Meiburg to Discuss New Book

Jonathan Meiburg, C'97, will have a conversation with Prof. David Haskell about Meiburg's new book, "A Most Remarkable Creature: The Hidden Life and Epic Journey of the World's Smartest Birds of Prey." After graduating with a major in English and a minor in Religious Studies, Meiburg traveled to the Falkland Islands on a Watson Fellowship, where he first encountered the caracara. Since then, he has earned an M.A. in geography and written and performed music with several bands, including Shearwater and Loma. This book, in progress for several years, draws together the humanities, the arts, and the sciences in a way that will appeal to Sewanee students from a wide range of academic disciplines. Through a focus on a particular species, it raises questions about what evoas human beings in a changing climate. As Anna Morris writes for NPR, "Meiburg's voice is poetic; where other nature writers are known for the images they paint of landscapes, here are presented impressions, concepts as complex as species' movements over geologic time, in a way that is at once clear and beautiful." Publisher's Weekly calls the book an "enthralling debut" that lifts Meiburg "to the top ranks of science writers.'

This event is co-sponsored by the departments of Biology, English, and Music; Environmental Arts and Humanities; the Sewanee Integrated Program in the Environment; and the University Lectures Committee, and will take place via Zoom at 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, Sept. us/j/81048187048>.

'Urgent Archives: Enacting Liberatory Memory Work' Webinar

compelling voices in archival theory today. "Urgent Archives: Enacting We interviewed many families, and this is sort of the collective story Liberatory Memory Work" will be at 6 p.m. CDT, Wednesday, Sept. 15, via Zoom < https://sewanee-edu.zoom.us/j/87312984909 >

Caswell's talk is grounded in the emerging field of critical archival studies and based on more than a decade of ethnographic work building community archives sites. She contends that traditional archival practices at major university and institutional repositories are designed to marginalize and oppress minoritized communities. Caswell advocates for alternative methods and practices that members of such communities can use to create independent archives that build ties within communities and disrupt historic cycles of oppression. Archives are not and cannot be neutral, Caswell argues. Instead of trying to make them so, we should focus on making archives catalysts of liberation in the present.

Through this program, we hope to gain insight into how liberal arts colleges in the American South can promote diversity and inclusion by partnering with members of historically marginalized communities of color to collect, preserve and give voice to their histories and experiences.

Michelle Caswell is Associate Professor of Archival Studies in the Department of Information Studies at the University of California Los Angeles. She co-founded the South Asian American Digital Archive and is author of "Urgent Archives: Enacting Liberatory Memory Work"

"This place is old, but it's still new. Every generation adds something new to it. These stories are constantly evolving. I wanted to tell the story of how it's a story of past and present and passing on that tradition of love and community.

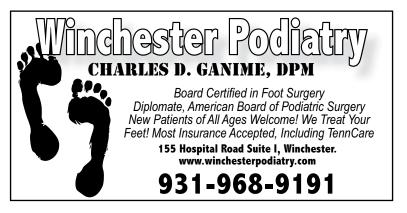

Stewart added that in a year of isolation and time spent away from the larger Sewanee community, this story is particularly poignant.

This was a wonderful COVID project. There were so many negative feelings associated during that time, and it was so wonderful to work on something that was positive and something that brought people together. This is a story that I think — you may not belong to the Assembly, but if you belong somewhere, you can relate to this story. If you have connections, you can relate to this book," Stewart said.

Wheeler said that despite the stories being about different things, each of them have a universal message.

'SOMOS' Exhibit at the UAG

The University Art Gallery (UAG) is delighted to present "SOMOS" by multimedia artist Edgar Reyes, on view in the UAG through Oct. 15.

In "Somos," the personal and specific become communal. Images of loved ones and remembered places are filtered, layered and abstracted. Printed on chiffon or canvas, the images float in the air or drape the wall. Places and people from the past are honored, held on to, and shared. In other pieces, vividly colored abstractions repeat motifs drawn from traditional Mesoamerican artwork, or present new patterns representative of a common experience. Images of plants, native and non-native, cultivated in a family garden or at large agricultural scale weave through the exhibition, emblematic of displacement and exploitation, but also of known local artist. The show will home and resilience.

Reyes will present his work in conversation with Assistant Professor of Depot. The community is invited Spanish Lucía García-Santana at 5 p.m., Thursday, Sept. 30, in Guerry

The Modern Woman: Music from Austria and Germany

The 1910s and 20s nurtured the rapid expansion of musical possibilities in the linked cities of Vienna and Berlin. Join Kerry Ginger and Bernadette Lo in a performance exploring the contributions of women to this period's innovative vocal music, from its romantic musical origins to its modernist flourishing and beyond.

The concert is at 3 p.m., Sunday, Sept. 26, at McCrory Hall on the campus of St. Andrew's-Sewanee School. Admission is free. Audience masking will be required.

ANGELWITH

Value Added

Dear Angel,

Where've you been? Perhaps you've been working on the new University Values I've been hearing about. If so, could you enlighten me on one of them? I understand Community, Inquiry, and Courage, but what is Flourishing, pray tell? And how can I do this thing? Sincerely,

Dearest Value Added,

The Four Values of the University were crafted by committee and have no relationship to the Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse, who are currently holed up in an Airbnb near the Equestrian Center waiting for the signal to ride (though Plague was already spotted at last Saturday night's ragin' SNU party).

As you rightly note, the first three values: Community, Inquiry, and Courage are self-explanatory, but Flourishing needs some unpacking. At its most basic, it is a flour-y verb that means to thrive and grow, sort of like the Delta variant is flourishing in states with a high percentage of unvaccinated people, as well as in states whose governors care nothing for human life.

But it can also mean waving [something] around to attract the attention of others, and the example provided when you Google the word reads, "Happy New Year! he yelled, flourishing a bottle of whiskey." There are frequent illustrations of this definition on campus, as evidenced on Saturday night when Plague yelled, "Come and get it, bro!", flourishing a viral load at the SNU house.

Some folks in town call this value "the new F-word," and this fbomb gets dropped so frequently that one first-year student opined that if they hear anyone say "flourishing" again, they will transfer.

According to the Oxford English Dictionary, Flourish, as a noun, means a "literary or rhetorical embellishment; ambitious copiousness or amplification; parade of fine words or phrases; a florid expression." The act of parading this "florid expression" around as a value without providing the means for everyone in the community to actually thrive is like putting lipstick on a pig; it's a pretty word, but there's no real value added.

> Yours, Angel

Two-Wheeler

Dear Angel,

This year I brought a bike to school in order to avoid getting the costly parking tickets I received last year every time I parked my car on campus. But what the hey? When I ride down University Avenue, the alleged bike lanes are filled with parked and un-ticketed cars, and I have to ride in the middle of the road, risking my life. What's a cyclist to do?

Dear Two-Wheeler,

The bike lanes on University Avenue are less a dedicated space on the road for cyclists and more of an abstraction, an ideal vision. When you see the image of the bicycle in the bike lane with an arrow indicating the correct direction, you may see a safe place for you to ride, but art is subjective. Others may see this as a symbol for a parking space, or as a sign that they should drive over a bicycle if they see it in that lane. Who's to say what the artist really meant?

As for the cars that randomly park in the bike lanes on University Avenue not getting ticketed, don't worry. This is just a teaser, an SPD lure. By not ticketing the cars for the first week or so of school, the SPD increases drivers' confidence that they can park anywhere, anytime, without consequence, thus ensuring a bumper crop of tickets on a day when everyone is late for class or can't wait to hit the panini grill at McClurg. Parking violation fines are the meat and potatoes of the University's endowment. Without parking tickets, how could Sewanee afford to pay the salaries of those officers who give you the parking tickets? Without parking tickets, how could Sewanee afford to maintain the high quality of education you receive? They are a necessary evil, and they will appear on windshields near you in due time.

Women's Soccer Registers Another Clean Sheet

The University of the South women's soccer team finished the opening week of competition with three straight clean sheets, as the Purple and White blanked Mount St. Joseph University, 2-0, Sunday afternoon from Schueler Field.

It did not take long for the Tigers to get on the board. In the 12th minute, Paige Rupp passed the ball to Brianna Fee for her first goal of her collegiate career.

Almost 11 minutes later, after a Tiger corner kick, Bea Richardson found Fee's pass for her first goal of 2021 to give the Purple and White a 2-0 lead.

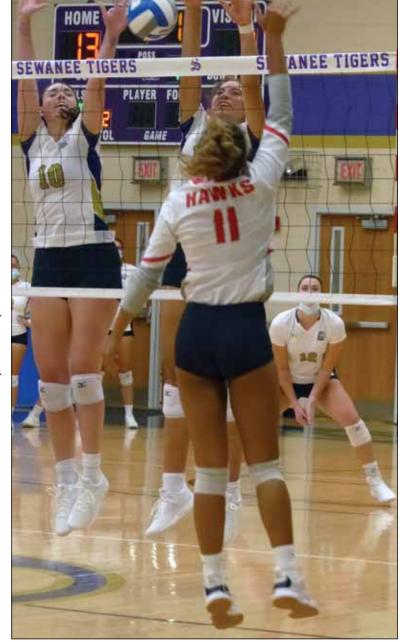

The score would hold as MSJ was out-shot by Sewanee, 14-8, and 9-4 on goal.

It was an amazing week for the Purple and White, as they start the season with three straight clean

Olivia Rhodes led Sewanee with our total shots, three on-target.

Fee totaled three points on the day with a goal and assist and added three shots. Additionally, Gabby Elve also had three shots off the bench.

Hanna Judycki (1-0) started and layed the first half while Abby ones played in goal for the second half. Each keeper totaled two saves

Fungi

This seems to be a season of fungi. I keep noting new and interesting kinds on almost any walk. On a recent hike down the trail to Lake Dimmick, we saw numerous Shaggy-stalked Boletes. This was unusually easy to identify for a fungus, suggested and confirmed on iNaturalist, due to its long and indeed shaggy stalk and color of its cap. Other boletes, like the large reddish or brown ones that appear around our house, are harder to be sure of except that they are boletes. In this group of fungi, if you look at the lower surface of the cap, you see that these do not have gills, as many mushrooms do, but pores looking like a rather spongy mass full of small openings of tubes in which the spores are produced. As with all mushrooms, they are the fruiting bodies of an organism whose great mass that lies underground is called a mycelium and made of uncountable thread-like structures called hyphae. Fungi are neither plants nor animals and are now placed in their own kingdom. Molds are also fungi, and there is a special "bolete mold," so many of the boletes we are seeing are themselves being consumed by gray and green and white coverings of this mold. Fun factoid: the word fungi, according to my Webster's, can be pronounced with a hard or soft "g" but always with a long "i."

Ashlynn

Pets of the Week

Meet Ashlynn & Keith

One-year-old calico cat Ashlynn must have been a baker in her former life because she continuously makes biscuits on everything she can. She loves a good game of peek-a-boo and her stumpy little tail bounces like a bunny while she does it. She's a sucker for affection and loves to give kisses in return by gently pressing her front teeth to your hand. This kitty is a gorgeous patchwork of various colors and patterns with long legs and an adorable bobtail to top it off. This former stray is looking for a home with lots of soft things to knead and a human to love on forever. Ashlynn is up-to-date on vaccinations, FIV/FeLV negative, spayed, and microchipped. If you are interested in adopting her, make sure to submit an adoption application at <www.animalharbor.org>.

One-vear-old hound mix Ke mans more than you could even imagine. Playful and sweet, with a cute funny grin-that's Keith. He came to us from Franklin County Animal Control after he'd been hit by a car. He couldn't put weight on his leg for a while from the pain. Veterinary X-rays showed no broken bones, but what he did need was a ton of staff patience and time to heal. Animal Harbor staff performed physical therapy on him to build strength back, and he's now romping and playing with the other dogs. With love, patience, and close care Keith is almost 100 percent back to normal. We couldn't be happier for his journey of healing. Now are you ready to completely heal his heart and bring him home to love forever? Keith is up-to-date on vaccinations, heartworm-negative, neutered, and microchipped. If you are interested in adopting Keith, make sure to submit an adoption application at <www.animalĥarbor.org>.

PEDESTRIANS and BIKERS – EXERCISE CAUTION!

When you are out getting your exercise, following a few simple rules will keep you on the go. When biking on Sewanee sidewalks, cyclists should slow down when passing pedestrians since some may not hear a warning bike bell and know to step to the right. Walkers should walk on the left-hand side of the road, traveling against the traffic; bicyclers should travel in the right-hand lane, going with the flow of traffic. During the day, both walkers and bikers should wear clothing of bright, easily seen colors, and, from dusk on, wear light, reflective clothing. In any case, don't just assume drivers can see you. Be on the lookout ... for your own safety.
