted to approve a raised crosswalk and asked Eldridge to communicate the request to the highway commission.

The installation of the crosswalks and their accompanying warning lights came as a surprise to the council and the community when they were installed in July.

“Council members were at a loss to explain [to constituents] where the crosswalks came from and why,” Vice-Chancellor John McCardell said.

McBee said the Highway Department rejected the request for a raised crosswalk due to the difficulty of snow removal and the hazard to bicyclists. Stressing the need for the crosswalks, McBee said research and traffic flow studies showed motorists did not stop for pedestrians in these two locations, street-side parking often made it impossible to see children crossing, and motorists tended to speed in the area. The highway commission chose not to include an audible warning device on the crosswalks because of possible disturbance to people dining outside.

McBee said other options were considered, but the discussion and decision-making process did not take place at the public highway commission meetings.

“We want to be involved in discussions before decisions are made,” McCardell said, echoing the frustration of many council members.

McBee agreed and said, “I think communication should be better.”

Folklorist David Brose in Sewanee for Three Events

David Brose

John C. Campbell Folk School folklorist David Brose will make three presentations while in Sewanee on Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 9–10.

Brose will perform at the EQB Club on Wednesday, Sept. 9, at St. Mary’s Sewanee; the public is invited at 12:30 p.m. He will talk at the Monteagle Sewanee Rotary meeting, 8 a.m., Thursday, Sept. 10, at the Sewanee Inn. His final presentation will be at the Academy of Lifelong Learning at noon, Thursday, Sept. 10, at St. Mary’s Sewanee. (Academy dues are $12 per year or $1 per meeting.)

Although all three presentations will be different, at each event Brose will talk about the origin of the John C. Campbell Folk School and its current offerings, perform musical numbers and entertain the audiences with stories.

Brose holds a bachelor’s degree in folklore from Ohio State University and a master’s degree in ethnomusicology from Indiana University. During his folkloric fieldwork, he collected musical selections of elder masters of the banjo spanning the 1970s to today, as well as traditional music in the American West and South.

He was the state folklorist in Colorado and Iowa and has done research for the Smithsonian Institution. Brose has played banjo since 1963; has produced many videos and radio documentaries, including radio programs for NPR; and has been folklorist at the Folk School since 1991.

The John C. Campbell Folk School provides experiences in noncompetitive learning and community life that are joyful and enlivening. It is located in Brasstown, N.C., about a three-hour drive from Sewanee.

“The first folk school classes concentrated on subjects such as geography and sociology, things you would learn in a more traditional school—along with native folk art, music, dance and crafts,” Brose said. “Today, the school no longer does the geography and sociology classes, but it still teaches in the folk school tradition. Folk schools place emphasis on the oral tradition. Almost all classes are taught word-of-mouth. It’s a circular, cyclical kind of learning. In discussions, everyone has something to add.”

The school offers year-round week-long and weekend classes for adults in craft, art, music, dance, cooking, gardening, nature studies, photography and writing.

UPDATE ON FULFORD

To the Editor:

On Aug. 25 we learned the University no longer plans to demolish Fulford Hall. The administration promises to renovate the building at a reasonable cost for an as-yet-unspecified future use. We rejoice that this graceful old building has not reached the end of its life. We join alumni and friends who have contributed to the Save Fulford Hall campaign. It is with the greatest relief that we hear that Fulford will serve the University for many years to come.

Two assessments of Fulford were carried out during the summer. The first was from an engineer with 27 years experience in safety code consulting and fire protection systems. His investigation shows that Fulford is well-maintained and poses no immediate or imminent fire hazard. With attention to certain safety features, the building is capable of functioning safely in its current capacity.

Destroying Fulford Hall, however, was only one option under consideration. Removal of Fulford from its present site seems still to be on the table, which was addressed in a second assessment. The executive director of the Tennessee Historical Commission said from a historical preservation standpoint, Fulford must remain on its present site; the cost of moving Fulford would be prohibitive and would endanger its structural integrity. Removal would alter the historic context of a structure that has for 125 years stood at the epicenter of the campus and the University's history.

All of us who have been working together for the great and shared purpose of saving Fulford Hall would echo the vice-chancellor's own words: "Let's remember that the rest of the world is watching and judging."

Two events in September will celebrate Fulford Hall: a concert on campus and a poetry reading at IONA: Art Sanctuary.

Coakley to Offer DuBose Lectures Sept. 23–24

Sarah Coakley, the Norris-Hulse Professor of Divinity at Cambridge University, will deliver three lectures during the School of Theology's 2015 DuBose Lectures, Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 23–24. Coakley will offer the following lectures in Guerry Auditorium:

9 a.m., Wednesday, Sept. 23: "Return to Sacrifice? Biblical and Historical Mandates for a Messy Metaphor";

1:45 p.m., Wednesday, Sept. 23: "Repressing Sacrifice? Freudian and Feminist Critiques in a Modern Era"; and

9 a.m., Thursday, Sept. 24: "Rescuing Sacrifice? The Irreducible Significance of Sacrifice in a Théologie Totale."

The DuBose Lectures are open to the public and free of charge, made possible by the DuBose Lecture Fund.

Coakley is a systematic theologian and philosopher of religion with wide interdisciplinary interests. She is currently writing a four-volume work in systematic theology, the first volume of which ("God, Sexuality and the Self: An Essay 'On the Trinity'") was published in 2013. Her related apologetic work spans the divides between natural science, social science and philosophy of religion. In her writings for the church she is especially concerned with the tight connection of spiritual practice, asceticism and contemporary theories of gender and race.

In addition to her systematic theology, her recent publications include "Powers and Submissions" (2002), "Re-Thinking Gregory of Nyssa" (2003), "Pain and Its Transformations" (2008), "Re-Thinking Dionysius the Areopagite" (2009), "The Spiritual Senses" (2012), "Evolution, Games and God" (2013) and "The New Asceticism" (2015). The second and third volumes of her systematics are in progress as a diptych that covers the topics of theological anthropology, sin and atonement.

The annual DuBose Lectures feature prominent theologians from around the world and are based on the lectures given by William Porcher DuBose in 1911. Beginning in 1871, DuBose served the University of the South for more than 37 years in various positions and is widely regarded as being the most influential American theologian of the Episcopal Church.

Highway superintendent Johnny Woodall brought to the council's attention that many crosswalks in Sewanee were not marked with the regulation signage and had not been approved by the Highway Commission.

In 1969, the Franklin County Commission designated all roads in Sewanee as county roads, McBee said, making the county responsible for their maintenance. All signage, crosswalks and other highway markings must meet county regulations and be approved by the county. The county does not maintain and regulate roads in the incorporated communities of Cowan, Decherd and Winchester, McBee said.

Forty-eight community members have contacted McBee about the crosswalks, with only eight residents raising strong objections, he said. Some parents expressed concern the button was too high for small children to reach. State guidelines determine the height, McBee said, and smaller children should be accompanied by adults. Similarly, the button height meets compliance guidelines for ease of use by people in wheelchairs.

Council representative Barbara Schlichting asked if a "smaller, less obtrusive" design was an option, voicing a frequently overheard community complaint.

Woodall replied signage needed to be at least 30 inches by 30 inches to meet state statutes, and there were also concerns about motorists colliding with and destroying less sturdy signs.

McCardell asked for details about how long the crosswalk trial period would last, what was being tested and on what basis would it be evaluated.

McBee said a one-year trial was planned, and he intended to revisit the issue with the council in a year to determine the community's response.

"I don't think anyone objects to the crosswalks," McCardell said. "It's an aesthetic discussion."

McCardell encouraged residents to communicate their views through their council representatives and to the Sewanee Mountain Messenger. "This is the beginning rather than the end of a public discussion," he said.

In other business, the council voted to appoint Pam Byerly and Dennis Meeks as Lease Committee representatives.

Responding to a question about the traffic roundabout proposed for the intersection of University Avenue and Highway 41A, Michael Gardner, director of physical plant services, said plans were "heading away from a roundabout to a simplified intersection. The state wants to keep traffic moving." Although referred to as Highway 41A, the main highway passing through Sewanee is actually State Route 15, so it is subject to state regulation.

Schlichting reminded council representatives of the meeting with the Trustees Community Relations Committee on Oct. 14 and encouraged council representatives to be in communication with constituents so they could convey any community concerns. A community meet and greet will follow.

The council meets next on Oct. 19.

THE INSATIABLE CRITIC

by Elizabeth Ellis

The Sewanee Union Theatre is back in full swing now that a new school year has begun! This week's lineup sports everything from the wacky adventures of musical comedy to the latest installment in the Mad Max franchise that redefines the action genre as we know it. Wednesday night Cinema Guild showings are free to the public, and regular feature films are $3 for children/youth/students and $4 for adult nonstudents.

Sir Toby, The Critic's valiant sidekick: Every good critic needs a good rating system, and there's nothing on the planet more critical than cats, so one movie each week is rated from one to five Tobys. The more Tobys there are, the better it is!

The eclectic all-female a cappella group The Bellas are back, and they are taking their voices global. When the Barden University group of talented gals find themselves humiliated at Lincoln Center, they decide they are going to come back even stronger by winning an international competition that no American team has ever won. The most entertaining part is watching how the vastly different personality types within the group riff off one another, with Australian actress Rebel Wilson continuing to steal the show as self-titled "Fat Amy," with her no-nonsense approach to her plus-size self. Elizabeth Banks, better known as Effie Trinket in the Hunger Games films, returns to direct. Her passion for boosting young women's self esteem by showing ladies of all shapes and personalities supporting each other is apparent. With energetic musical numbers and plenty of girl power to go around, it is a fun feature for tweens and adults alike. Rated PG-13 for innuendo and some strong language, it proves to be a strong second act.

The Man Who Would Be King

7:30 p.m., Wednesday, September 9
1975 • Rated PG • 129 minutes

Based on the story of the same name by British author Rudyard Kipling, it is a classic tale of the hubris of men leading to their downfall. Sean Connery and Michael Caine play Daniel Dravot and Peachy Carnehan, two cocksure British soldiers who resign from the British Army to conquer Kafiristan, a historical region that covered part of what is now present-day Afghanistan. Christopher Plummer makes a memorable appearance playing Kipling himself. Through trickery and deception, Dravot is soon crowned king of Kafiristan, but the two men soon realize to their horror that one can't fool the locals for long. The expert camera work of the sweeping exotic landscapes are par for the course for director John Huston, whose work also includes the cinematic masterpiece "The Maltese Falcon" starring Humphrey Bogart. Parents should be advised despite "stiff upper lip" British humor of much of the film, scenes of war violence in the second half of the film may not be suitable for very young children.

Mad Max: Fury Road

7:30 p.m., Thursday–Sunday, Sept. 10–13
2015 • Rated R • 120 minutes

This sweeping epic, planned over the course of 12 years, raises the bar for the future of action films. Since its release in theaters this spring, it has already climbed to number 109 in IMDb.com's top 250 films of all time and has Oscar buzz written all over it.

Australian director George Miller returns viewers to the rust-colored dystopian land of Max, with fully-realized characters that have complex emotions behind their chrome-encrusted, gasoline-powered war machines. Charlize Theron gives the performance of her career as Imperator Furiosa, a one-armed general who betrays the patriarchal government she serves to liberate women being treated as "breeders" for its nefarious leader Immortan Joe. Immortan Joe, who is hell-bent on creating the perfect male heir to continue his rotten legacy, is played with a no-holds-barred ferocity by Hugh Keays-Byrne, who played the villain Toecutter in the 1979 Mad Max.

Furiosa's heart is as massive as her big rig, and after a nasty confrontation with Max (stoically played by Tom Hardy) he agrees to join forces with Furiosa on her quest to find her motherland and get the women to safety and freedom. Very little of the film involves special effects: many of the jaw-dropping stunts involved were done by real people using elaborate set pieces, true grit and plenty of practice. The film literally puts pedal to the metal and doesn't stop until the heart-pounding conclusion, racing across the murderously hot Namib Desert that stretches more than 30,000 miles across the southwestern length of South Africa. The film takes its R-rating seriously: its unflinching violence and some disturbing images inspire viewership of teens and adults only.

SAS Gallery Hosts New Show

St. Andrew's-Sewanee Gallery is pleased to welcome the work of David Andrews and Judith Condon now through Oct. 1. A reception celebrating their exhibition will be at the SAS Gallery, 4–6 p.m., Sunday, Sept. 27.

Condon earned a bachelor's degree in drawing and painting from the University of Georgia and a master's degree in drawing and ceramics from the University of Tennessee. Condon lives in Chattanooga, where she maintains a ceramics studio, raises two children, and teaches art at the Baylor School.

David Andrews began photographing in high school. Rather than going to a traditional four-year university, Andrews worked for two years in Ireland and then studied for another two years in Germany. This transition from the familiar to foreign forever changed the way he reads, listens and sees.

Andrews and Condon will each offer a day-long workshop on Saturday, Sept. 26. For details and to register please contact SAS Gallery Director Molly Schaefer at 598-5651, extension 3151, or email <sasgallery@sasweb.org>.

DJ Spooky Talk and Concert Sept. 11–12

Paul D. Miller (aka DJ Spooky) will present his multimedia talk "Sound Unbound" at 4:30 p.m., Friday, Sept. 11, in Convocation Hall. The event will be followed by a reception.

This talk is in conjunction with the University Art Gallery's opening exhibit, "Ice Music" by Miller. Inspired by his voyages to the Antarctic and Arctic, Miller remixes data of all kinds to forge connections between science, music, art, history, politics and film in a creative response to the urgent environmental and political challenges of climate change.

As part of the Sewanee Performing Arts Series, Miller will perform his multimedia concert "Arctic Rhythms" at 7:30 p.m., Saturday, Sept. 12, in Guerry Auditorium. He will be accompanied by Katherine Lehman and Carolyn Huebl on violin, Christine Kim on cello, and Jim Grosjean on viola. Tickets are available online at <www.sewanee.edu/performingarts>.

Miller is an established composer, disk jockey, multimedia artist and author.

He travels around the world performing solo, with chamber groups and with orchestras, while giving talks at universities, museums and conferences. His DJ Mixer app has had more than 12 million downloads. In 2012–13, he was the first artist-in-residence at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City. He is also the executive editor of Origin magazine. His book "The Imaginary App" was published by MIT Press in 2014. National Geographic named Miller a National Geographic Emerging Explorer 2014–15.

Sewanee's University Art Gallery is located on Georgia Avenue. The gallery is free, accessible and open to the public.

AngelFest is organized and sponsored by Joseph's Remodeling Solutions. For the full schedule of activities go to <www.sewaneeangelfest.blogspot.com>. SAS Middle School Soccer Action

North Middle School

On Sept. 1, the St. Andrew's-Sewanee middle school girls' soccer team lost to North Middle School, 3-0.

The Mountain Lions started the game well, stringing together multiple passes and dominating play for the first 15 minutes of the match, when North broke through SAS's defense and scored two quick goals.

The second half was a battle, with both teams creating scoring opportunities. Then, with 10 minutes remaining, North scored its final goal. Despite the loss, midfielders Anna Post and Lauren Ostrowski had standout games. SAS tallied seven shots to North's nine, and maintained possession of the ball 60 percent of the time.

The Mountain Lions are back in action at home on Sept. 8 at 4:30 p.m. against Liberty Middle School.

Community Middle School

The SAS girls' middle school soccer team played a hard-fought battle on Aug. 27 against Community Middle School that ended in a 0-0 tie.

SAS goalkeeper Sarah Beth Hobby showed great composure and earned five saves. The team played intense defense, organized by center backs Cate Bachman and Sarah Grace Burns. Other strong performances came from center midfielders and team workhorses Adeline Smith, Anna Post and Katie Finn Hurst, who did a great job pressuring Community's back line.

"Our improvement from our first game was tenfold," said SAS coach Margot Burns. "We did a great job playing collective defense and fought hard for every ball."

Westwood Middle School

In the opening match of the season on Aug. 25, the SAS girls' middle school soccer team fell to Westwood Middle School, 7-0.

Despite the loss, the team showed improvement. Newcomers Riley Burnette and Sophia Carlos played with tenacity, and eighth-grade captain Cate Bachman pushed to organize the defense. Jenna Black worked hard to organize the midfield.

SAS middle school play from earlier this year.

SAS players Lexie Laurendine (center) and Sierra Mushett (far right) earned spots on the all-tournament team in the volleyball tournament at Berean Academy.

SAS Volleyball Team Challenges for Tourney Championship

St. Andrew's-Sewanee School's varsity volleyball team lost in the championship match on Aug. 29 to Berean Academy in the Berean Academy Volleyball Tournament, 20-25, 25-21, 25-17 and 25-15.

In round-robin play, SAS lost to Berean, 25-22 and 25-20; defeated Chattanooga School of Arts and Science, 25-19 and 25-12; and defeated the Chattanooga Warriors, 25-18 and 25-17.

SAS players Lexie Laurendine and Sierra Mushett were selected to the all-tournament team. For the tournament, Laurendine had 32 kills, seven blocks, 12 aces and 28 assists; Lydia Angus had six aces and 13 kills; Madison Gilliam posted six aces and 18 digs; Mushett had 50 assists and 18 kills; Skylar Moss had 18 digs and four aces; Sophie Swallow posted six kills; and Carolyn Bruce had eight blocks and eight kills.

Girls Lead SAS Cross Country

The St. Andrew's-Sewanee School cross country runners competed on Sept. 1 at Warren County.

The varsity and middle school girls led the charge in a very good showing. For the varsity team, Lea-Sophie Schiemann placed fifth out of more than 40 runners with a time of 25 minutes, 12 seconds. Sophia Patterson finished seventh with a time of 25:36.

For the middle school, sixth-grader Cecilia Schutz finished second in 19:36. Abi Cassell was third with a time of 19:34. The cross country race was the first-ever for both girls.

On the boys' side, Mustafe Axmed finished 13th out of 63 varsity runners with a time of 20:29. He was followed by Isaac Tang (22 minutes), Lachlan Hassman (29), Andreas Forsyth (35), James Pitts (41) and Oscar Jing (61).

For the middle school, Porter Neubauer led the way with an eighth-place finish among more than 30 runners. Alex Brewster (14), Nathan King (17), Cameron Weaver (18) and Rhys Fricker (19) finished out the scoring. SAS will host a meet on Sept. 8, with the varsity starting at 4 p.m. and the middle school at 5 p.m.

Red Bank Trips SAS in Varsity Soccer

The St. Andrew's-Sewanee varsity girls' soccer team played Red Bank High School on Aug. 27 in Chattanooga.

The SAS girls came out strong: seven minutes into the first half, senior Isabel Butler possessed the ball up top and took a good shot that bounced off the cross bar. Red Bank responded with a breakaway down the middle of the field. SAS sophomore Katie Giltner saved a goal after the ball bounced off a sliding save by sophomore goalie Rachel Alvarez.

Five minutes left in the half, SAS set up a corner kick: freshman Mariel Rink crossed the ball into junior Kyra Wilson for a one-touch volley into the back of the net.

Red Bank managed a goal after a breakaway. A few minutes later, Alvarez rushed to stop a breakaway from the Red Bank forward and slid to save another goal. She left the match with an injury, and shortly after, SAS surrendered a goal off a rebound. Red Bank went on to win, 2-1.

Mountain Lions Rally in Home Golf Meet

The St. Andrew's-Sewanee School golf team bounced back on Aug. 27 to win, following a disappointing finish three days earlier at Fall Creek Falls Golf Course. After dropping the Fall Creek Falls match to Grundy County High School, the Mountain Lions defeated Grundy, Franklin and Bledsoe counties at the Course at Sewanee. SAS outpaced second-place Franklin County by eight strokes, 165 to 173, and Grundy by 10 strokes.

Hannah Powell and Tommy Oliver bolstered the team with exceptional play, shooting 39 and 35 respectively. Jake Wiley showed great perseverance with a 44, and Aubrey Black posted a steady 47. Gio Hui rounded out the team with a 49.

Emory Squeezes Past Sewanee Women's Soccer

An early goal by Cristina Ramirez helped visiting Emory University to a 1-0 victory over the Sewanee women's soccer team on Sept. 1 at Puett Field.

The Eagles' Ramirez scored with just under 11 minutes off the clock in the first half. That would be the difference offensively, as Sewanee managed only three shots. All three were in the second half.

Emory limited Sewanee to one corner while leading in shots, 12-3.

Despite allowing an early goal, Sewanee goalkeeper Olivia Glascoe played well, with 10 saves.

The Tigers will now step outside NCAA Division III action for a battle with NCAA Division II scholarship program Trevecca on Sept. 5 in Nashville.

The fall webworms seem to be particularly conspicuous this year, reports Yolande Gottfried. These are the creatures responsible for the large webs or tents seen enveloping branches and extending to the ends of them. They are the larvae of a small (about one inch) white moth in the Tiger and Wasp Moth group. The somewhat similar and perhaps more familiar Eastern Tent Caterpillars appear only in the spring and build their tents in the crotches of trees.

Fall webworms can be found on more than 400 species of woody plants, but locally they seem to favor sourwoods, especially on the edges of roads and fields. At this stage of their lives, they are feeding at night and resting in their webs during the day, where masses of them may be seen amid their frass (droppings) and dead leaves. Soon they will leave their webs to overwinter as pupae in cocoons on the ground. Healthy trees usually recover from the defoliation caused by these webworms without permanent damage.

Due to technical difficulties with the weather station, statistics are unavailable.

New Storm Drain Markers

New storm drain markers have been installed on Sewanee roads to raise awareness about water quality issues in the area, report Martin Knoll and Kevin Hiers. Knoll is a professor of forestry and geology at Sewanee; Hiers is the University's director of environmental stewardship.

Storm drains divert surface runoff from the streets into local streams such as Abbo's Alley and Shakerag Hollow during larger rain events. Any litter and contaminants from automobiles, fertilizers and pesticides may make their way into area waterways during these storms.

Knoll said to look for 4-inch diameter markers with a stream name placed immediately adjacent to storm drains to find out into which stream the drain empties.

This endeavor is sponsored by the department of forestry and geology and the Office of Environmental Stewardship and Sustainability, with permission from the Franklin County Highway Department.

BARDTOVERSE

by Phoebe Bates

Labor Day, September 7, 2015

I hear America singing, the varied carols I hear,
This of mechanics, each one singing his as it should be blithe and strong,
The carpenter singing his as he measures his plank or beam,
The mason singing his as he makes ready for work, or leaves off work,
The boatman singing what belongs to him in his boat, the deck hand singing on the steamboat deck
The shoemaker singing as he sits on his bench, the hatter singing as he stands,
The woodcutter's song, the ploughboy's on his way in the morning, or at noon intermission or at sundown,
The delicious singing of the mother, or of the young wife at work,
or of the girl sewing or washing,
Each singing what belongs to him or her and to none else,
The day what belongs to the day --at night the party of young fellows, robust, friendly,
Singing with open mouths their strong melodious songs.

—“I Hear America Singing” by Walt Whitman (1819–1892)
